THE YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSO-CIATION.

This important organization, which is daily occupying a more extended fiel i of usefulness a field which it alone can occupy-owes its origin to a number of Christian gentlemen who were impressed with the necessity of doing something for the moral and spiritual welfare of the thousands of young men who go to ruin in this and every other large city for the want of friendly counsel and encouragement, and the lack of means for filling up their leisure hours agreeably without frequenting the haunts of vice. The association was organized in 1854, in Sansom Street Hall, by Rev. Dr. Brainerd. Mr. George H. Stuart, and others. It started with about fifty members and with Mr. Stuart as its first President. The first rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association were on Chesnut street, below Seventh, and for a considerable time its growth was exceedingly slow, it being found difficult to excite any great amount of interest in it. A removal was made to Arch street, below Ninth, when the interest in the organization nearly died out, and it was only nominally kept in existence by the efforts of a few members. A revival of interest in it occurred in 1850, when rooms on Chesnut street, above Tenth, were occupied. The great religious revival of this year gave the association a start which set it fairly on its feet, and the Jayne's Hall prayer meetings were held under its auspices, besides some forty or fifty meetings in the firemen's halls. The breaking out of the war was a severe blow to the Young Men's Christian Association, principally on account of the enlistment of a large number of its members in the army. A few persevering members, however, kept the association in existence, and from the Young Men's Christian Asso-ciation sprang the Christian Commission, whose good works and history are written in the hearts of the people of the whole world. This important work absorbed the best energies of the members of the association during the coatinuance of the war, and it was not until the end of the great conflict that they were able to devote themselves to the real work for which the association was organized. Since the war the Young Men's Christian Association has been slowly but surely perfecting its organization and preparing its plans for greatly increasing its sphere of usefulness. It is hoped shortly to be in possession of the means for the erection of a building like that given to the New York Association by the business men of that city, which will be furnished with a gymnasium, reading-rooms, debating hall, and all other means of making it attractive to young

The amount of good which an institution like the Young Men's Christian Association can do is incalculable. There are thousands of young men in this city in all ranks of life who are entirely without friends and advisers, who are at a loss how to spend their leisure hours, and who are peculiarly open on many accounts to temptations. To such as these the rooms of a Young Men's Christian Association, where they will always be made welcome, be introduced to desirable acquaintances, and be afforded facilities for making trustworthy friends, cannot but be highly appreciated. The advantages which are also furnished for passing the time pleasantly in the shape of a well-selected library, an attractive reading-room where all the magazines and newspapers can be found, must appeal strongly to the sympathies of young men of native refinement and good taste, and for these reasons, if for no other, the Young Men's Christian Association deserves the cordial encouragement and hearty support of our merchants and also those who are interested in the welfare of young men. From the address of William E. Dodge, Jr., Esq., the President of the New York Christian Association, at the six-teenth anniversary meeting of the Philadelphia association, held last November at the Academy of Music, we take the following as a practical illustration of the value and importance of such organizations. Mr. Dodge said: -

The desire of the Young Men's Christian Assolations throughout this land is to use their concentrated efforts to reach, by all brotherly kindness, by all tact and wisdom, those young men in our cities and towns without friends who are drifting to destruction, and to say to them there is a beauty in our holy faith, and that there is something in the world worth living for, and to give them means to enjoy the blessed influences, so that they may become good and true men. I remember, some two years ago, coming down from Montreal where the National Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association had been in session, one beautiful evening. I was sitting forward on the upper deck of the boat, enjoying the stillness of the lovely lake, when I was interrupted by a gentleman whom I could not distinguish, who asked me if I was from New York. I replied that I was. "I want very much to have are doing in New York for the young men?" I told him what we were doing, and what we were hoping to do in the future. He then, in further conversation, told me something of his own life, and how God had prospered him. He told me he was President of the Young Men's Christian Association in a Western city. He said he had had a large number of young men in his employment, and had always taken them to his own house at various times, as he considered it an excellent plan to keep them out of temptation. I was delighted with his manner of taking, and his plan of interesting young men. "My early life," said he, "was a trying one. I had a great many temptations. I was very poor. The only friend I had was an eider brother, who was not rich in this world's goods. I made up my mind to go into the wholesale drug business, and prepared my life for that. My brother said, 'I can give you no capital or influence. If you will go to Philadelphia and study chemistry there in the medical school, I will endeavor to pay your moderate expenses for two years.' I was a member of the Methodist Church and a teacher in the Sabbath-school there. I carried a letter from the minister of the church to the city, to the church there, and was very kindly received. I was lavited to take a class in the Sabbath-school, and daring the whole two years was a falliful attendant at that church, and did all I could to work in the Sabbath-school, and daring the whole two years was a falliful attendant at that to take a class in the Sabbath-school, and daring the whole two years was a falliful attendant at that church, and did all I could to work in the Sabbath-school." He said that during all that time he never was invited to put his foot across the threshold of a home, and he never had any one to speak to him as though they were really his friends, and big man as he was, he had often gone up to his little bedroom and cried from sheer loneliness, and nothing but the love of God in his heart saved him from going to ruin. I do not speak of Philadelphia, or the church to which he belonged, or the Methodist Church, in comparison to others, but I speak of the matter as the way we to others, but I speak of the matter as the way we do things in this rapid life of ours. We, no doubt, take it for granted that somebody else speaks to take it for granted that somebody else speaks to these young men, and we think it is all right, and we forget their loneliness. Now, if a young man, with the love of God in his heart and with Sanday labor on his hands was so exposed to temptation, and came so nearly going to his ruin, what do you think, dear friends, is the danger of young men who are here all alone, with only daily labor to care for, and who all the long evenings have no one to care for them—no home open to them—no relatives or friends to say a kind word. Taink of this, dear friends. Your beautiful city is a city of homes. I am sure no one coming here from any other city, and walking up and down your streets, and seeing and walking up and down your streets, and seeing your beautiful nomes, could help wishing that his lot had been cast among you. When in this country the noblest Englishman who ever was here said nothing had interested him so much as the city of Philadelphia and to see the number of simple, neat homes, where all could have hearthstones of their own. After all, there is no your Meria Christian Association to the country to the country of their own. have healthstones of their own. After all, there is no Young Men's Christian Association that can begin to compare to a good wife and a freside of one's own. What are all of you doing for these young men who come by the thousands to this city? I wonder at you, fathers, mothers, and brothers. I wender at you, clergymen, who know the temptations and the trials to which a young man is exposed when away from home that young man is exposed. when away from home, that you do not do some-thing for him. You are responsible to a certain extent. A young man leaves his home—his quiet country home. He leaves with his mother's prayers. He leaves all his friends behind, the country church where he has worshipped, and he drifts into a large city like Philadelphia and New York. Where is he? who cares for him? He knows nobody. No one speaks to him. He is alone in a great city. What loneliness is there greater than that?

