FIRST DAYS OF THE FRENCH ASSEM-BLY.

From the N. Y. Tribune.

The opening scenes of the Assembly at Bordeaux are not sufficiently accented to afford any sure indication of the result which is to follow from their deliberations. There has been some rather violent comment by Republican members on the fact of the doors of the Assembly being guarded by soldiers; one sanguinary patriot from Paris announcing his intention to come in future to the sessions armed. On the other hand, the elections of officers so far have been marked with the greatest prudence and disorction. M. Grevy, the President, was a member of the Third party of 1869, so liberal and so fearless in his opposition to the abuses of personal government that most of our contemporaries classify him erroneously as a Republican. He is the same undaunted liberal that mounted the barricades of 1830, the same unflinching advocate of popular rights that withstood the blandishments and plots of the Elysee in 1851, the same incorruptible tribune that re-cently twice defeated the Government in his own district, when, after eighteen years of seclusion, he came out again to attack afresh the crumbling fortress of usurpation; but it is too soon to claim him as a Republican. If the will of France, honestly expressed, be in favor of the republic, she will find a true and honorable servant in him. But his early associations and later utterances alike indicate his preference for the constitutional monarchy.

Four Vice-Presidents have also been elected, Four Vice-Presidents have also been elected, of the same highly respectable character. The most advanced of these, Louis Joseph Martel, has never been thus far graded as a Republi-can. He was a member of the Legislative Body during the Government of July, and was one of the earnest partisans of M. Thiers in the debates of that day. He was promi-nent in the Third party just before the war. Of his colleagues, Vicomte Benoist d'Azy was an old and chivalrous champion of the Bour-bons before and after their expulsion in 1830, and, since the shame and disgrace of the coup and, since the shame and disgrace of the coup d'etat, has retired entirely from politics until called forth in his vigorous age by the shock of war and revolution to take part in the re-construction of the country. Ludovic Vitet is also rather a memory of the past than an active politician of to-day; his last term of active politician of to-day; his last term of service in the Legislative Body ended twenty years ago. Maleville, the fourth Vice-Presi-dent, also ended his public life on the day the liberties of France were strangled by Na-poleon and his gang of conspirators. Up to that time he, as well as Vitet, had been dis-tinguished among the friends of M. Thiers and partisans of the limited monarchy. With such a tendency of the Chambers in-

With such a tendency of the Chambers in-dicated by its choice of officers, it will be dicated by its choice of oncers, it will be readily seen how premature if not entirely apocryphal was the London despatch pub-lished by the morning papers recently an-nouncing that the majority had agreed upon a Provisional Government, of which M. Thiers was to be the head, and the leading membres of the prement Republican Commit members of the present Republican Committee the most prominent members. A propo-, sition has been introduced for conferring ipon the veteran statesman full powers of forming a Cabinet, signed by the weighty names of Dufaure, Maleville, and Vitet, who are all old friends and life-long partisans of his. The House of Orleans, among all its most precious possessions, has nothing to be compared with the faithful and disinterested devotion of this great scholar and politician. There must of necessity be something worthy of regard and respect in the Princes of a family which has been able to retain through twenty-three years of exile and misfortune the warmest devotion of such enlightened men as those who have come to the surface in the last great convulsion of France. MM. Favre and Picard have arrived in Bordeaux to receive the instructions of the Assembly in regard to the German terms of peace. These will probably be given in what-ever sense the Prussian Cabinet may direct. All parties seem anxious that the question of peace should be disposed of before that of the definite reconstruction of the country is arranged. All factions will feel easier when the overpowering presence of Bismarck is re-moved from their borders; and the election of a king would be of ill omen if it were made while France was writhing under the conqueror's heel.

vision like Henry Clay, who could strike out a new series of measures suited to the exi-gency; or a chieftain like Andrew Jackson, who by his personal qualities could win to his side a liberal share of the intellect of the country, and inspire the masses with enthu-siasm for his leadership.

stasm for his leadership. But Grant was not merely incompatent to perform such work as this; he had not the slightest disposition for attempting it. His tastes lay quite in other directions. In this crisis of the Republican party, instead of marking out for it a new policy, and aiming to harmonize and consolidate its ranks, he to harmonize and consolidate its ranks, he has seemed intent upon indulging petty spites against its independent members, supplying fat offices to the endless retinue of his poor relations, sliding through Congress some slippery job for the gratifica-tion of panders to his vanity, accepting valuable presents with one hand while be-stowing increases upon the deports stowing incrative places upon the denors with the other; but never for one moment rising to the level of his high position, nor feeling the pressure of its weighty responsibilities.

