SECRET SESSIONS.

From the N. Y. Tribuns. We perceive that our Methodist brethren, whose liberal course with regard to healthy amusements we commended lately, are again in conference, and devoted the first day of their session to a discussion as to the expediency of excluding all reporters, in consequence of the notoriety given to their former proceedings. They made no charge against the accuracy of the reports. The sole objection to them was, as we understand, that when the reverend gentlemen assembled to talk over church affairs in an informal manner (with coats and gloves off and grammar loose), they did not wish nor expect to "call in for an audience the myriad readers of the New York press." Now it seems to us that in this objection our friends betrayed as little of the wisdom of the serpent as the harmlessness of the dove. In the first place, they know little of the genuine reporter not to understand that a locked door only whets his appetite. If they invite and urge him to their conference, most likely he will treat them and their feast of reason with but slight notice; but let him scent a secret, and he will follow it like a sleath-hound till it is dragged out and torn to pieces before all men in the high-

On the other hand, wby, pray, should they not have for an audience all New York, or all the country? When the reporter of the press pries into private affairs, listening at the key-holes of back doors for the secrets and griefs of domestic life, in order that they may blazon them abroad for so much a line, he becomes one of the most disgusting leeches that prey upon modern society. No man who draws his livelihood from the vulgarer tastes and most prurient passions of other men can justify his right to live among them. But a religious conference is not domestic life. These protesting clergymen are by no means in the position of a club of gentlemen who meet privately to exchange their views upon a matter of business, and command the right to secrecy. Clergymen are men who have set themselves conspicuously apart to influence the world in a particular, emphasized manner, and when they confer together, not only the church which employs them, but the world on which they are to act, has a right to hear and judge them. How else are they to decide upon their fitness for the missionary work they have undertaken? "If the trumpet give forth an uncertain sound how shall we prepare ourselves for the battle?" Consequently, let there be no trumpet-blow-ing behind closet doors or under bushel measures. No minister of God who has his work earnestly in hand and keeps his life and words conformed in integrity to that work need be afraid of the "myriad readers of the New York press," even if his grammar is rusty and his style slipshod. Let him speak out his opinion, and the louder the better. Bad grammar and loose English we all know so well nowadays that they pass without notice. But a good man doing his work steadily and humbly, be it great or small, is a sight which all mankind turns the second time to look at. Why then cover it up in a corner?

ENGLISH AND AMERICAN TAXATION.

From the N. Y. Times. Mr. Lowe's first excursion into American finance has ended disastrously. In deference to "the violence of the opposition," a tax equal to a cent on each box of matches of a similar retail value has been withdrawn. The mobs of Palace-yard showed the Government how much political capital Mr. Disraeli could make out of this unpopular imposition. In bowing to the storm, they have exhibited precisely the kind of prudence the possession of which might have enabled Charles I, of unhappy memory, to retain his kingdom and his head, and might have helped that most pig-headed of monarchs, George III, to secure for another generation the allegiance of his American colonies. But the difficulties of the Government are not over yet. The juggler's task of keeping half a dozen balls spinning in the air at the same moment is a trifle compared with the obligations they are pledged to carry out. They have to keep their place among a number of great powers armed to the teeth, and by two of whom they might, any day, be challenged to mortal combat. Hence the necessity for a reorganized army, and an increase of the national stock of the newest and most effective weapons, involving an outlay of some two or three millions sterling. As an essential part of army reform, and as a sop to the "fierce Democracy," the abolition of promotion by purchase comes in with a demand on this year's expenditure for one or two millions more. Altogether, the Governmust must raise nearly twenty-five millions of dollars to meet the additional demands made upon the National Treasury. From last year there is a surplus of some ten millions of dollars, but as six millions of this will be swallowed up in the abolition of the house tax, which is to be removed to make way for a uniform system of local taxation, the deficiency is not sensibly diminished.

