THE DESIGNATION OF PERSONS THE PROPERTY AND PROPERTY OF THE STATE OF T

HARRISBURG.

The State Conventions-How to Hold Pennsylvania-The Chairmanship of the Republican Central Committee-Probable Democratic Nominations, Etc. From an Occasional Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, May 10 .- The near approach of the meetings of the Republican and Damocratic State Conventions-the first next Wednesday, and the latter the week following-has caused an influx of prominent politicians here from all parts of the State, together with the head of the nation, who has, within the past two weeks, been twice in this vicinity.

The nomination of Auditor-General and Surveyor-General had really little to do with the visit of President Grant to Lochiel on Saturday week, and to Newville last Saturday. It is so universally conceded that General Harrison Allen, State Senator from Warren, will be nominated for Auditor-General, and Colonel Beath, of Schuylkill, for Surveyor-General that little consideration is given to their nominations. The selection of a Chairman of the State Central Committee is the great question now agitating the minds of high politicians in the State, for whoever is selected for this important place next week will, if successful, be called upon to run the political machine of the Commonwealth until after the Presidential election; hence the great importance of securing a competent engineer. When Grant visited Lochiel, the home of General Cameron, last Saturday week, it was wholly with a view of arranging this matter. The President and his friend Cameron went carefully over the result of the State elections of last year, and in footing up the electoral vote of the States that went Republican and Democratic, it was ascertained there were three more Democratic than Republican votes cast; therefore it was determined necessary not only to hold Pennsylvania loyal, but a Democratic State must be reclaimed. How to hold Pennsylvania was the question discussed, and it was agreed that Colonel John W. Forney was the proper person to select as Chairman of the State Central Committee, and in order to cause him to work up to the full measure expected, it was thought well to fix up this programme, and acquaint Colonel Forney of the fact-U. S. Grant for President, Simon Cameron for Vice-President, and John W. Forney for United States Senator.

Whether the veil is too thick for Colonel Forney to see through I cannot say, but astute politicians like Colonel A. K. McClure and others look on it in this way: Colonel Forney may, in order to get Cameron out of his way for the Senatorship, use his influence to nominate the Winnebago Chief Vice-President, but does any one, ask they, believe for a moment that if Cameron should be elected Vice-President he would use his influence for the election of Colonel Forney to the United States Senate? Certainly not: and the two intervening months, from the time of the Presidential election in November and the meeting of the Legislature in January following, would be speat by the Vice-President elect in aiding in the election of Don Cameron as Senator, and to secure such a result the whole political machinery of the administration would be directed.

There seems to be a general impression here that Colonel Forney will not serve. If so, the choice will doubtless fall upon M. S. Quay, of the Beaver Radical.

The Democracy will, in all probability, select Senator William M. Randall, of Schuylkill, as the Chairman of their State Central Committee. His being, in a measure, the representative of the Young Democracy of the State, and having so strong an influence with the workingmen of the mining regions, have caused him to be considered the most available man for the posi-

In the meantime Governor Geary remains serene. He claims to have reached the full measure of his ambition. General Knipe alluded a few days ago to his having, during the war, one eye on the Rebels and the other on the executive office of Pennsylvania. The Governor declares the height of his ambition has been reached, and he is now laboring to so perform the duties, with that single-heartedness for the public weal, as to merit the encomiums of his fellow-citizens. To retire from executive duties amid the plaudits of the people of this great Commonwealth is the only ambition that dwells

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

'Rip Van Winkle" at the Museum .