If looks as if Grant himself had begun to see that he must do something to retrieve his waning hold upon the Republican party, and hence his dash at San Domingo, and his special message to Congress tending to re-kindle the smouldering embers of sectional animosity in the Southern States. But all such despairing efforts to restore his lost prestige distract rather than harmonize the Republican party, and cover with a darker cloud its prospects of success in 1872. That Grant as a statesman is a lamentable failure nobody doubts. Whether he will succeed in altogether ruining the party that elevated him to power remains to be determined.

THE REV. DR. VINTON ON ST. DO-MINGO.

From the N. Y. Herald.

The letter on St. Domingo of the Rev. Dr. Vinton, of the Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church of this city, furnishes some very strong testimony in behalf of the annexation of that beautiful and fertile tropical island. of that beautiful and fertile tropical island. In reference to the advantages which we shall secure and give to the island with this desirable acquisition, the learned doc-tor brings forward an intelligent volunteer witness whose experience of forty-one years in the West Indies qualifies him to speak as by authority on the subject. This witness is the British Governor Walker, of the Bahama Islands the capital of which of the Bahama Islands, the capital of which is the flourishing little commercial city of Nassau, N. P. Governor Walker earnestly hopes that the United States will secure the island of St. Domingo: first, because the introduction of our civilization and culture will redeem the society of the West Indies; and, secondly, because the soil and productions of the island, surpassing those of any other, not excepting Cuba, would enrich our country beyond any cost that its acquisition would demand. But the evidence upon this point, from Christopher Columbus down to General Grant, is overwhelming, and so we need not enlarge upon it.

Next Dr. Vinton, from the hint of an old sea captain, calls the attention of General Grant to a chart of the West Indies, if he would be convinced of the naval and commercial importance of this splendid island, in view of a ship canal across the isthmus of Darien or Panama. The enthusiasm of our distinguished divine for this annexation carries him so far that he wishes his old friend and schoolmate, Senator Sumner, would give up his opposition to the scheme and see the matter in a different light. We fear, however, that Sumner is past praying for, and we are quite sure that the good work can and will be done without him. But our learned doctor, in the very outset of his interesting letter, suggests the acquisition of St. Domingo as a sanitarium-a winter residence for our invalids; and he says that the universal wish of those at Nassau is 'for a resort on American soil in the West Indies for the benefit of invalids"-a wish expressed in a longing for the annexation of St. Domingo. To many of our readers who have learned to associate St. Domingo only with the vellow fever, this wish of American invalids at Nassau may seem somewhat out of the way; but St. Domingo, especially among its beautiful and fertile mountains, which cover a large portion of the island, enjoys a charming and salubrious climate. We have no doubt that within a year or two from its acquisition its winter resorts for our Northern invalids will be occupied by thousands, and that a new lease of life will thus be gained to the most of them. We have east of the Pacific slope no desirable winter resort on United States soil for the invalid who wishes to escape our dreadful winter winds. They sweep down through Texas and to the Gulf coast in its whole extent, even at times to the southern extremity of the peninsula of Florida. For instance, we have noticed in our telegraph reports a diffe-rence of fifteen degrees in the winter between the temperature of Key West (which is in the midst of the string of small islands which ex-tend out into the Gulf Stream from the southern cape of Florida) and the temperature of Havana, a hundred miles only across the water. This difference comes from our cold northern winds, the chill of which is felt even at Key West, but is never felt at Havana, because of the intervening warm atmosphere of a hundred miles in width, rising from the Gulf Stream. St. Domingo, lying several hundred miles still farther south, is, of course, entirely exempt from chilling winds, and January among her mountains is softer and more delicious than June in Virginia, and her July temperature never rises to the maximum of Long Branch. We therefore cordially approve Dr. Vinton's idea of St. Domingo as a sanitarium for our invalids who wish to escape to some island of refuge under "the old flag," thank God, free from the chilling and searching winds of our continental winters.

nor run foot-races, but rigidly insist on eat-ing and drinking nothing but what each one pays for, and will not allow their minds to be diverted for one moment from business.

