(SUNDAYS BEGRETED). AT THE EVENING TELEGRAPH BUILDING, No. 108'S. THIRD STREET,

PHILADELPHIA. The Price is three cents per copy (double sheet), or eighteen cents per week, payable to the carrier by whom served. The subscription price by mail is Nine Dollars per annum, or One Dollar and Fifty Cents for two months, invariably in advance for the time ordered.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1871.

THE EVENING TELEGRAPH, from its original establishment, has been in the receipt of telegraphic news from the New York Associated Press, which consists of the Tribune, Times, Herald, World, Sun, Journal of Commerce, Evening Post, Commercial Advertiser, and Evening Express. The success which has attended our enterprise is, in itself, a sufficient evidence of the freshness, fullness, and reliability of the news which we have received from this source. Last March we entered Into a special contract by which THE EVENING TELEGRAPH has the exclusive use of the news furnished in the afternoon by the Associated Press to its own members, the North American, Inquirer, Ledger, Press, Age, Record, and German Democrat, of this city, and the leading journals of the East, North, West and South; and hereafter THE TELEGRAPH will be the only evening paper published in this city in which the afternoon despatches of the Associated Press will appear.

The earliest regular edition of THE EVENING TELEGRAPH goes to press at 11 o'clock, and the subsequent regular editions at 2½, 3½, and 4½. Whenever there is important news of the progress of the European war, extra editions will be issued after this hour, and before the regular time for the early edition.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF LAWYERS. It is perhaps not always an easy matter to decide exactly what are the duties and responsibilities of a lawyer to his client and the public, but it is very certain that the theory upon which some lawyers practice, that they owe nothing to the public, and that it is their business to win every case they may be engaged in, by any possible means, is disgraceful to the legal profession. Lawyers are officers of the courts, and as such are endowed with privileges which laymen do not possess. These privileges are conferred upon them with the idea that they will aid in the administration of justice, the supposition being that in presenting the case of a client every care will be taken to secure him his legal rights and to prevent him from being oppressed by the prosecution. When a legal adviser, however, sets out to win the reputation of procuring acquittals, no matter how desperate may be the cases he defends, he will speedily degenerate into a nuisance of the most decided character, and it is not creditable that the legal profession should contain so many men of this character. There are, of course, plenty of lawvers of unimpeachable integrity, who would, under no circumstances, resort to unworthy means to benefit their clients; but it is undeniable that, among the Quarter Sessions practitioners especially, there are individuals who make it a regular business to prevent criminals from being brought to punishment. There is abundant evidence of this furnished almost daily, but it is seldom that so plain a case is made out against a member of the bar as there was on Saturday, during the trial of John Fitzgerald on the charge of murder. The father of the prisoner testified that Mr. John Campbell, who officiated B. as counse for the defense, endeavored to induce him to swear that his son was insane, and also that he had been threatened by Mr. Campbell with twelve years' imprisonment if he remained to testify. This most outrageous attempt to defeat the ends of justice very properly received emphatic notice from Judges Allison and Paxson, who advised Mr. Campbell of the important fact that he is bound by his oath as a member of the bar "to act with true fidelity to the court as well as the client," and Mr. Campbell was accordingly held to answer the charge against him to-morrow, when the whole affair will be investigated.

The defendant in the trial above mentioned and the principal witnesses against him are poor, ignorant colored people, and the lawyer evidently considered that he had an excellent opportunity to fix up the case to suit himself. and thus add to his reputation as a successful criminal practitioner by securing the acquittal of his client, and he, in all probability, imagined that he was doing a fine stroke of legitimate business, especially as he is probably aware of the same game having been played by other Quarter Sessions practitioners, with immense benefit to their business interests. That evidence has been manipulated over and over again by lawyers acting for the defense, especially in the Court Quarter Sessions, there. plenty of superficial evidence to prove; but there has certainly not lately been an instance of a lawyer being accused in open court of a deliberate attempt to persuade witnesses to perjure themselves as Mr. Campbell was on Saturday. We sincerely hope that the investigation into this case will be as thorough as its importance demands, and that if Mr. Campbell is guilty he will be punished as he deserves. All the respectable members of the bar are interested in denouncing and discountenancing such practices as are too often resorted to in all the courts, but especially in the Quarter Sessions, by men who follow the law as a trade, and who have no ideas of decency or of the responsibilities they owe to their profession or the community; and it is also the duty of the Judges to exercise a suitable amount of vigilance to prevent lawyers from overstepping the bounds of their legitimate duties, and becoming the aiders and abettors of the worst classes of criminals.

