CHURCH OF THE INCARNATION.

Opening Services on Christmas Day.

Opening Services on Christmas Day:

Whe new Church of the Incarnation, at the corner of Broad and Jefferson streets, will be opened on Sunday morning next, on which occasion interesting exercises will be held. A sermon will be preached by Bishop Stevens. The new church is a beautiful specimen of the pure early Gothic order of architecture, built of gray stone from Lieperville, Delaware county, with dressings of Belleville brown stone. The church is cruciform in shape, with nave, assies, transepts, choir, and clere-story. The whole width of the nave and aisles is 61 feet, the depth 114 feet. The distance across the transepts or arms of the cross is 88 feet by 61 feet in width. The tower is in the northwest corner of the building, and is 26 feet square: this is to be surmounted by a stone spire rising 200 feet from the ground to the point. On the southwest corner is a handsome porch.

The gable walls are 74 feet to the point. The frent gable is surmounted with an ornamental, carved brown stone cross, 8 feet high. The walls of the aisles are 25 feet high, the roof springing to the clerestory wall 34 feet from the ground. The wall of the clere-story from the aisle roof to the eaves is 15 feet. This wall is supported by large Gothic arches springing from handsome cluster pillars with rich foliated capitals.

The main entrance door in the west gable is richly ornsmented in carved stone work with crockets and finials; the door itself is of heavy oak lumber. Immediately over this door is the great west window, 14 feet wide and 29 feet high, with heavy mullions forming tracery in various beautiful patterns. This, like all the windows in the building, is filled with stained glass of the most elegant description. In each Transent is a lorger window to scription. In each transept is a large window, 11 feet wide and $2 feet high, and over the choir another of the same width, but not so high as the one in the west wall. The aisle and clere-story walls are also pierced with windows, the mullions of which are of odd patterns.

In the finish of the interior, solidity, beauty, and durability have been very happily combined. The roof is open clear to the ridge pole, exposing to view all the timbers, which are of yellow pine, dressed, chanfered, and faced with heavy mouldings. The spandrils of the rafters are filled with carved tracery in trefoil, quatrefoil, and cinquefoil patterns. The inside of the roof is ceiled with yellow pine boards, ploughed and grooved. No paint is used on the timbers or ceiling; they are simply oiled, bringing out the grain of the wood,

BISHOP WHITE.

The Centennial Analyses ary of the Estrance of the Late Bishop White into the Ministry—Interesting Services in Old Christ Church.

This morning, at 11 o'clock, services connected with the one hundredth anniversary of the admission of the late Bishop White, first Bishop of Pennsylvania, to holy orders in the Protestant Episcopal Church, were held in old Christ Church, Second street, above Market. They were of a most interesting character throughout. The celebration, in addition to its anniversary character, is interesting character throughout. The celebration, in addition to its anniversary character, is interesting the time of removal of the late Bishop's remains from the family vault, where they have here-tofore rested, to the crypt which has been prepared for them beneath the chancel of Christ Church, where they will hereafter be deposited. This disposition of them is peculiarly appropriate, when it is considered that Bishop White was one of the early rectors of that church.

stion of them is pecutiarly appropriate, when it is considered that Bishop White was one of the early rectors of that church.

Wil iam White, D. D., first Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church for the Diocese of Pennsylvania, was born in chiladelphia on April 4, 1748. He studied at the College of Philadelphia, now the University, and graduated from themee in 1765. He afterwards studied theology, and when fully prepared went to England to be ordained a minister of the Established Church; all the churches in this country of what afterwards became the Protestant Episcopal denomination being then dependent upon the church organization of the mother country. He was ordained deacon in 1770, and afterwards priest in 1772, consequently the present year is the centennial of his deacon's ordination, or his first entry into the ministry.

The Bishop of London performed the deacon's ordination, and the Bishop of Norwich admitted him to priest's orders. After being admitted to the priesthood he returned to his native city and became assistant or curate of Christ Church, in connection with St. Peter's, then under the same government which see the processing the control of the priest of the priest of the priest orders.

him to priest's orders. After being admitted to the priesthood he returned to his native city and became assistant or curate of Christ Church, in connection with St. Peter's, then under the same government, which position he occupied until he became rector a few years later. At one time he was the only minister of his denomination in Pennsylvania. In the year 1777; in the midst of the Reveiutionary times, he was elected chaplain to Congress, and in that position took part in many of the prominent official acts of that body connected with the war. It was on the organization of the first Congress that Bishop White offered the first prayer. This was made memorable by the action of General Washington, who was observed to be the only member who took the trouble to kneel.

