BISMARCK AT HOME.

Furious speech against the Polish members in the German Reichstag. He tells them Poland is no nation, and the Poles may thank their stars they are cared for by Prussia.

Though the draft of the German Constitution which has been submitted to the Reichstag differs from that which was accepted a few years ago by Northern Germany only by a change of terms, "German" being substituted for "North German," and so on, the introduction of the measure has given rise to long and warm debates.

This is not the first time your attention has been occupied by a discussion of the fundamental question which the gentleman who has just spoken has raised. I may, therefore, confine myself to making a short reply to the statements of the gentleman of former sittings of the Reichstag and of the Prussian Landtag for a proof of the errors contained in the motion before you, and in the words of the gentleman who has just spoken, I will confine myself to the motion before you, and in the words of the gentleman who has just spoken, I will confine myself to the motion before you.

When the "Eric Classification" bill was pending in the House many Republicans promised to go with it, and I have no doubt that many of them have done so. I have no doubt that many of them have done so. I have no doubt that many of them have done so.

Your existence in this country, gentlemen, would be intolerable if I were to treat you as you treated the Germans you had conquered. The gentleman who has just spoken has had an opportunity of celebrating the anniversary of a day memorable in the history of the town of Thorn, when Polish rulers sought to oppress the Polish people.

After several other members had addressed the House, Prince Bismarck again rose and said: "Gentlemen:—I am aware I should be acting more in harmony with the expectations of the Assembly if I were not to speak at present only so as to prevent another of those sordid and vulgar speculations which the good will of my parliamentary opponents has frequently attributed to me."

Breach of Promise Case at Franklin, Pa.—$3800 for a Lacerated Heart—Spicy Love Letters. The great breach of promise case at Franklin, Pa., of Jennie McBride vs. I. I. Wagner, has just been concluded by the rendering of a comfortable verdict for the desolate Jennie.

There is a divinity that shapes our ends. The next letter is from Pittsburgh, July 18, 1868. After a reverberate over the past, Mr. Wagner says: "I felt that there was a power—a magnetism—drawing us together that defied all the vicissitudes of life, and all the machinations of an uncharitable and ungrateful world."

WINANS' DEFENSE.

He Endeavors to Defend His Apostasy—His Reasons are His Duty to the State and His Love of Erie.

The following letter has just been issued by Mr. O. B. Winans in defense of his recent action in the New York Legislature:—To the People of the State of New York:—My actions within the past few days as a member of the Legislature have been the occasion of varied and remarkable comment, and accusations of an ungenerous and damning character have been made against me.

The unfortunate occurrence of Friday evening, the 17th instant, is still fresh in the mind of every one. Excitement ran high, and very many felt deeply the breach which had been inflicted upon the dignity and proprieties of the House. An investigating committee was ordered, which entered upon its duties, and in the course of its investigation many were the surmises as to what would be the verdict of the committee.

On City, Pa., March 21, 1869.—Miss Jennie:—Your letter of the 18th reaches me, and I am sorry you are not well. You say again that you were "bitterly and cruelly deceived," and that you "do not believe in your own conduct." I never admit candidly, as I believe, you know that you are at fault in existing troubles.

On City, Pa., May 11, 1869.—Miss Jennie:—You say, "I cannot imagine how you could suppose me said." I will simply say that I had reason to suppose you satisfied, if there is such a thing as honor in the human family in our age. But I am not going to discuss this subject further.

Rumors of Cabinet Changes.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Southern Outrages Committee. The Joint Commission to investigate Southern Affairs have adjourned to meet on the 17th of May. They appointed a sub-committee to meet on the 10th of May to arrange a plan of operations and attend to necessary business here.

The Island of San Juan. One of the most troublesome questions brought before the Joint High Commission, the settlement of the boundary concerning the island of San Juan, has, it is said, been adjusted, so far as the commission is authorized to act. The island has been in the joint occupancy of the two Governments for fifteen years.

Senators and Members. Notwithstanding the large exodus of Senators and members last evening the different departments are overrunning to-day with Senators finishing up the business of their constituents. Most of the Senators will remain here for the extra session, especially those who reside at a distance.

Cabinet Changes. There is a general impression that after the President returns from St. Louis he will make several important changes in the Cabinet. It is thought that Fish, Boutwell, and Aconman will retire. There is a good deal of speculation as to who will succeed them, but there is nothing definite known on the subject.

Revenue Expenses. A comparative statement of expenses for collecting the revenue for the three months ending March, 1870, and March, 1871, shows a reduction of four hundred thousand dollars. The Republican Expenses for this District. There is much satisfaction in administration circles over the Republican victory here yesterday, while the Democrats are much disappointed and discouraged.
