OBITUARY.

Baren Joseph Ectvos. The recent death of Baron Joseph Ectvos, celebrated Hungarian literary man, is announced in the latest foreign journals. He wrote a number of comedies, tragedies, and other works, prominent among which were "The Carthusian," "The Village Notary," and "Hungary in 1514." He also published a number of treatises on "Reform," "Pauperism in Ireland," "The Influence of Modern Ideas on Government and Society," and kindrel subjects. In the early days of the struggle for Hungarian independence he was a fellow-worker with Kossuth and was always a consistent and moderate liberal. He was Minister of Public Instruction both in 1848 and 1867, and the latter year he also was Minister of Public Worship. He was a frequent contributor to the newspapers and was an ardent advocate for a free press. His death was sincerely mourned both in Buda-Pesth and Vienna.

M. Brassay.

Mr. Brassey, an English railway magnate, recently died in London, and it is said that the fortune he bequeathed was the largest which ever passed the Probate Court of London. M. Brassey made his money by contracts, and he was connected with most of the important railway enterprises of England. His fortune is believed to have exceeded $40,000,000 in American currency.

THE BRITISH ARMY.

The Movement Towards Abolishing the Pur-chase System-Exposition of the Oid Abuse.

Mr. Trevelyan, member of Parliament, has lately occupied a prominent place among the amateur reformers of the British military service, and is also foremost among those who speak "right out." The first ingredient in the panacea he proposes for the relief of British prestige is the removal of the Duke of Cambridge, commander-in-chief. The necessity of that step appears to be generally felt in England. Mr. Trevelyan in a recent speech attacked him for his defense of the purchase system, and gave the following vigorous exposition of the working of that system:-

army as compared with those in foreign armies, Mr. Trevelyan said that the great cause of expense was not the sums paid to officers serving, but the sums that had to be paid to officers to compensate them for the losses they underwent by the purchase system. The number of officers were unable to sell out, and those who died and whose widows were con who 10 quently thrown upon the world, was so great that for the two hundred years the system had lasted, a great system of compensation for losses by purchase had started up under the name of half-pay, widows' pensions, payments to generals and honorary colo nels, and payments for distinguished services. N less than £335,000 a year was paid in half-pay, and the principal use of that was to enable men to be promoted who could not afford the purchase, and to facilitate the system of purchase and compensate for it.

"In the Indian army there was no purchase, and out of 7000 officers only 404 were on half-pay; but out of our 10,000 officers there were in one year 2861 on half pay. That was to say, those were the men who were ruined through the purchase system and had to be provided for. We paid £73 000 to generals whether they were employed or not, and we were collect to have a great number-no less than 234, though only 42 were actively employed. We paid £163,500 a year in honorary coloncicies, and the money was said to be for pensions, but it was really jobs. A few got money who ought to have pensions, but the majority got it by favor. "The truth was, that a sinecure post was not the way to pay a man. What they ought to do was to itx the number of officers at the number that was Is the number of oncers at the number that was wanted, to pay them fully for their services, and when they had served a certain time to pay them a pension in proportion to the time served, and to their income. To widows £155,600 a year was paid. and in many cases it was a very proper thing: but in other cases, the ladies were the widows of mea well off. For distinguished services £27,000 a year was paid; but it was not all paid, as it should be, to old and meritoricus officers, but to men having influence and connections. £40,000 a year was influence and connections. As 40,000 a year was paid to army agents the bankers of the army-for whom there was no necessity. They were in grea favor at the Horse Guards, and up to quite recently it was thought as much as the position of a cabinet minister was worth to say any thing against those agents. They were men who, when called to give evidence before commissioners Appointed to ex-minister into army matters had as if they were amine into army matters, had-as, if they were thieves giving evidence against each other-to have it stipulated that what they said would not be used against them. Of the £40,000, £30,000 want to one firm. The system was a dirty one, and it w.'s a bio and a disgrace to a Liberal Parilament to have been ten years under the guidance of a Liberal Government without having done away with it. After remarking that the people should see that the militia was properly people should see that the militia was properly officered by responsible military officers, and that the troops provided should be real troops officered by real officers, Mr. Trevelyan said two principal points to be insisted on were abolition of the par-chase system and of the Horse Guards. Referring to the recent statement made at Manchester by Lord Derby, to the effect that the Royal family had only two or three military posts open to them, and that it was very doubtful whether those posts would long remain open to them, Mr. Trevelyan said he wondered his lordship's remarks had not been taken netice of in high quarters."

His disabilities have been removed, and he is described as a man of irreproachable private character, conservative in his temper and principles, a lawyer of high reputation, and a Southern man in his sentiments, interests, family associations, and sympathies, although born in a Northern State.

-One stormy, blustering night in January, a verdant couple presented themselves at the re-sidence of a certain Norfolk clergyman, re-questing to be married. After the ceremony was performed, the happy groom, pocket-book in hand, asked: "Wall, Squire, what's to pay?" The astonished and expectant reverend modestly replied that he never named his price for any such service, but accepted whatever any one was pleased to give him. The money was returned to the capacious pocket with a grin and a bow. "Wall, I'm obleeged to ye, I deand a bow. "Wall, I'm oblegged to ye, I de-clare; I'll do as much for you some time." "Yes," chimed in the blushing bride, with an astonishing courtsy, "much obliged to ye, as fur as I'm consarned. If it a hadn't a stermed we should have yone to Dedham!" we should have gone to Dedham !"

-Rev. Dr. Henry surprised some of the at-tendants at a temperance meeting in Litchfield. Conn., the other evening, by recommending the temperate use of wine at meals.

-A leading Democratic paper in Alabama is kind enough to admit that "the old Virginia soldier, General Winfield Scott, although he tarnished his honor and stained his sword by drawing it like a renegade against the land of his birth, still is not without reputation for former glorious services."

-A Washington school-boy has a grievance, and writes about it to the Star thus:-"When a boy goes to School in the morning an Forgets to Sharpin his Pencil Why then of Corse he Hast to do it in School And if he dos his Teacher Takes His knife away from him. Then he goes home An tels his Father an he Makes a fus. But he never gets his Knife." —A school-girl in Fernandina, Fla., a few nights ago, turned down the wick of her kercsene lamp, and as it continued to smoke she placed a book on the top of the chimney. In a moment a fearful explosion took place, which set fire to her dress, to the curtains, and to the adjacent wood work, and she was fatally burned, dying the next morning. —General Sherman, President of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee, announces that its fifth regular meeting will be held in Cincin-nati on the 6th and 7th of April. Colonel John W. Noble, of the 8d Iowa Cavalry, will deliver the annual address. Every officer who at any time served with honor in the army and departments is, by the constitution, entitled to mem-bership, and all such, as well as members of kindred societies, are invited to attend the meeting.

-General Early has cautioned the Southern -General Early has cautioned the Southern people to beware of swindlers who profess to act for the benefit of the Lee Monum Sat Fund. He says that the association big declined to have any connection whatever with any scheme for raising money by exhibitions, lotterles, gift en-terprise, or the like, as it depends entirely upon the voluntary contributions of individuals di-rectly to the fund in their own names. Nor have any travelling agents been appointed to act for the association in any part of the country. -Hop. Reverdy Johnson, in a recent letter of