The meeting which issued a call for a convention preparatory to the organization of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States was held in his private residence in this city in the year 1784. Afterwards, in 1789, he presided over the convention itself, meeting in Christ Church, and wrote the constitution of the church. With Bishop Scabury he had the chief part in revising the Book of Common Prayer for the use of the church in this country. Having been elected Bishop of Pennsylvania in 1786, after the independent Church was established, and the country at peace with England, he proceeded to England and received Bishop's orders, together with Bishop Provost, of New York, from the Episcopal hands of the Archbishop of Canterbury. This was on February 4, 1787. Some of Bishop White's prominent published works are "Comparative Views of the Controversy Between the Calvinists and Armenians," "Memoirs of the Protestant Episcopal Church," "A Commentary on the Ordination Services," "Lectures on Catechism," etc. He died in Philadelphia July 17, 1886.

The first rector of Christ Church was the Rev. Mr. Clayton, who took charge about the year 1695. The next is supposed to be kev. Evan Evans, who was succeeded in 1719 by Rev. Mr. Vicary. He was followed lady "when grown up used to say, in her own style of speech, that Billy White was born a bishop, for she never could persuade him to play anything but church. He would the her apron around his neck for a gown and stand behind a chair for his pulpit, whilst she, seated before him on a low bench, was the congregation."

The commemorative services in Christ Church began at the appointed time in the presence of a large audience. The Historical Society of Pennsylvania and several other organizations were present

A procession of the clergy, laity, the officers of the church, and the invited guests was formed in the tower of the church and passed around the church to the front entrance, bearing the remains of the late Bishop. The front pavement of the church was guarded with a line of police officers from the interruption of the crowd. The following was the order of the procession:

Trustees and faculty of the University of Pennsyl-

Managers of the Pennsylvania Hospital. Invited guests.

Members of the Historical Society.

Trustees of the Episcopal Academy. Trustees of Church Extension Society. Trustees of the Bishop White Prayer Book So-Faculty of the Divinity School. The clergy of the city and elsewhere in surplices. Right Rev. William Bacon Stevens, Bishop of the locese of Pennsylvania. Vestrymen of the church. On the arrival of the procession in the church On the arrival of the procession in the church edince, the 15th Psaim from the Psaiter was sung, during the singing of which the remains, encased in a solid oaken coffin, mounted with the marks of the bishop's office, were borne up the aisle to the chancel, preceded by the Bishop and officiating clergymen. It was there formally delivered by kev. William White Bronson, assistant minister of St. Peter's, and a grandson of Bishop White, on behalf of the White family, into the custody of the rector, church, wardens, and vestrymen of Christ Church, and by them formally accepted through Rev. Mr. Foggo, the rector.

The prayers set for the special service were then offered and the lesson from Acts chap. xx. was singing of the 275th hymn followed, after The singing of the 275th hymn followed, after which the centenary discourse, by the Bishop of the Diocese, was delivered.

The Bishop reviewed the life of the late Bishop in every particular, and gave a picture of his church life as it was lived one hundred years ago.

Bishop White's various important services to the Church in this country were reviewed in detail. On the day when the Declaration of Independence was declared he united in the recommendation of the declared he united in the recommendation of the various churches that the prayers for the king should be omitted from the service, thus showing that from the first he was ready to cast in his lot with the new republic. He was the first to suggest the representation of the laity in the governing councils of the Church. He introduced, in addition, several new ideas which had never been thought of before. One of these was the organization of the Church so that it could be capable of self-government, without any reference to the civil authority. Another was the power to the Church to elect its own bishops, in which elections the laity had equal rights with the clergy. His efforts in behalf of the Church were what the efforts of General Washington were to the country. When Washington sat in his pew here, and Bishop Waite ministered in this chancel, there were present the two men to whom the nation was most indebted for its life; on the one hand for its civil liberty and on two men to whom the nation was most indebted for its life; on the one hand for its civil liberty and on the other for fot a free church. His teachings were always opposed to the sacerdotalism and ritualism which have since crept into many churches. If yonder bishop now in his coffin would go into some of our modern ritualistic churches, how would he be grieved? He would not know how to conduct the service which he himself framed. He never told the congregation to remain standing until the clergy had left the chancel. He never wished the comhad left the chancel. He never wished the com-municants to remain until what remained of the sacred elements were caten and dranken. He did not care to have his congregation bow at the name of Jesus Christ in the creed, and even wrote two pampulets disapproving the practice. He was very liberal in his views, and in this spirit was one of the founders of the Bible Society. When its auniversary services were held in Episcopal churches, clergymen of other head in this spirit was one of the founders of the Bible Society. When its anniversary services were held in Episcopal churches, clergymen of other denominations stood side by side with him in the chancel and addressed the people. When he died, people of all denominations came up to the temple of God to do him honor. The study of his published works is still one of the greatest safeguards against innovation of any kind. Innovation of any kind.