Next, they must not imitate the city papers in matter or manner. They must leave na-tional and metropolitan and European affairs to the metropolitan editors, who by virtue of their situation are made competent to discuss them, and must confine themselves to their county news and affairs. For example:—

The more attention a county editor gives to county affairs the better paper of its kind will be make, and if he perseveres the greater will be his reward. The standing objection to country papers is that they are to a great extent imitations of city papers. If a country editor will fill his sneet with the intelligence of his locality, there will be no trou-ble among his fieldhors, getting the neighborhood news in his paper, about a few cents postage per quarter. quarter.

Thus the rural mind should be trained to look to the metropolitan journals for light upon national politics. How can the country editor be expected to know State and national politics or other large affairs? On the other hand, the metropolitan editor knows all these things by instinct. True, the news of a rural county does not always afford matter enough to absorb an expansive mind; and besides, every American-born is by his birthright a politician, and has a mind much occupied with national politics; but it is improbable that a county editor can discuss these as wisely as a metropolitan editor; therefore, the county press should eschew national politics and turn their subscribers over to the metropolitan journals for this wisdon.

Perhaps it will occur to the rural mind that the local affairs of a metropolis are much greater than those of a rural county, and that the more natural arrangement would be for the metropolitan journals to occupy them-selves with local matters, leaving national serves with local matters, leaving national affairs to the less locally occupied rural jour-nals. This would unquestionably be a better division of the labor; but unfortunately the county editor, be he never so wise, is inca-pable of discussing national politics, while the metropolitan editor, be he never so igno-rant, can write on these topics without end. Indeed, he not infrequently makes of his ignorance of political history and political principles his highest qualification for a ready political writer.

WILLIAM KEYSER. JOHN K. LONGWELL, MOSES WIESENFELD,

CAUSE OF THE DECADENCE OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

From the N. Y. Sun

General Grant has now held the Presidential office about two years. The Republican party had never been so strong at any previous period of its existence as when he en-tered the White House. It had just come out of a protracted contest with Andrew Johnson. whom it had completely prostrated, and out of a sharp and severe struggle with the De-mecracy, winning a triumph so signal that it seemed to have well nigh accomplished their ruin.

Where stand the two parties to-day? The Republicans have lost nearly all their strongholds in the Southern States, while six of the States in the North and West that voted for Grant have gone over to the Democracy, and with the apparent intention of staying there. In Congress, as well as out of it, we see the party widely divided on cardinal measures, while its eminent leaders seem quite as eager to make war on each other as to combat their common foe. We hear of serious divisions in the Cabinet on questions of great moment, and the country believes that nothing prevents its breaking up except the fear that this would be followed in March by an organization of the new House of Representatives by means of a coalition between the Democratic members and those Republicans who are avowedly hostile to Grant's renomination, or who dissent from some leading measures of the party.

How does it happen that the Republican party is in this perilous position ? The reason is obvious. It has been compelled to traverse a critical stage in its career under a leader whose incapacity to guide its course is only equalled by his indifference to the disasters that flow from his blunders. When passing through the transition period between the old slavery controversies and the new issues sure to spring up after their settlement, it was essential to the continued supremacy of the party that a clear head and a strong hand should direct its affairs. At this supreme juncture it was a great misfortune that the party found itself burdened with a President incapable of broad views of public questions, destitute of all experience as a politician, and unwilling to call to his Cabinet those who could supply his own deficiencies. The crisis cisted press meetings never accept free rides

METROPOLITAN	AND	COUNTRY	EDI-TORS.

From the Cincinnati Gazette.

The editor of the metropolitan journal occupies a position which entitles him to lecture "the county (or country) editors" on the way to conduct their business. We have a metro-politan neighbor, to wit, the Commercial, who assumes this prerogative with such alac rity and zeal that our own metropolitan duty is greatly lightened. Upon the coming event of the annual meeting of "the county (or country) editors," or, in fact, the Ohio edi-tors, at Akron, next week, the Commercial administers a lesson on the way to conduct a county"editorial convention and a county paper. Firstly, they must not accept any deadhead entertainments, and must not bend themselves to pleasure, nor think of having a good time, but must stick to business. And their first business should be to declare against their free carrying in the mails within their respective counties.

Thus they must imitate the stern virtues and business devotion of the metropolitan editors, who in their conventions and assodemanded a statesman of comprehensive or excursions, or trips to mammoth caves, daily at 11 o'clock.