To understand the significance of this taxation problem in Great Britain, a comparison with our own burdens may be instructive. The English Chancellor of the Exchequer asks from the nation for the expenditure of the coming year, $360,000,000. Mr. Boutwell calculated that our own expenditure, exclusive of any payments to account of the redemption of the public debt, would amount, for the year ending June 30, 1872, something short of $310,000,000. The appropriation actually made by Congress reduced the total still lower. Of course, this represents but one side of the contrast. The national taxation of the two countries cannot be called identical in kind, since our State burdens cover a number of items which in England are charged to the people at large. The elaborate figures of Mr. Goschen, compiled with a view to the reform of local taxation in Great Britain, enable us to make the parallel tolerably complete. He shows that in England and Wales the annual sum raised by locat rates amounts to $150,000,000. Including Ireland and Scotland in the estimate, in proportion to their population, we place the aggregate of local taxation in Great Britain at $225,000,000 per annum. Added to the amount expected from national taxes, we have the total financial burden of the people of Great Britain for the coming year, viz., $575,000,000. Mr. Wells, in his late reports on our State taxes, gave the aggregate State and local taxation of New York, Ohio, and Vermont as a sort of basis from which to estimate the total annual burdens of the United States. Taking the per capita rate of Ohio as the average local rate of the States, we have taxation to the amount of $650,000,000, to place against the $585,000,000 of Great Britain. In other words, even after including a charge of twenty-four millions and a half to account of the sinking fund, which has only a very feeble counterpart in the English budget, we are but sixty-five millions in excess of Great Britain in the aggregate of our present burdens. To appreciate the comparison, there are various elements to be kept in view. First, the population of Great Britain certainly does not exceed thirty-three and a half millions by the present census, while our may safely be taken at thirty-nine millions, showing the very close average of $15.97 per head in England against $16.15 in the United States. We have excluded from the comparison the surplus which we have this year provided for the payment of the principal of the national debt since it has no counterpart in the English budget, the "terminable annuities" there being moreover greatly exceeded in amount by the provision made in our "sinking fund" for a similar purpose, and which we have taken into account.

It is almost unnecessary to say that in comparing the financial condition of the two countries, every other consideration tells against England. That a tax of one cent on a box of matches should cause a riot sufficient to frighten the Government is sufficient evidence how hard it is to increase the taxbearing power of the people of Great Britain. It is not too much to say that a dollar is twice as difficult to raise from or to earn by the mass of the people in England as it is here, and that, consequently, their financial burdens press on the nation with double the weight that ours do. The principal and interest of our national debt are now but little over two thousand millions, and the total is rapidly decreasing, while theirs is almost stationary at about three thousand eight bundred millions. Our material resources are boundless, while theirs show symptoms of exhaustion. The English democracy are perfectly cognizant of the facts which these figures but faintly represent. In spite of enlarged popular privileges, the grinding weight of taxation, instead of diminishing, is this year to be still further increased. Let the rulers of England look to it. Their subjects are of the same blood as the men who threw the tea-into Boston harbor for similar reasons. The time may be unpropitious for the "Reds" coming to the top, but it is a mere question of a few years, if the faces of the English poor are ground as they are at

A MAN FOR THE REPUBLICANS. From the N. Y. Sun.

All sagacious Republicans see that their only hope of success in the next Presidential election rests in their presenting some other candidate than General Grant. Who, then, shall be their nominee?

The stranger who should form an estimate of the statesmanship within the Republican party from the qualifications of those upon whom General Grant has bestowed his principal offices, would commit a serious mistake. Though Grant's administration may be characterized as the reign of small men, the party is replete with talents of the highest order. Unfortunately for the country, Republicans of that type are either under the Presidential ban, or refuse to share with Grant the responsibility of carrying on the Government.

If the Republicans hope for success next must reconci tions, and choose a standard-bearer who will conciliate the extreme radicals and the extreme conservatives. He must be a man of mark, who, by services rendered to the party during the past sixteen stormy years, and by evidences of a lofty statesmanship suited to the present perilous crisis, has proved that he possesses o pacity to guide its councils. The disasters it was compelled to endure under the rule of Johnson, and the experiment it tried in the selection of Grant, will undoubtedly deter the party from hereafter bestowing power upon a man of doubtful fidelity to its doctrines like Johnson, or one who has not shared its fortunes in troublous times like Grant. The bitter experiences of the past six years have given the party its fill of such Presidents; and it longs for a tried man, whom it thoroughly knows and can entirely Prominentamong those named for meeting the exigencies of the Republican situation stands Lyman Trumbull, of Illinois. Originally a Democrat, and elevated by the Democracy of Illinois to the offices, successively, of member of the Legislature, Secretary of State, and Judge of the Supreme Court, he differed with his party in 1855 on the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, and was sent to the United States Senate as an Anti-Nebraska Democrat. His talents enabled him to immediately take a conspicuous part in the proceedings of that body; and down to the outbreak of the Rebellion he had few equals, either in the calm deliberations or exciting discussions which then engaged the ablest statesmen and debaters of both sections of the Union. From the commencement of the war till the present hour Senator Trumbull has exerted an important influence upon public affairs. As chairman of the Judiciary Committee he has had the shaping of the most important acts of Congress, and of the three amendments to the Constitution. Sometimes overruled by his colleagues in the committee, and sometimes by a majority of the Republicans in the Senate, we question whether any of them will now deny that whenever they have differed from him in years gone by he was nearer right than they were; and in respect to those recent differences in regard to such measures as San Domingo annexation, the ostracism of Sumner, the enactment of more coercion laws for the South, the concession of general amnesty to the late insurgents, the revision of the tariff, the repeal of the income tax, and the establishment of a system of civil service reform, we are sure that ere they get through the next Presidential campaign the Republicans will bitterly regret that they did not follow the lead of the calm, inflexible Trumbull, rather than that of the impulsive, supple Morton.

