belped. Two juries have officiated in his case, and no doubt these juries thought they were giving Mr. Ohnmacht his deserts. One of them gave him a cent in cash, and the other gave him a place in the State's prison for one year. During the year of his incar-ceration he can muse upon the differ-ence between $10,000 and one cent. He will need no money while at Frankfort, for they board prisoners there free of cost as long as they remain. He could have no use for the $10,000 damages in his prison, unless, as face-tiously remarked by the counsel for the defense in the argument of the case, it had been his pur-

in the argument of the case, it had been his pur-pose to establish a kind of aristocratic way of living in the State's Prison. It is not likely that the result of this litiga-tion will fall to convince Mr. Ohnmacht that it does not not be been and the litigation of the litigation of the state of the s does not pay to bring suits for libel against does not pay to bring suits for fibel against newspapers. It is a very difficult thing to get a judgment against a newspaper for an article published in the way of news, and evidently not intended to be malicious. Newspapers have a hard enough time in getting their news items without being prosecuted for libel when they happen to make a mistake. In this instance the Courier-Journal, very promotily on the happen to make a mistake. In this instance the Courier-Journal, very promptly, on the following day, without being asked, corrected the charge of murder, and this ought to have satisfied the plaintiff. But he would not be satisfied. He wanted money, and for money he went. He saw $10,000 like a golden vision beautiful to look upon, which conducted him into the court-honse. He now knows what it is to have a golden dream concerning a newspaper, and what it is to reduce that dream to a reality through the verdict of a jury. If he is satis-fied with the war he has thus waged upon the Courier-Journal, we doubt not that the Courier-Journal is contented also. And when he gets his one cent damages and serves out his one year in the penitentiary, we hope he will have a better opinion of newspapers than he seems to have had when he brought his suit.

TRAGEDY AT SEA.

A Story of Misery and Murder-The Steward of an American Bark Charged with Waatonly Shooting an Austrian Sallor.

Six months ago an Austrian seaman, name unknown, shipped on board the American wark the Ellen O. Feeney, bound for various ports in South America. The vessel returned to this port on Wednesday, and during the cruise of six months, according to the statements of several of the crew, the Austrian seaman was brutally murdered at sea by the steward of the vessel, David Leech.

MAN'S INHUMANITY TO MAN.

The story, as narrated by the crew, is in sub-stance as follows:—The murdered man, being an Austrian and not speaking English well, in some way earned the displeasure of the captain of the Feeney and the two mates. They vented their brutality on him in every way, beating bim with belaying-pins and capstan-bars on the elightest provocation, and frequently without any cause whatever. The vessel arrived at the port of Montevideo about the 7th of August last, and was becalmed some miles outside the har-bor, where she rode at anchor. Another Ameri-can vessel, the Edward, was anchored near her. THE MURDER.

The unfortunate Austrian was in his bunk sick, on the morning of the Sth of August, when the second mate dragged him out of his berth in the forecastle, and set him at work "holy-stoning" the deck and cleaning the brass work on the ship. On the morning of the 10th, "Jack" was cleaning some brasses on the quarterdeck, when the mates seleed him and erdeck, when flung him down the short ladder to the main deck, where they beat and kicked him in a tearful manner. The poor sailor staggered to his feet, and falling against the long-boat of the vessel, caught hold of the davit-ropes for support. At that moment it is alleged that David Leech rushed out of the cook's galley with a cocked revolver in his hand, and, without a word of warning, fired at "Jack," who fell to the ceck, shot through the head, and died two hours after. Immediately after shooting the seaman, Leech and the captain of the Feeney rowed to the Edward, where Leech remained The body of the murdered man was then sewed up in a hammock and taken ashore for secret burial, none of the crew being allowed to go on shore lest they should inform the authorities of Montevideo. When the body of the murdered man was interred, Leech returned to the Feeney, and the vessel sailed for this port, and, arriving arriving on Wednesday, anchor d off Martin's stores, near Fulton Ferry, Brooklya. ARREST OF THE OFFICERS. The crew on being discharged lost no time in informing the authorities of the murder, and United States Commissioner Shields issued warrants for the arrest of Leech, the mates and captain of the Feeney, and also for the captain or the Edward, which vessel had also arrived at this port. The warrants were placed in the hands of Deputy Marshals Crowley and Pur-vess, who arrested Thomas Ward, the second vess, who arrested Thomas Ward, the second mate of the Feeney, at the sailors' lodging-house No. 37 Cherry street, and David Leech, the steward, on board of the vessel. The prisoners were arraigned before Commissioner Shields yesterday and held for examination. They say that the shooting was done in self-defence and in the performance of their duty as officers of the vessel. The captains of the Feenew and Edward with the first mate of the Feeney and Edward, with the first mate or the Feeney, will no doubt be arrested to-day, as the officers are on their track. Five of the erew are detained as witnesses in the case in Ludlow Street Jall .- N. Y. World, to-day.