A rival to Mr. Jefferson in his most popular role of "Rip Van Winkle" has appeared in the person of Mr. Robert McWade, a young actor who has been performing at the Museum, Ninth and Arch streets, during the present week, with considerable success. The play in which Mr. McWade appears is announced as "an entirely new adaptation" of Irving's story, but it is painfully apparent that the author has received more inspiration from Boucleault than he has from Irving, and as Mr. McWade has copied some of his best stage-business from Jefferson, so has the concocter of this "new version" appropriated the situations of the play which the acting of Mr. Jefferson has made famous, Even the miserable rabbit story which spoils one of the best scenes in Boucleault's play we find reproduced in all its essential features, with a squirrel for the hero. This is not what we have a right to expect in a play that lays claim to originality, and the piece is especially open to criticism, inasmuch as Boucleault, so far from improving on Irving, has obliterated all the finer characteristics of the story, which in the hands of a man of the slightest poetical teeling might be turned into a very beautiful little drama which would not depend entirely for success on the genius of a single actor. Taking Mr. Mc-Wade's play upon its individual merits, it is in some respects an improvement upon the better known piece, and the denouement, when "Rip" returns to find his wife dead and his daughter involved in difficulties from which it is in his power to rescue her, is especially much happier. The worst fault of the play is its excessive length. The dramatic situations are none of them of a very pronounced character, and the low conversational tone in which the dialogue is conducted has a tendency to become monotonous after there has been more than a couple of hours of it. If some of the verbiage could be eliminated, and the play thereby cut down about onethird, it would be vastly improved.

Mr. McWade's "Rip Van Winkle" is a tolerably close copy of Mr. Jefferson's performance, and in the last act, where "Rip" appears as an old man, it will compare not unfavorably with its original. In the early scenes, Mr. McWade, while displaying considerable ability, which will doubtless enable him to achieve an excel- | lent reputation in time, misses almost entirely the combined humor] and pathos that make Mr. Jefferson's "Rip" so delightful. The performance is so curiously like Mr. Jefferson's in very many particulars, that it is an excellent illustration of the power of genius to transform the commonplace into something worthy of admiration. Mr. Mc Wade can copy Jefferson's "business," his costume, his conversational tone, and his various tricks of voice and manner, but he cannot imitate the subtle charm that pervades his "Rip" and elevates it to a high position as a work of ert, for this belongs to the individuality of the artist, and is beyond imitation.

These have been commented upon so often that it is scarcely necessary to refer to them in detail, especially as it is is admitted by thousands who have witnessed the speciale that such a combination of attractions has never been presented in this city before.

On Saturday there will be a family matinee for the accommodation of family parties, ladies, children, and schools; and in order that the

AT THE WALNUT Mrs. Bowers will this evening appear in her great role of "Lady Audley," in John Brougham's drama of The Mystery of Audley Court.

At the Arch Mr. John Brougham will this evening personate "Corydon Foxglove," in the comedy of Flies in the Web. The farce of A

AT THE AMERICAN a variety of attractions will be presented this evening. On Friday there will be a family night, when a combination of attractions will be offered for the delectation of ladies, children, and family parties. On this occasion, in addition to other interesting features, the Japanese troupe of acrobats and jugglers, of which little "Ali Right" is the bright particular star, will exhibit some of their most wonderful feats of strength and skill. The performances of these Japanese are entirely different from those of our acrobats and jugglers, and they are exceedingly curious. Those who have not yet seen them should by all means do so, while those who have been amused and astonished by the skill with which the most difficult feats are executed can well afford to see them again. In addition to the Japanese, there will be beautiful ballets. Ethiopian burlesques, a comic pantomime, and a great variety of other attractions, which cannot fail to make the evening pass plea-

On Saturday there will be a family matinee. AT THE MUSEUM, Ninth and Arch streets, Mr. Robert McWade will appear this evening

MR. E. L. DAVENPORT.—The Boston papers are lavish in their praises of Mr. E. L. Davenport, the celebrated actor, some of them devoting a whole column of criticism to his wonderful impersonations. The Advertiser of Tues-ir. Davenport's engagement began at the Globe last evening, and the theatre was filled with an appreciative and enthusiastic audience. The play was A New Way to Pay Old Debts, of Massinger. Mr. many of our readers are familiar with this most masterly impersonation, which deserves to rank with the best pieces of acting which the American stage is capable of producing. The piece was given with the same eminent actor in the principal part at the Globe in the early part of last summer. And we can do no better now than to repeat the judg-ment of the performance expressed at that time in this paper by one of the most skilful and critical of pens;...