AN FRIENDSHIP FOR GREAT BRITAIN. AMERICAN

A CAPLE despatch states that, at a late meeting of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce, the two Liverpool members of Parliament united in expressing the comfortable conviction that "all native-born Americans cherish an affection for England, and that it was the alien residents of the United States alone who were hostile to Great Britain." This opinion was probably predicated on the fact that it is only such raw Irishmen as Ben. Butler, in the House of Representatives, or such late importations from the Emerald Isle as Charles Sumner and Zach Chandler, in the Senate, that ever venture to breathe any other sentiments than those of unalterable love for our dear old step-mother on the other side of the Atlantic. We have so many causes for gratitude that it is impossible to forget and ignore them all. We know how nobly the Hessians and the merciless savages were employed to murder American citizens during the Revolutionary war; how our Capitol was burned down, and our frontiers ravaged by Indian allies of the red coats, during the war of 1812; and how, during the late war, when our energies were absorbed in a conflict with the Rebels, Great Britain did her utmost to destroy our commerce, to strengthen the hands of our domestic foes, and to break up the Union forever. For all these favors, conjoined to an unceasing warfare upon American industry and an unchangeable jealousy of American progress, the native-born citizens of the United States are, of course, pro'oundly grateful. As their gratitude for the favors lavished upon them during the Revolutionary era began to cool. the new occurrences which precipitated the war of 1812 and marked its progress gave new force to their friendly sentiments; and as they were forgetting the events of 1812, the occurrences of the war of the Rebellion, and the kind aid and sympathy then displayed by Great Britain, served to swell all native American hearts once more with profound gratitude. If a series of injuries such as no one independent people has ever suffered at the hands of another should engender friendship, we ought to be fast friends of Great WHATEVER may be the motive of the parties who have brought a charge of embezzlement and perjury against William M. Bunn, Register of Wills of the city of Philadelphia, it is to be hoped that an official holding such an important and lucrative office, by the suffrages of the Republican party, will be able to establish his complete innocence of the imputed offenses. Mr. Bunn is charged with having sworn to an exaggerated statement of the expenses incurred in his contest for a seat in the Legislature, and with having received from the treasury a much larger sum than he was entitled to for such expenses: and it is to be hoped, for the honor of the city, that such charges cannot be sustained against one who now holds a position which should be filled only by a man of unblemished integrity. It has grown to be entirely too much the custom among men who possess real or imaginary political influence to use that influence in furthering schemes for perpetrating downright robbery upon the people; and as the charge made against Bunn implies that he has been guilty of one of the worst offenses of this character, we hope, for his credit and the credit of the party that placed him in his present lucrative and honorable position, that he can make a full and satisfactory explanation. No political organization can long bear up under the odium of the leadership of shameless thieves, and no party can gain the continuous support of the people for a set of candidates who notoriously rob them; so that, for Bunn's sake, as well as for the sake of the Republican party, we trust he has a complete defense to the startling accusations made against him.

THE SENATE has passed a resolution authorizing the President to despatch one or more naval vessels from New York to France with breadstuffs and provisions, to be contributed by the people of the United States for the relief of those who have suffered by the ravages of the war. This is an eminently proper and humane movement, and we hope it may be vigorously followed up. It is impossible to estimate the damage done, in a thickly populated country, by the enforced suppression of industry, and it is only too probable that exterior aid alone can save tens of thousands of Frenchmen from starvation. In the humane work of relief the United States should do their full share, and it only needs a good organization of the proposed movement and a clear explanation of its necessity to secure liberal contributions from the ample stores of America. No difference of sympathy in regard to parties to the present quarrel should retard the collection of the proposed supplies. The Germans themselves are doing their best to feed starving Frenchmen, and we too could not grant aid to any nation which has a stronger claim upon our assistance than that which sent us armies and fleets to ensure the success of our Revolutionary struggle.

THE SECOND UNION LEAGUE ART RECEPTION WILL take place on next Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings, from 6 to 11 o'clock. The last reception, it will be remembered, was composed entirely of contributions from Philadelphia artists, but the second one will include many works by some of the most celebrated painters of New York, Boston, and other places. The exhibition promises to be unusually interesting, and it will be more enjoyable han the first, as the number of tickets will be limited and a crowd taus avoided.

The Treasurer, not knowing of the loss, was in the dark in regard to what appeared to him an insane demand.

"My pocket-book! my pocket-book!" again was repeated, when the Treasurer, recovering his self-possession, queried, "What pocket-

"The pocket-book I lost here last evening," came the answer from the distressed merchant Thinking, doubtless, that he had lost a pocketbook, the Treasurer called down stairs the colored girl Caroline, who attended to the sweeping in the dress-circle, and on questioning her ascertained that she had picked up the pocket-book, which she had contemplated ringing to the box-office after she had accomplished her work. The merchant at once identified the pocket-book, and proving property, it was at once restored to him. He was so over-come at its recovery that, in the fullness of his heart, which was slopping over with gratitude, he promised her ten dollars, but she has not yet received it, and has now given up all hope of the promised reward. - Cincinnati Times.
