THE DARLY EVENING THE SCHAPE .- PHILADELPHIA WEDNESDAY, BUILDAY

-From J. B. Lippincott & Co. we have received "Poems," by Lucy Hamilton Hamper, a collection of original and translated process which have many positive merits. Mrs. Hooper is a graceful and elegant versifier, and the pieces in the volume beforens on all he perused with pleasure by cultivated readers. They indicate, however, poetical appreciation and culture rather than poetical genius in the author, who, like many another climber of Parnassus, has not been able to win the best favors of Apolio. Mrs. Hooper's translations from the German and French are uniformly well done, and some of them are exceedingly felicitous. A fine steel-plate portrait of the author appropriately fronts the title-page and adds to the attractions of her book.

J. B. Lippincott & Co., also send us the March numbers of The Sunday Magazine, ood Words, and Good Words for the Young, all of which are handsomely illustrated, and are filled with stories, sketches, and poems for old and young, from the pens of some of the best English writers of the day.

-Porter & Coates send us "From Fourteen to Fourscore," by Mrs. S. W. Jewell, published by Hurd & Houghton, and "Out of the Fosm," by John Esten Cooke, published by Carleton. "From Fourteen to Fourscore" professes to be an autobiography, and it is rather a record of events and reminiscences then a connected story. The work is written in a quiet vein, and is characterized by strong religious feeling. It is not lacking in humor, however, and there are some excellent sketches of character and some fine bits of doscription which will commend it to readers whose tastes incline not to the sensational.

"Out of the Foam" is the work of a writer of talent, who writes too rapidly for the good of his reputation. The story is constructed with considerable ingenuity, and is written in lively, animated style which maintains an unbroken thread of interest. It is impossible, however, to read any of the novels of Mr. Cooke without thinking that they might have been much better than they are if the author had avoided the mock heroics and placed his undoubted abilities rather more under discipline. As it is, his novels lack finish, and their crudities repel readers of culture, upon whose approval alone can a writer build a permanent reputation.

-"Checkmate," which we have received from Evans, Stoddart & Co., is a new novel by J. S. Le Fanu, which has been published in advance of its appearance in Europe by a special arrangement with the author. Le Fanu is one of the most talented novel writers of the day, and "Checkmate" is an intensely interesting story, which few readers will care to lay down until it is finished. The plot is very ingenious, and the leading characters are sketched in a masterly manner, while the denouement is exceedingly effective.

-From Clax on, Remsen & Haffelfinger we have received "The Earle's Deane," by R. E. Francillon, an elaborate and entertaining novel of England and French life which has just been issued from the press of Harper & Bro: hers.

-From W. S. Gray we have received the following recent publications of the American Tract Society:-

"Short Sermons for the People," by Rev. William S. Plumer, D. D., contains thirtyfive short, practical discourses which appeal directly to the soul and conscience of the reader, and which can scarcely fail to effect much good.

"Life at Threescore and Ten," by Rev. Albert Barnes, is a revision made by the author of the discourse delivered in the First Presbyterian Church in this city on December 8, 1868. It was originally published at the request of his friends, and this revised edition was prepared expressly for the American Tract Society, which undertook to give it a more extensive circulation.

"The New Life" contains religious counsel for inquirers and converts, and gives explanations of the practical precepts of religion and encouragement to those who hesitate and doubt.

-T. B. Peterson & Brothers send us "The Queen's Revenge" and a variety of other entertaining short stories and sketches by Wilkie Collins, and "Western Scenes; or, Life on the Prairie," by John S. Robb ("Solitaire"), a collection of humorous sketches descriptive of life in the wild

The harbor of St. Joseph is pronounced, in a report to the United States engineers, to be the finest on Lake Michigan.

A fine of $10 is imposed upon parties who unsuccessfully hang themselves in front of other people's houses, in New Orleans.

A story comes from Connecticut that a man, whose son, being under age, married against his will, took offense thereat and got himself appointed guardian over him. Then, under a law which permits a guardian to sell the property of a minor to an amount not exceeding $300, with-which permits a guardian to sell the property of a minor to an amount not exceeding $300, without advertising it, he obtained permission of a Judge of probate to sell his son's half interest, worth $20,000, in his grandfather's estate, and without the boy's knowledge, did sell it to a Sheriff for the paltry sum of $275, and by him It was transferred to the son's mother at the same price. And now the boy, thus defrauded of his inheritance, proposes to see if the Courts of Connecticut will tolerate the proceeding.

A FINANCIAL CRISIS IN TURKEY.

The holders of Turkish bonds are so accustomed to hear gloomy prophecies respecting their investments that they probably will not be much affected by the observations of the Lecant Herald, which would seem to show that the Porte is fast drifting into the gravest financial crisis it has experienced since the Crimean war. The whole of the January coupons will be paid, but it will be under pressure of such difficulty as no previous iquidation has ever entailed on the Treasury. During the last six or eight years, including the conversion of the consolides, $420,000,000 has been added to the debt of the country. scarcely a shilling of which has been spent on reproductive public works. Taxation has been stretched to its outside limits—the capital alone being now left for a further turn of the fiscal screw-yet the annual excess of expenditure over revenue has gone on increasing till the deficit of the present year will, it is said, fall little short of $25,000,000. A portion of this large sum must no doubt be debited to the extra military preparations necessitated by the recent move of Russia, and to the Yemen expedition; but the balance is still much in excess of the deficit of any recent years, and can only be explained by the wasteful expenditure which now seems to have become a fixed law of Turkish administration. Since 1854 a total of nearly $500,000,000 of public debt has been incurred; of this it is true about $60,000,000, has been baid off, but the balance still entails an annual charge of nearly $35,000,000, or little short of one half of the whole net revenue of the country. There remain, however, vast material resources not only unpledged, but which are as yet fiscally untouched, and which if utilized would go far to relieve the Turkish Treasury once for all from its embarrassments, and spare it the necessity of resorting to further loans. The resources in question are the almost limitless mineral wealth of the country, and the vast forests which abound within easy reach of the sea in both halves of the empire. At the very doors of the capital the coal-mines of Heraclea might be either leased or sold for a lump sum which would tell sensibly on the year's budget, while the deposits of silver, copper, and other metals which also abound in both the European and Asiatic provinces might be simiturned into gold. There are also the splendid tracts of forest fringing the coast on the banks of a score of rivers which offer easy means of transport to the sea, in plenty enough to feed a host of new native industries and supply half the Western timber markets besides. Add to all this store of wealth what might be further realized by the sale of crown lands, and the roughest estimate of the whole will, in the opinion of the Levant Herald, show that the Porte is very far indeed from insolvency; that it has, on the contrary, a reserve capital which needs only to be made available to render the Turkish Treasury one of the easiest in Europe. On the other hand, it must be remembered that a nation which borrows money has many advantages over one that "utilizes its resources." In the present temper of the civilized world a reputation for poverty is to a certain extent a safeguard against the cupidity of Christian neighbors. Debts may as a last resource be repudiated, but resources admit of no repudiation. In time of trouble a nation's resources, like its sins, are sure to find it out, and therefore any nation nowadays that has the good fortune to possess resources may act wisely by keeping them carefully in the background even at the cost of raising loans at an exorbitant rate of interest.