"Mr. Davenport's 'Sir Giles Overreach' is, on the whole, his greatest impersonation. His rare natural gifts of presence and voice do him no good in this part, but his varied experience, his thorough linish and cultivation, and, above all, his rare power of characterization, combine to perfect and refine his performance in a remarkable degree. Every shade of the various passions that excite the waretend creat miserly respects to delicately and wretched, cruel, miserly usurer is so delicately and yet so strongly brought out by Mr. Davenport's superb yet quiet acting in the earlier scenes that when the climax arrives, and 'Sir Giles,' plunged in a vortex of disappointment, ruin, and retribution, after a burst of demoniac insanity, falls dead, the effect is simply terriac, and the audience shudder of the superburstics. der at the wonderful acting while they admire the art."

The impression produced upon the house last night was very profound—incessant applause, and, better than that, the most absorbed attention, exhibiting the complete command which the artist obtained over the feeling and imagination of his auditors. The performance, indeed, is one which no student of the dramatic art in its nobler manifestations can miss without losing a high artistic plea-

HELMBOLD.

His New Continental Drug Palace. Last night the vicinity of the Continenta Hotel was thronged by people who were anxiou to catch a glimpse—for it could hardly be more from the press of the crowd-of Dr. H. T Helmbold's drug palace, which then was opened to public inspection. This enterprising and popular druggist, having by a close application to his pursuit gained a great fortune, returned to his native city to establish this exquisitely beautiful drug emporium, where there would be kept an illimitable supply of that wonderful preparation which has brought health and strength to thousands of repining mortals, and which raised its compounder to fame and affin-The store which was opened last night merits the more dignified title of drug palace, for it presents to the eye all that is splendid and charming in Oriental decorations. arrangement and construction there was a lavish expenditure in keeping with the wealth and the generosity of the successful Doctor. 'Tae floor is of polished marble, tesselated. Upon the cast side of the room extends a counter of the purest Italian marble, beautifully carved, upon which rest cases of heavy French-plate glass, mounted with silver. The ceiling and walls are frescoed in the highest style of the decorative art, the tints being delicate and chaste. Against the eastern wall we have the cases, arranged elegantly and backed with mirrors, which double she proportions of the room to the eye. In these cases we have an almost illimitable array of phials, jars, and kindred receptacles for the drugs which are to carry "healing on their wings." At intervals in this case there are alcoves filled with beautiful Grecian and Etruscan vases, from which steal the most refreshing perfumes. On the opposite side, and between the heavy plate-glass windows which open into the hallway of the Continental, are other cases, whose matchless appearance chains the eye with admiration. Surmounting these are alcoves filled with rare gems of art. Scattered about are graceful bronze statuettes, which enhance the rich appearance of this modern Depending from the ceiling are four glittering chandellers, each adorned with a glass pestle and mortar, and each arranged for ten jets. In the rear of the store are two richly furnished private offices, and to the left of the entrance door on Chesnut street a soda foun-tain, octagonal in form, each side faced with a polished slab of Tennessee marble. The prominent colors which strike the eye are French purple, lavender, and a dark shaded red and gilt. The tout ensemble is of such remarkable richness that the looker-on cannot repress an exclamation of surprise and admiration, the ornaments are so profuse and arranged with so much taste. The arrangement of the mirrors, which give to the apartment a fictitious proportion, which the beholder can scarcely believe is not real, the elegance of the wall decorations, and the supply of drugs, make the store one of the most complete, and, without question, the most attractive in this section of the country. This morning it was thronged, and the talented corps of clerks, under the supervision of Mr. Albert Helmbold,

WE copy the following meritorious notices from the columns of Forney's Press of to-day: -PROGRESS OF AMERICAN GENIUS.

