THE PUBLIC BUILDINGS QUESTION. |

To the Editor of The Brening Telegraph.

We have seldom read a greater amount of simple twaddle than is contained in the protest addressed to the Commissioners of Public Buildings against the erection of buildings at the intersection of Broad and Market streets. Many of the signers of this paper are among our most respectable citizens; but, if they read this remarkable document before affixing their signatures, and coincided in all its fearful statements, their reputation for common sense will be greatly impaired. The idea that the erection of handsome buildings at the intersection will have the effect of driving travel from both Broad and Market streets for a "generation," and of "retarding, perhaps forever" (though we can scarcely see how anything can be retarded forever) "the development of that splendid avenue" (Broad street) is positively ludicrous. The public buildings, in their new location, with their widened avenues around them, instead of "obstructing" would invite travel, and would do more_for the improvement of Broad street than anything yet attempted.

But, if our memory serves us, some of the signers of this flaming protest are the very persons who applied to the Supreme Court for an injunction to prevent the erection of buildings on Penn Square at all, on the remarkable ground that it was unconstitutional so to do, although it was notoriously a matter of history that William Penn himself intended Penn Square for just such a purpose.

They harassed the Building Commission with legal proceedings intended to overturn altogether the designs of the Commissioners, and now, when defeated by the decision of the Supreme Court, have the effrontery to write a letter of advice to the same Commissioners to "impress upon them the necessity of reconsidering their action !" And, in the face of the fact that the "argument" of the Washington Square advocates was directed mainly against the intersection, and that huge posters were everywhere displayed showing Broad and Market streets as hopelessly blocked up, this letter of advice coolly tells the Commissioners that if it had been known that the buildings would be erected at the intersection the vote of the people would have been different, and that the result would have probably been "in favor of Washington Square." Here our colored brother begins to peep from under the wood pile, and we see that this letter is but another device of the disappointed but untiring partisans of the rival locality, and that our venerable but deluded townsmen's signatures are used for this ulterior purpose.

The Commissioners, however, will scarcely be frightened by this protest. Eminently respectable cltizens of our Little Pedlington have a way of protesting against public improvements. We have not forgotten that names of highest weight and influence were attached to a protest against the introduction of gas into Philadelphia; while, comparatively lately, the same misguided fogies protested against passenger railroads on our principal streets, and predicted the certain ruin of Chesnut street if a track should be laid therein. We are happy to know that many of these gentlemen have lived to see and acknowledge their mistake. These signers will probably live to see and acknowledge theirs. When the buildings are erected, according to the plans determined on, people will wonder how they could ever have made such an absurd oppo-E. W. C. sition.

ing during the present week. AT THE AMERICAN a number of novelties are announced for this evening's performance.

THEODORE THOMAS and his grand orchestra, assisted by Miss Anna Mehlig, will give two grand concerts at the Academy of Music on Wednesday and Thursday evenings next. consequence of the great demand for tickets for these entertainments, it has been determined to sell reserved seats in the family circle. It may not be amiss to state that for hearing orchestral music these seats are really the best in the house, although they are not so fashionable as those in the lower tiers.

THE ANNUAL BALL of the Americus Club will come off at the Academy of Music this evening. The gentlemen having charge of this affair have been making great exertions, and this ball promises to be one of the most enjoyable of the season.

THE MENNERCHOR annual bal masque will take place to-morrow evening at the Academy of Music. The ball will open with a grand spectacular procession, which will present a great number of new and interesting features, and the whole affair will probably surpass any of the brilliant entertainments given by the Mænnerchor in former years. One-half of the proceeds will be devoted to the relief of the sufferers of the Franco-German war,