To meet and master the approaching Presidential conflict, the Republicans need to place in the field an experienced, wise, courageous statesman, who has been closely identified with the party from its advent, has assisted to frame its grand record and win its glorious victories, and who now hits the happy medium between implacable radicalism and stolid conservatism. They nced one who, in this hour of peril, would concede all privileges to all citizens, and, while maintaining the constitutional authority of the Federal Government, would not impair the just rights of the States.

Lyman Trumbull is precisely such a man as we have described. He would not put to hazard all that the Republican party has achieved in the past, by initiating measures for its maintenance so oppressive and exaspe-$340,000,000 to add to the absolute require- rating as to keep alive controversies that tend ments of our national expenditure for the only to disturb results that ought to be

year. This would give us a total burden of | treated as irrevocably settled. He would conserve the three constitutional amendments by refraining from coercive legislation, whose legitimate effects are to bring them into disrepute and inflame hostility against them among the people upon whom their novel provisions press with onerous weight. He would not, under false pretences, and behind thin disguises, overstrain the Constitution, and use the bayonet to pack a national convention of his party with delegates from the carpet-bag States favorable to his nomination to the Presidency. And in all this he would differ from General Grant, who, though advised so to do by influential Republicans, has repeatedly refused to make Mr. Trumbull Secretary of State, because he did not like to be overshadowed by his superior talents, but preferred to have at his council board men of a calibre more nearly corresponding with his own.

In a word, Senator Trumbull's nomination would consolidate and inspire the party which General Grant has divided and depressed; and with him for its leader, it would go into the canvass of 1872 full of courage

WHAT THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY WILL DO WHEN IN POWER.

From the N. Y. World. I It will limit the annual taxes to $250,-000,000, and out of this moderate revenue will apply $25,000,000 towards the extinction of the public debt; whereas the Federal taxes for the last fiscal year amounted to the enormous sum of 8411,255,447.

II. It will revise and reform the system of taxation so that this diminished annual burden of $250,000,000 will be equitably distributed. The present system not only overloads the faithful horse, but ties some of the load to his legs, puts a part upon his head, makes him drag a portion by his tail, obstructing his freedom of movement, and causing him the utmost annoyance. The Democratic party will withdraw every pound of the load from his limbs and extremities and collect it upon his back where he can carry it with greatest ease. It will, moreover, take good care that the taxes find their way into the public treasury, and not into the pockets of greedy, grasping monopolists.

III. The Democratic party will rectify the abuses of the present banking system; extinguishing monopoly by making the business free to all who comply with the conditions, stopping the interest on govern-ment bonds while in pledge to secure bank circulation, and guarding against a redun-dant currency by compelling the banks to redeem their notes in specie. IV. It will revive our prostrate shipping interest and restore to American citizens their former large share in the profits of navigation, by free trade in ships and the repeal of duties on all articles used in their construction.

V. It will extend and complete the system universal suffrage by abolishing the term of residence now required for naturalization, and giving intelligent white immigrants the same advantages enjoyed by our colored population. There is no reason why a thrifty German who emigrates to Texas and buys a farm should not at once be as favored a citizen as the South Carolina negro who emigrates to Texas in the same year and is employed by the German as a laborer.

VI. The Democratic party will faithfully fulfil all the obligations created by the public debt in their letter and spirit, and will secure to disabled soldiers the full amount of their ensions without allowing a dollar to ducted for the fees of agents.

VII. It will repeal all laws which permit the Federal Government, or any of its officers, to interfere with elections in the States. VIII. It will make it a high misdemeanor punishable by dismissal from the service for any officer of the army or navy to aid in the suppression of domestic violence in a State unless the State authorities have made a previous application to the President for such assistance, in conformity to the Constitution; or to interfere for enforcing any Federal law unless a Federal judge shall have previously certified that their execution of the laws is resisted by a combination too powerful to be overcome by the marshal and his posse. IX. The Democratic party will remove all the political disabilities and disqualifications imposed for participation in the late civil

X. It will recognize the binding force of the three new amendments to the Constitution so long as they are to be held valid by the Supreme Court.

Here are no flourishes, no buncombe, no vague, cloudy theories which cannot be reduced to practice. If there is any Southern citizen who does not think this list of measures would bring relief from and redress of present evils and grievances, we cannot respect Lis judgment. And if, on the other band, any Republican insists that the policy here sketched is a mere bundle of negations and dead issues, he forfeits all claim to be considered a candid opponent.