A NEW PHILADELPHIA INDUSTRY. In our local columns this morning we give a slight description of the opening of the new "Temple of Pharmacy" of Dr. H. T. Helmbold, which occupies the old reading-room of the Continental Hotel. As a rule, Philadelphia merchants have until quite recently been singularly averse to making the interior of their stores attractive, and we are glad to observe that a better era is dayning and they are better era. that a better era is dawning, and they are becoming educated to the necessity of so doing. The employment in the fitting up of stores of mechanics whose branches of business, we presume, are usually catalogued as useful arts, but which embrace beauty, richness of conception, and delicacy of touch speaks well for the increas-ing æsthetic taste of our population, and by the encouragement of our architects and builders Philadelphia may soon boast of being not only the manufacturing centre of the United States, but the home of all those arts which so closely approach the fine arts as to defy separation. Dr. Helmbold's new store is the most beautiful in our city, and the taste displayed in its con-ception reflects great credit upon the architect, Mr. John Stewart, to whose labor Philadelphia is greatly indebted. Nothing has been neglected that could add to the magnificence of this emporium; and, what is very rare, the finish of even the most hidden parts of the store is complete. What particularly attracted our attentions at the first that all the magnificences. tion was the fact that all the multifarious ornamental work which is seen in every direction is composed entirely of papier-mache of Philadel-phia manufacture, which exceeds in beauty of finish and artistic merit anything of the description we ever examined.

The substitution of papier-mache for wood has been the subject of much study, but there has always been great difficulty in adapting it to ornamental work. In Europe it is much uses in architectural enrichment, being preferred to wood and similar materials; in Paris it had attained such general use as to entirely supersede plaster, which now is used only for walls and plain work. In the manner of preparing papier-mache followed in Europe it is found necessary to carve over the surface and cover it with a solution of whiting and gelatine, after which it is sand-papered and finished up. Although this makes it expensive, it is, on ac count of its freedom from cracking, preferred to

About three years since Mr. Edward S. Judge, of Baltimore, took out a patent upon papier-mache work, by the use of which he is enabled to take it from the moulds in a condition as fine and sharp as a plaster east, and of almost any degree of strength. Six months later he came to this city, to use it in the ornamentation of looking-glass frames for the most extensive factory of that kind in the country, and so well did the process succeed, that in a short time the enterprising firm monopolized the trade in large mirror frames. About a year since, with Mr. John R. White and others, he formed the Parisian Marble Company for the introduction of this industry into general use, and especially for architectural purposes, and its success is already assured. Yesterday we visited the office of the company, and were shown ornaments of pure paper with surface almost as fine as polished marble, and of such strength that a fall of twenty or thirty feet on a stone pavement would not break them. It takes the finest impressions, and can be made into the largest forms. We were shown figures, five feet in height, designed to stand the weather; brackets in bronze. superior to any non-metallic imitation we have seen, and in walnut that cannot be distinguished from the wood; pedestals enamelled the same as slate, which appeared to be equally durable with that article, and certainly as handsome. We were informed upon inquiry that this materia has already been used in exposed architectural ornamentation in Philadelphia, Baltimore, New York, and Washington, in some instances for over three years, without the slightest com-

Dr. Helmbold's establishment will long remain a monument to the beauty and finish of their work, as we understand that, in connection with their papier-mache ornaments, to them and their artists is due all the artistic encaustic painting and gilding in which the cases and wood-work have been finished. For this purpose they employ the best talent among artists, and the result is a harmony in architectural finish which has hitherto been but too seldom seen in our city.

The office of the company is No. 917 Sansom street, but in a few days they will remove to Nos. 432 and 434 North Twelfth street, their rapidly increasing business demanding a more commodious establishment.