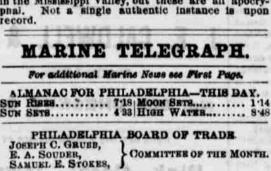

INDIAN RELICS IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Interesting Relics Near Monongahela City.

Interesting Relics Near Menengahela City. Recent examinations of pre-historic remains found on a farm near Monongahela city, Pennsylvania, re-veal some interesting points. The relics were dis-covered on the farm of Lewis Colvia, on the east side of Pigeon Creek, and were contained in sepul-chral schists of oval shape, with flat or concave bot-toms. The schists proper vary in depth from fifteen to eighteen inches, over which were carefully placed large, flat stone flags, effectually covering the sepuration between the vegetable mould and substra-tum of ciay. The query arises, has this disposition of hamus entirely taken place since the period of interment? nterment?

of fine workmanship—a breccia of clay and a hand-made shell—of capacity over one pint. It has four ears, each perforated and handsomely ornamented around the margin. It is decidedly a fine specimen of the factile art and a valuable relie of antiquity. Another contained the tolerably well-preserved Another contained the tolerably well-preserved remains of a child of perhaps six years of age, with numerous personal ornaments. Two car ornaments of shell lay on either side of the cranium, while dive of shell lay on either side of the cranium, while five others of similar design lay in immediate proxi-mity with the ribs and vertebre. Numerous minute bone and copper beads were also found; alse a copper tube, two inches in length, filled with some fibrous substance. Near the lower extremities were discovered vestiges of a fibrous cloth, of tolerably fine texture. These relics in-dicate an advanced type of race, and the inte-resting archaeo ogical problem comes up, whether the Copper Age had overlapped the stone, or are these (for there have been discovered other sepultures containing copper) intrusive elements? Copper was the only metal worked by pre-historic races on this continent. North of Mexico, orna-ments and weapons of this most valuable met al have been discovered in mounds and other ancient races on this continent. North of Mexico, orna-ments and weapons of this most valuable met al have been discovered in mounds and other ancient depositories. Bronze was unknown to the mound builders or subsequent nations, anterior to the dawn of history. The copper was obtained from mines now worked on Lake Superior. Their abandoned drifts, stone hammers, broken masses of copper, etc., have been discovered, but alas! who and where are the miners? The sixth schist contained a handsome pearl or-nament. In ali, the bodies had been buried facing the south or southwest. The writer adds:--I have collected many fine spe-cimens of the Stone Age in this interesting archaic field. The race whose remains we have been ex-amining had advanced to the Neolithic or polished Stone Age. Many of the specimens are of exquisite work manship, and compare favorably with minor remains of art from the Ohio Valley Mounds. There is an entire absence of tumular works in the vicinity of the schist remains. A few scattered mounds occur along the Moongaheis. My atten-tion has been directed to a small stone tumulus on the plateau back of Columbia, reported as contain-ing an arch. I have examined it, but must reserve tion has been directed to a small stone tumulus on the plateau back of Columbia, reported as contain-ing an arch. I have examined it, but must reserve any description for the present; suffice, the arch was simply the horizontal or overlapping arch. The principle of springing an arch and locking with a key was unknown to any people north of Mexico and east of the Glia. Repeated accounts have been published of the discovery of the arch in the Mississippi Valley, but these are all apocry-phal. Not a single authentic instance is upon record.

A THRILLING ADVENTURE.

A Race for Life Between a Trotting Horse and a Locomotive.

A Pittsburg paper of a recont date says: — The following are the particulars of an ex-citing chase of a trotting horse over the Wall-kill Valley Railroad: —Last Wednesday morning, as the train from Gardiner approached Lackey's Bridge, about two miles from Gardiner's Station, the engineer, in coming around the curve on the down grade towards the bridge, saw a horse the down grade towards the bridge, saw a horse ahead on the track, which, owing to the high embankment, he knew could not get out of the way. The animal, which belonged to Mr. John Tims, whose residence is near by, and which was once a celebrated trotter, becoming frightened, started to run towards the bridge, and it was then the engineer saw the importance of the step which he was obliged to take. Know-ing that he could not stop the train, it became a race for life as to which should reach the bridge first.

If the horse arrived before the engine it was almost sure to throw it from the track, perhaps almost sure to throw it frein the track, peraps into the abyrs below, together with the whole train of passenger coaches, sacrificing every life on board. He threw the throttle-valve all the way open, and dashed down the grade at the rate of fifty miles an hour. On plunged the horse, and on came the ponderous ma-chine with a deafening roar behind. Half the bine was hed here travered and the horse was distance had been traversed, and the horse was within a few fect of the stone work. Every pound of steam was forced into the cylinder. and the engine gave one mighty lunge, striking the animal upon the right hip, throwing him high into the air, clear from the stones below, where he fell, with his head turned partly under him, never once stirring after he struck.
