THE NINTH CENSUS.

THE PACIFIC STATES.

The Population and Progress of California, Nevada, and Oregon-The City of San Fran-The enumeration of the population of the three Pacific States has been completed, and the returns made public.

California. The population of California increased very rapidly after the opening of the gold mines in 1848, and in 1850, the year the State Government was formed, it reached 92,597, including 963 colored persons, but not including any Indians or half-breeds. In 1860, the population reached 379 994-an increase of 287,397, or 310-37 per cent. Included in the returns of 1860 were 323,177 whites, 4086 colored, 34,933 Asiatics, and 17,798 Indians. In 1866, the population of the State was 470,597, and the returns of the recent census place it at 506,613-an increase since 1860 of 126,619, or 33 32 per cent. Of this increase, almost three-quarters is credited to The City of San Francisco.

The first census of San Francisco was taken by State authority in 1852, and showed a population of 34,776. In 1860 the population was 56,803-an increase in eight years of 23,036, or 63'36 per cent. According to the recent census, the city has now a population of 150,361-an increase in ten years of 93,559, or 164.71 per cent. The recent returns classify the population as follows:-

White maks femoles	75,924 61,577 ——137,491
Calnese males	9,777 2,040
Colored males	626 468=
Indians	April 1
AggregateNevnda.

The first enumeration of the population of Novada was in 1860, when it reached 6857, including 6813 whites and 45 colored persons. In addition to these, 10,507 Indians were also enumerated, making a total of 17,364. The population, by the recent returns, is now 41,866-an increase since 1860 of 24,502, or 141:11 per cent.

Oregon.

The first enumeration of the population of Oregon was in 1850, when it reached 13,294. In 1860, Washington Territory having meanwhile been constituted out of a portion of it, the population numbered 52,465-an increase in ten years of 39,171, or 294.65 per cent. By the recent census, the population now amounts to $1,059-an increase since 1860 of 23,594, or 54.50

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

Opening Night at the Chesnut. Mr. E. L. Davenport was greeted by a wellfilled house last night, on the occasion of his assuming the active management of the Chesnut Street Theatre, and in the general excellence of the performance, as well as in a brief speech delivered before the curtain, he gave assurance that every effort will be made during the balance of the season to present a series of entertainments that will merit the cordial support of the public. The play last night was As You Like It, one of Shakespeare's most happlly titled performances, and one of the freshest and most graceful emanations of his fancy. The scene is laid anywhere or nowhere, for the Forest of Arden is a delightful no-man'sland, where the most improbable things are done in the most probable manner; and the play, if it defies logic and rules, is redolent of the most graceful poetry, the brightest wit, and the most genial humor. There is no plot worth speaking of, but there is a rich contrast of character, and if the poet has etherealized human nature, he has not forgotten that humanity in dream land must be essentially human still. It is astonishing how bright and fresh the humor of this comedy is to-day, not merely to the closet admirer and student of Shakespeare, but to the average playgoer whose knowledge of the "divine Williams" is limited to what he sees before the footlights. To judge from the hearty laughter and applause that greeted the performance last evening, As You Like It has as much entertainment in it for a modern American audience as it had three hundred years ago for the assembly that witnessed its first production at the Globe Theatre, London, under the personal supervision of the popular author and manager William Shakespeare. The texture of As You Like It is fine that it would seem to essential for an even moderately satisfactory representation that the different characters should be sustained by actors of semething more than average excellence. The cast at the Chesnut last night, however, was not a very strong one, and yet the performance passed off smoothly and with much better effect than many a play has done with a more pretentious array of talent. Evidences of good management were everywhere apparent, and as the success of a theatrical company depends quite as much upon all hands pulling together as it does upon the talent of individual members, we take the performance of last evening as a happy augury for the future of the Chesnut under its present management.

The part of "Rosalind" was sustained by Mrs. Scott-Siddons, who appeared to very much better advantage than she did at the Academy of Music last season. This lady has improved during the past year, but she is still far from being a thoroughly good actress. She will persist in singing when she ought to talk, and she frequently runs her words together in such a manner as to be perfectly unintelligible. These are such palpable, faults, and they interfere so decidedly with the success of Mrs. Siddons' performances, that it is a great pity she does not make an effort to reform them altogether. Mrs. Siddons, however, has so many personal 'attractions: her eyes are so very black and lustrous, her actions so graceful, and her voice so musical that she would still be attractive if she were a much worse actress than she really is. Making allowance for all its deficiencies, her "Rosalind" last evening was a very charming performance. She realized admirably all the brightness, the freshness, and the graceful humor of the character, and if as an artistic conception her "Rosalind" fell below that of some other artists. it was marked by qualities of its own that rendered it in the highest degree acceptable to the andience.

Of the personation of the melancholy "Jacques" of Mr. E. L. Davenport we have nothing but praise to utter. No actor on the stage equals this gentleman in ability to interpret the finer elements of Shakespeare's poetry, and his delivery of "All the world's a stage," last evening, was itself a rare treat. Mr. Charles R. Thorne, as "Orlando," made a very favorable impression, although he was laboring under a severe cold, which interfered to a great extent with the success of his impersonation. He has a broad, free style that in many parts ought to be very effective, and we anticipate | street.

that he will prove a valuable member of the company. Miss Lily Vining Davenport personated "Cella" creditably, especially in the early scenes of the play. Towards the last, however, she rather lacked animation. To a very large part of the audience the hero of the occasion was Mr. James Mace, who represented "Charles," the wrestler. Mr. Mace has a splendid physique, and he is entitled to the credit of filling the minor role assigned him in an eminently satisfactory manner. Of his elocution we cannot speak in very elaborate terms of commendation, but he managed the wrestling match remarkably well, and allowed Mr. Charles Thorne to give him a tumble that looked very much like the genuine article. The representatives of the other parts did not sufficiently rise above or fall below mediocrity to require extended comment. We cannot avoid, however, recommending to Mr. George Melkiff, who personated the "Banished Duke," to mend his elocution and pronunciation, and we feel constrained to inform Mr. Julius Constant, who assumed the part of the courtier "Le Beau," that he made a fearful mess of it. At the conclusion of the performance Mr. Davenport was called before the curtain, and he made a brief speech, in which he alluded to the difficulties attending his assumption of the management of a theatre in the middle of a season, his trouble in collecting a competent company and his prospects for success. The most noteworthy feature of his speech, however, was the straightforward and manly protest which be made against immoral performances. He said that he wished it distinctly to be understood that no immoral dramas will be produced at the Chesput while it is under his management, and he characterized many of the performances that have occupied the stage of late years as disgraceful to the managers who produced them, to the actors who performed them, and to the public who patronized them. They were insulting to art and decency, and he would rather lose a fortune than win one by such means. These words have the right ring about them, and Mr. Davenport has always stood so high, not only as an actor but as a gentleman, that we have a right to believe he means exactly what he says. If he conducts the Chesnut on the principle he has laid down he will deserve the heartiest support from the public, and he will do much to reform
