OF NEW BOOKS

-From Porter & Coates we have received 'Crown Jewels; or, the Dream of an Empire,' by Emma L. Moffett. Published by Carleton. When we state that this is an historical romance, with Maximilian, the bogus Emperor of Mexico, for its hero, and that its author is not only a woman but a Southern woman, Columbus, Georgia, being her dwelling-place, we have given a tolerable hint with regard to what may be expected by those who propose to peruse it. The chief characteristic of the feminine novelists of the sunny South is gush, but the exuberant sentimentalism of Miss Evans, the authoress of "Valerie Aylmer," and other ladies who head the by no means extensive list of Southern novel writers, is tameness beside the "fine frenzy" of the writer of "Crown Jewels." The opening lines of this remarkable performance will give our readers an idea of its quality:-

"The sun is westering slowly towards its setting. The low, murky clouds that have hung as a pail over the earth, are glided and brightened by the lengthening rays, and are saling away—away—over the horizon, to be in it at the close of the day. 'The flashing and foaming waves have left the sea, and all her isles in cam at last,' and in the silent heart of the overan are wavelength. of the ocean are murmuring their night song, a soft serenade, to the 'Genil of the deep' dreaming in the coral caves. The golden beams glance trembling; athwart each tree and tower, and anon on the breeze comes the soft cooing of the cushat, echoing farther and farther, and still more faintly, till at last the gentle notes float into nothingness in the deep of the forest. The grey-winged eagle is fleeing over the golden hill-tops to the mountain eyry, where the young birds wait, eager for the mother's coming; and low in the valleys, the wild flowers lift their pale, snowy faces upward, watching for the return kiss of the dew-drop that had fled with the morning brightness. "Sunset in Brussels!"

The reader may well exclaim at the very beginning of the story, "More matter and less art," especially as four pages further on there is another "Sunset in Brussels," and on the next page to that an equally elaborate "Sunset at the field of Waterloo." On page 16 we are told how-

"The protean face of day has shown its last "The protean face of day has shown its fast change; the slow-walking twilight has in her dusky robes passed through the city; and, as the misty shadow of her veil is lifted from the blue ether, the stars creep out in the high dome above, until the vaulted roof of heaven is thick inlaid with 'patines of bright gold,' and in their midst the fall-orbed on 'proclaims the silent reign of night'

all of which is so far satisfactory as it assured ns of the fact that the sun actually has set in

Chapter second describes the natal morn of the unfortunate Maximilian in this style: -

"The morning sun of July 6, 1832, that sent its beams over the towers and steeples of Vienna, bathing in golden light the green sward about the beautiful palace of Schonbrunn, tipping with its beautiful pance of Schonbrunn, tipping with its brightness the gigantic elms, through whose branches the summer breezes played lightly to and fro, heralding the natal day of Ferdinand Maximilian Joseph, Archduke of Austria, second son of Francis Charles (brother to the then reigning Emperor Ferdinand), and likewise grandson, but two degrees removed from the famous Maria Theresa, once Empress of Austria, whose renown fills so large a part of the history of the past century."

Having fairly introduced her hero and heroine on the scene, the writer traces their history, with descriptive digressions like those quoted above occurring at every few pages of the narrative, from their marriage to the sad tragedy of Queretaro. She evidently sympathized strongly with the attempt to establish an empire in Mexico, and her imagination fairly runs riot when she undertakes to describe the scenes of royal state amid which Maximilian and his wife are supposed to have moved. In this respect she fairly out-Disraelis Disraeli, for the efflorescence of "Lothair" cannot be put in comparison with the gushingness of "Crown Jewels," which, with the above hints with regard to its quality, we commend to the notice of those who admire the style of writing affected by its authoress.

-Porter & Coates also send us the last published volume of the uniform edition of Hans Christian Andersen's works now being issued by Hurd & Houghton. This is the complement of the "Wonder Stories told to Children," which has already been published, and it contains the balance of Mr. Andersen's short stories and sketches, such as "The Picture Book without Pictures," one of the most delightful series of short sketches ever written. "The Ice Maiden," "The Little Match Girl." "A Story from the Sand Hills," "Little Tak," and a great number of others. Many of these stories and sketches are very slight, but they are all characterized by the graceful fancy, the genial humor, and the poetical spirit which give the least of Andersen's performences a positive value, and the volume before us is a perfect treasury of wholesome sweets for both old and young, for those who can enjoy Hans Christian Andersen's writings at all never lose their taste for them at any age.

-From Claxton, Remsen & Haffelfinger we have received "Notes, Explanatory and Practical, on the Acts of the Apostles," by Rev. Albert Barnes. Published by Harper & Brothers. This work is so well known that it needs no special recommendation. It fills a place occupied by no other commentary, and for Sunday-schools and Bible classes, as weil as for the edification of individual students of the Gospel, it fully deserves its great popularity.

-From Claxton, Remsen & Haffelfinger we have also received "The Conversion of St. Paul," by Rev. George Jarvis Geer, D. D. Published by Samuel R. Wells. This volume consists of three discourses, the object of which is to prove that the conversion of St. Paul was a conclusive evidence in itself of the truth of the Christian religion. The argument of Dr. Geer is logical, and the work is one which may be read with profit by believers as well as doubters.