Our last office is to deposit his mortal remains in the new tomb wherein never yet man was laid. In this church he was baptized, here confirmed, here was married, and from here was burded. We have come here to ho nor the memory of the great. The occasion is not now one of mourning, but honoronly. At this late day there are no tears should for butthat is gone. Yet the presence of these remains heithat is gone. Yet the presence of these remains awakens the greatest interest in us all. In yonder codin lies one who was the greatest of patriots and men. The memory of the just is blessed.

At the conclusion of the sermon the remains were lowered into the vault beneath the chancel of the church by the elergymen who acted as pall-bearers, the Bishop pronouncing the following words: - the Bishop pronouncing the following words:

"In the name of the Father, and or the Son, and of the Holy Gloset. Amen.

"I. William Bacon Stevens, Eightop of the Diocess of Pennsylvania, acting for and in behalf of the said diocese, and at the request of the rector churchwardens, and vestrymen of Christ Church, Philadelphia, do have solemuly commit to this, its final resting-place on earth, the sacred dust of William White, who was baptized as an infant in this font, served this church sixty-four years as a minister of Christ, and governed this diocese nearly half a century as its first Bishop, and during most of the same period was the presiding Bishop of the Protestant Enscopal Church in the United Sjates of America.

"In thus feinterring, after a lapse of thirty-four years, all that remains of this venerable servant of God, let us offer up our thanksgiving and praise for his good example, for his exalted character, and for his signal services to the Church of God. We deposit beneath this chancel this sacred dust until 'the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on incorruption. On the shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is gin and the strength of sin is the Law. But thanks be to God wife giveth us the victory through our Lord Jeans Christ."

ane services were then closed with a prayer, a hymn, and the benediction.

Closing Exercises at the Jefferson Boys' Grammar School.—This morning the closing of the Jefferson Boys' Grammar School for the Christmas holidays was attended with interesting exercises, beginning at half-past 9 o'clock with the chorus "See the Conquering Hero Comes." This was followed by addresses, recitations, and singing by the pupils, all of which were well rendered and handsomely received. The awards of merit were then made, as follows:—To pupils graduating from Senior Class during the year, 10; to pupils from First division to the High School, 20; promoted to Senior Class, 21; to First division, 51; to Second division, 71; to Third division, 80 There were admitted from Secondary schools, 192. VILLAINOUS.—Michael Bradley, only four months in this country, was shamefully treated by a fellow-workman at the galvanizing establishment, Eleventh and Washington streets, on Monday night. Michael loaned his pipe to the workman, who returned it filled with gunpowder. The result was an explosion, and Mr. Bradley was badly burned about the face. The perpetrator of the outrage was arrested.

Presentation.—Yesterday afternoon, at the Boys' Central High School, the Principal, Mr. Riche, was presented by the pupils with a handsomely-bound copy of "Dante's Inferno," illustrated by Dore. Mr. Riche was requested to assemble the school for the purpose of presenting a turkey to the janitor. presenting a turkey to the janitor.

The allegation is that about a week ago Pepper quarreled with a man in a a tavern in Manayunk and struck him, injuring him, it is said, to such an extent that he died in consequence. Pepper was sent to Norristown for trial.

Therr of a Cow.—Bernard Filger, Laurence McCauliey, and James Broomfield were taken into custedy yesterday upon the charge of the alleged larceny of a cow from a gentleman residing in the Twenty-fifth ward. Defendants were arraigned before Alderman Heins, and were held for a further hearing.

RUNAWAY AND ACCIDENT.—About half-past 6 o'clock last evening a horse attached to a wagon containing Mr. Charles Walters and friend took fright on Girard avenue, above Fifteenth, and ran off. The carriage was brought in contact with a telegraph pole, and the occupants were thrown out and slightly injured. The animal was seriously hurt. IMPROVEMENT .- The new hall of Mr. George Gin-