That our readers may know exactly what the work of the Young Men's Christian Association is, we present the following details: -The Hall of the association is at No. 1210 Chesnut street, and contains a large reading room, a library, parlors for writing, conversa-tion rooms, etc. The reading room, which is free to all, has two hundred papers and periodicals upon its tables. The library contains 500 volumes for the use of the members. In the lecture room Monday night is devoted to the literary society, Tuesday to temperance meetings, Wednesday to classes, Thursday to Bible study, Friday to scientific lectures, and Saturday to praver meetings. On Sunday after-noon at 3 o'clock there is a Bible class for strangers. The Wednesday evening classes are devoted to instruction in penman-hip, German, French, vocal music, and elocution. Social meetings for prayer and to enable strangers to become acquainted with the members are held every evening from 9½ to 10 o'clock.

The Employment Bureau is organized on business principles to supply strangers and others with employment without charge. A special agent of the association gives all his time to securing situations. He receives applications for two hours of each day, and the rest of his time is spent upon the streets seeking places for the unemployed. One hundred and tifty situations have been secured for young men during the last six weeks of dull times.

The association has just purchased the Union Club House on Twelfth street, below Walnut, and is fitting it up as a Christian Home where young men can be comfortably accommodated under good influences at the exact cost of living, A great demand is constantly made upon the association to supply boarding-houses for strangers, and the Committee on Boarding-houses have a list of 150 of the best in the city; houses to which they constantly send young men. The Young Men's Home is designed to meet the needs of those who cannot afford to pay the usual rates. Its charges will probably be about $3 per week.

The association provides temporary shelter for scores of young men who for many reasons, such as misfortune and disappointment in business, are homeless. Sometimes the failure of a young man from the country to get a situation before his scanty supply of means runs out brings him to the door of the association. Nearly 500 such were cared for last year. Since the first of the year about 150 have been shel-

A Reception Committee for Strangers is now being organized to attend at the rooms each evening to welcome strangers. A committee to look after sick young men, without distinction of creed or colors, is organized, and a notice of a destitute and sick young men sent to the hall of the association will be promptly attended to.

A special committee also awaits the notice of parents and guardians to make the acquaintance of young men coming to Pailadelphia to seek employment, and to help them to find homes and friends, and to introduce them to members of the association. To aid in this, cards of invitation to the association and its privileges are being put up in stores, depots, and hotels. On the streets every night hundreds of little caffets are distributed to young men inviting then to avail themselves of the privileges of the association, and a vast amount of good has already been done in bringing under Christian refluences multitudes of young men who most thankfully testify to the benefits which the Young Men's Christian Association has conferred upon them.

NOVEL AUCTION SALF.

A Coal Mine Under the Hammer-The Pro-perty Bid in.

A sale of a singular character was announced to be made to-day by Muller, Wilkins & Co., at the Exchange salesrooms. The property consisted of a coal deposit adjoining Scruton, Pa., the area of which comprises about one hundred and twenty-five acres. The land was represented to contain an aggregate thickness of eighty-four feet of coal veins of the best quality, or 100,000 tons per acre; but the sale was to take place on an assumption of only 25,000 tons per acre, or about 3,000,000 tons it the aggregate, at the price bid per ton for this quantity. The terms of the sale were a pavment of $3000 at the time of purchase, the remainder to be paid on the first day of April

The property is owned by a law firm in Phila-delphia. The title has long been a subject of litigation, and has just been rendered perfect. The sale of a coal mine at auction at a time when coal is rapidty becoming a luxury unob-tainable even by the wealthy would naturally be expected to excite great competition among capitalists. A mine of such extent, however, could be worked only by a large corporation. and the leading coal companies are probably too much embarrassed by the strike of the miners to care to add new mines to those they already own and are unable to work. At any rate the attendance at the sale was small, and the mines were bld in after two blds had been made for one cent per ton .- N. Y. Post, last evening.

-A new Chinese temple has just been finished in San Francisco. Before it was opened for worship a wooden figure of a horse, supposed to belong to the gate-keeper of hell, was burned, and afterwards the elligy of the gate-keeper as set in flame, in order to keep the doing in New York for | evil spirit away.