-Henry Carey Baird, No. 406 Walnut street, sends us "A Complete Guide for Coach-Painters," translated from the French of M. Arlot by A. A. Fesquet. This work contains a great amount of valuable practical information with regard to all the details of the art of coach-painting. An appendix gives information respecting the materials and the practice of coach-painting and varnishing in the United States and Great Britain, Price $1*25. Mr. Baird also sends us "An Inaugural Address" delivered before the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale College, October 5, 1870, by William P. Trewbridge, Professor of Dynamic Engineering, which contains many valuable ideas and suggestions. This address will be sent free by mail on application.

-"The Lover's Library" is the fitle of collection of tales of sentiment and passion published by J. S. Redfield. The volume before us contains "The Devil's Pool," by George Sand; "The Story of Leonard and Margaret," from Southey's "Doctor;" "The Maid of Malines," by Bulwer; and "Patty's Revenge," by an anonymous writer. These stories are all excellent, and if the succeeding volumes of the series are up to the same standard, the "Lover's Library" will deserve an extensive popularity. Received from J. B. Lippincott & Co.

-T. B. Peterson & Brothers send us a cheap edition of "Charles O'Malley," by Charles Lever. This is one of the most entertaining novels ever written, and its rich humor and lively, dashing style make it as much a favorite to-day as it was twenty years

-From T. B. Peterson & Brothers we have also received "Mad Monkton" and other short stories by Wilkie Collins, and "The Black Tulip," a product of the novel-manufacturing establishment of Alexander Dumas.

-No. 13 of "A History of the State of Delaware," by Francis Vincent, which we have received from John Campbell, No. 740. Sansom street, brings the work down to the events of 1664.

-The Central News Company, No. 505 Chesnut street, send us the February numbers of Temple Bar and London Society, and also the latest numbers of Punch and Fun. -From W. S. Turner we have received the March number of Our Boys and Girls, which contains a variety of interesting reading matter for young people.

-The Little Corporal for March contains several clever illustrations and a number of entertaining stories and sketches.

-The Phrenological Journal, which we have received from J. L. Capen, contains several biographies of distinguished men and a variety of articles on "bumpology" and kindred subjects.

-T. Ellwood Zell sends us No. 56 of 'Zell's Popular Encyclopedia," which brings the work down to the title "Tymochte."

A NEW POEM BY CHATTERTON.

A correspondent of the London Athenaum thinks that he has discovered a poem by Chatterton which has not hitherto been included in his collected works. He writes as

In the Universal Magazine for November. 1769, I find a poem which has every claim to be by Chatterton, though not included in any edition of his works. The external and internal evidences all point that way. The external evidences are (1) the date of its appearance; (2) the mention of Bristol and the severn; (3) the signature "C," used by him on other occasions, in preference to "T. C.," which were also the initials of Thomas Cary; and (4) the address to Miss L-, who may have been the same as the person of whom he afterwards wrote—"If Miss Love has no objection to having a crambo song on her name published, it shall be done." It is even possible that the poem here printed, beginning, be it observed, with the word Love, s the very "crambo song" referred to; for it was a common practice with Chatterton to alter a poem very slightly, and to produce it a second time. The internal evidences are supplied by comparison with other poems. For example, he writes to Miss Hoyland, in the same metre, as follows:-

O! haste to give my passion ease And bid the perturbation cease That harrows up my soul! The joy such happiness to find Would make the functions of my mind In peace and love to rell.

Again, the "noxious vapors" and the snakes occur also in his "Burlesque Elegy on Lady Betty's Cat: "-Ye noxious vapors, fall upon my head, Ye writhing adders, round my feet en wine; Ye toads, your venom in my foot-path spread; whilst the spellings of Severne and eccho occur in the Rowley Poems. I subjoin the poem itself, as originally rinted. WALTER W. SEEAT. printed.

THE COMPLAINT.

Addressed to Miss P- L-, of Bristol. Love, lawless tyrant of my breast. When will my passions be at rest,
And in soft murmurs roll—
When will the dove-ey'd goddess, Peace,
Bid black despair and torment cease, And wake to joy my soul? Adieu! ye flow'r-bespangled hills; dieu! ye softly-purling rills, That through the meadows play; Adicu! the cool refreshing shade, By hoary oaks and woodbines made, Where oft with joy I lay. No more beneath your boughs I hear, With pleasure unallay'd by fear, The distant Severne roar-

Adieu! the forest's mossy aide Deck'd out in Flora's richest pride: Ye can delight no more. Oft at the solitary hour When Melancholy's silent pow'r Is gliding through the shade; With raging Madness by her side, Whose hands, in blood and murder dy'd, Display the reeking blade, I catch the eccho of their feet, And follow to their drear retreat Of deadliest nightshade wove: There, stretch'd upon the dewy ground, Whilst noxious vapors rise around, I sigh my tale of love.

Oft has the solemn bird of night, When rising to his gloomy flight, Unseen against me fled! Whilst snakes in curling orbs uproll'd, Bedrop'd with azure, flame, and gold, Hurl'd poison at my head. O say! thou best of womankind, hou miracle, in whom we find Wit, charms, and sense unite, Can plagues like these be always borne? No; if I still must meet your scorn,

I'll seek the realms of night. ►Louisiana's debt is $28,000,000. -The United States Mint coined last year $22,257,312 gold, and $1,757,253 silver. -Maine's fishing fleet in 1870 consisted of 786 vessels, employing 5228 men.
