PRESIDENTIAL PROCLAMATION ON KU-KLUX OUT-BAGES.

By the President of the United States, a proclamation: -

Whereas, It is provided in the Constitution of the United States that the United States shall protect every State in this Union, on application of the Legislature or of the Ex-ecutive when the Legislature cannot be convened, against domestic violence; and

Whereas, It is provided in the laws of the United States that, in all cases of insurrection in any State or by obstruction to the laws thereof, it shall be lawful for the President of the United States, on application of the Legislature of such State, or of the Executive when the Legislature cannot be convened, to call forth the militia of any other State or States, or to employ such part of the land and paval forces as shall be judged necessary for the purpose of suppressing such insurrection, or of causing the laws to be duly executed; and

Whereas, I have received information that combinations of armed men are now disturbing the peace and safety of the citizens of the State of South Carolina, and committing acts of violence in said State of a character and to an extent which renders the power of the State and its officers unequal to the task of protecting life and property, and securing public order therein; and

Whereas, The Legislature of said State is ot now in session and cannot be convened in time to meet the present emergency, and the Executive of said State has therefore made application to me for such part of the military force of the United States as may be necessary and adequate to protect said State and the citizens thereof against the domestic violence hereinbefore mentioned, and to enforce the due execution of the laws, and Whereas, The laws of the United States require that whenever it may be necessary in the judgment of the President to use the military force for the purpose aforesaid, he shall forthwith, by proclamation, command such insurgents to disperse and retire peace-ably to their respective abodes within a limitary force to the purpose and retire peace above the process of the peace and retire peace. ted time. Now, therefore, I, Ulysses Grant, President of the United States, do hereby command the persons composing the unlawful combinations aforesaid to disperse and to retire peaceably to their respective abodes within twenty days from this date. In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done in the city of Washington, this 28th day of March, in the year of our Lord 1871,

THE MERIDIAN MASSACRE.

A Tale of Bloodshed and Horror. The New York Tribune has a detailed account of the outrages in Mississippi, from which we extract the following: —

A little later the body of William Dennis was dragged from the court-room to the porch, an I, bleeding, as it was from several builet-wounds it was tossed to the street below amid the shouls and jeers of the crowds. Signs of life being still discoverable, some one kindly cut his throat from ear to ear. At this time there were lying dead in the room the bodies of Justice Bramlette and the negro Gus. Ford, with an old man,

Isnac Lee, badly wounded in the shoulder. All over town crowds of frenzied whites were rushing in every direction, hunting this and that prominent black in order to kill him, and committing outrages of every kind on the others. As night came on, as f to be in at the death, a crowd of the Alabama Ku-klux appeared in town and took a hand with the rest. They were heard shouting, "Hurrah for Alabama," at various times, and committed several outrages on the blacks. One of their victims, after being stripped and flogged in a terrible manner, and having several buckshot fired into his body, was allowed to escape, and at the present writing lies in a helpless condition in a colored hotel in Jackson. To tell the whole of the outrages that were thus committed would fill page after page. As an evidence of the state of feeling at the time, however, I will give the statement of an aged gentleman, an old citizen, and one of undoutted veracity. At the hotel, immediately after the affray in the Court House, he heard the proposition made to go up and have a look at the dead bodies. He accompanied the party and saw the bodies of the Justice and the negro, Gus. Ford, lying weltering in their blood, both-dead. Close by lay the aged negro, Isaac Lee, badly wounded. Theold negro, fearing that they had come to kill kim, was much alarmed. He endeavored to reassure him, telling him no one would hurt him, in his condition. The black replied, "Don't know bout dat, Massa," but seemed to feel better. The party soon left. At the foot of the stairs the old gentlemen was horrified at the proposition to go back and kill the poor old wounded negro. He remonstrated, saying, "You are not fiends." and finally persuaded the party to give up their purpose. A little later the black somehow got out of the house, and found his way to his cabin, but a gang of human bloodhounds came along in search of prey. They had with them already, as prisoners, two blacks, named Marion White and Henry Johnson; but they seized upon the old man, Isaac Lee, wounded as he was, and marched him off with the others. The next morning the bodies of the whole three were found in the woods close by. The Hon. Aaron Moore, member of the Mississippi House of Representatives, stood immediately by Justice Bramlette when the first shot was fired. As the Justice fell, Moore fell with him, the dead body of the Justice on top. Without doubt this saved his life. Lying thus, covered with the blood of the dead Justice, he very naturally passed for dead himself. A few moments, and the room being temporarily cleared, he made his escape to his house. A crowd, finding he was still alive, set up the hue and cry, and gang after gang started in pursuit. Leaving his house immediately, he took to the woods. One gang, arriving a little later, and finding the bird flown, turned his wife and children out of doors and set fire to the house, morning a large crowd of armed men! got on the train bound for Jackson, 93 miles distant, and put off a portion of their number at every principal station. Aaron Moore, the representative from their district, minister of the Gospel, and leading adviser among the blacks, they were bound to have. Moore, however, struck off on foot, giving the railroad a wide berth. He weighed probably two hundred and fifty pounds, and had nothing to eat save what he could procure at a negro cabin in a sparsely settled country. He trudged through the woods night and day for a distance of 125 weighed down with anxiety for the fate

Friday, where he has since been joined by the rest of his family, save one son, a young man, who he justly fears has been murdered. How many fell victims to this massacre it is almost impossible to tell. A large number are missing; doubtless many of these will still turn up, but in the opinion of the chief of the so-called State Detective force, probably no less than 25 or 30 have been killed.

of his family, and with the human bloodhounds on his track. Eluding all of his pursuers, however, he came into Jackson on the following