TO CONSUMPTIVES .- WILBOR'S COD LAVER OIL AND LIME has now been before the public for ten years, and has steadily grown into favor and appreciation, This could not be the case unless the preparation was of undoubted and high intriusic value. The combination of the Phosphate of Lime with pure Cod Liver Oil, as prepared by Dr. Wilbor, has produced a new phase in the treatment of Consumption and all diseases of the Lungs. This article can be taken by the most delicate invalid without creating the disgusting nausea which is such a prominent objection to the Cod Liver Oil when taken without Lime. This preparation is prescribed by the regular faculty, and sold by the proprietor, wholesale and retail, A. B. WILBOR, Chemist, No. 166 Court Street, Boston, and by druggists generally.

GENERAL DEBILITY - VEGETINE .- In this complaint the good effects of the Vegetine are realized immediately after commencing to take it, as debility enotes deficiency of the blood, and Vegetine acts directly upon the blood. There is no remedy that will restore the health from debility like the Vegetine. It is nourishing and strengthening, purides the blood, regulates the bowels, quiets the nervous system, acts directly upon the secretions, and arouses the whole system to action. It has never failed in this complaint.

Mr. Billingfelt said he must protest against the passage of this bill. A mere glance does not show the full purport of its fprovisions, for really the whole gist was contained in a few words, and those words gave the right to railroad companies to purchase the stock of this company. The bill was intended to close the last and only avenue open to the public to mine coal in Schuyikill county, and give the exclusive right to a large corporation.

It comes here under the auspices of a corporation road, who asks for its passage so they may do what under a law seed a few years ago they are expressly prohibited from mg, going into Schuylkill and mising coal. Abduction, Robbery, and Violation of a Young Girl. Sr. Louis, May 11 .- Mrs. Fisher has applied for a warrant for the arrest of a man named Rice, whom she charged with kidnapping and violating her daughter, fifteen years old. The girl says that on Sunday evening, while going to church, Rice seized her in the street, gagged her and forced her into a carriage, and drove to a part of the city unknown to her, where she was thrust into a cellar without windows or furniture. He stripped her and gave her old clothes, and took four rings from her lingers, cutting one of them off. He then violated her person and left her with a loaf of bread and a jug of water. The next day he came again and outraged her. and yesterday he repeated the act. Last night he blindfolded her and took her around the city in a carriage and left her at the corner of Eighth and Washington streets. Rice told her that her mother had threatened to shoot him, and now she would have something to shoot him for.

Mrs. Fisher made a statement that she had known Rice since she was a girl; she had repeatedly taken him to her house when he was sick and cared for him; that he had seduced her daughter when she was fourteen years eld, and had subsequently violated her; she had threatened to shoot him, and would do so if the law did not punish him. Business was very slow in this court to-day, and after considerable delay the District Astorney sucafter considerable delay the District Astorney suc-ceeded in getting on only a very small case, in which Martha Connor, who sat in the docs with a little baby in her arms, was prosecuted by Whitam Mur-ray upon the charges of malicious meschief and as-sault and battery. They occupied different rooms in a tenement house, and Murray said this woman accused his wife of stealing from her, and forced an entrance into his room in order to recover it, in doing which she broke the latch of the door. He at once had her taken before an Alderman, where he made this complaint against her and then she struck. Here was a second offense which was placed to her account, and she was hauled off to prison on the 25th of April, and there she and her infant had remained until to-day, another child but five years old being left in the tenement house without care and protection. E. M. Chipman, Esq., the distressing situation in which the man Murray had placed the poor friendless woman, volunteered his services for her defense, put the prosecutor through a course of sharp questioning, made an in-digment speech to the jury, and obtained a verdict of not guilty, and Mrs. Connor went home to make up

The Connecticut Senate Declares the Republican Ticket Elected. HARTFORD, May 11. - The Senate to-day passed a resolution declaring Marshall Jewell and other Republican candidates for State offices elected.

Lieutenant-Governor Tyler took the oath of office in the Senate Chamber, the House having inadvertently omitted to appoint a committee to wait upon the Governor. He will not take the oath of office until Tuesday next, to which day both houses have adjourned. There will be an inaugural parade and the usual election day ceremonies on Tuesday, and Governor Jewell will communicate his message to the Legislature. The joint standing committees were announced to-day in both
