"The Streets of Philadelphia" at the Walnut.

The drama produced last night at the Walnut, to a very fair audience considering the attractions in the streets of Philadelphia, which for many surpassed those of the mimic stage, is one that has the happy faculty of adapting itself to circumstances. It has been played here many times indifferently as representing life in Philadelphia or in New York, as the stage managers happened to be romantic or practical. If they thought the poet's maxim true, that distance lends enchantment to the view, they named it The Streets of New York, we believe that it was originally brought out a good many years ago under the name of The Streets of London, it being in some sense an adaptation of a piece which figured in the original French under the title of The Streets of Paris, -or if desirous to appeal to local patriotism, they boldly posted it as The Streets of Philadelphia, and diligently revised the dialogue to sult circumstances. Such a piece as this is of course invaluable, for it could, by means of a little practical ingenuity, be relied upon equally as an attraction in Pekin as in New York or Philadelphia. It is a piece that does not depend upon any of the finer elements of art for success: there are no half tints, but the contrasts of light and shade are made as distinct as possible, so that it is impossible for the most obuse in tellects to miss the meaning of the plot, or fail to understand the obvious moral involved in the failure of vice and the triumph of virtue. Looking at it from the proper standpoint, the play possesses very decided merits. It tells a story of considerable interest: it presents a number of well-contrasted characters which enable the actors to make some telling points: its moral tendencies are excellent, and it affords opportunities for attractive scenic display. The applause with which the performance at the Walnut last evening was greeted was a proof that the drama has lost none of its attractions, and its reproduction may be considered a success. The best acting part is that of "Tom Badger," the clerk and the evil genius of the defaulting banker "Bloodgood." and this found a fitting representative in Mr. Walcott, who made the most of the opportunities afforded him. The other characters were for the most part creditably sustained. The piece is well put upon the stage, with several

"Nobody's Daughter" at the Arch. Miss Kate Reignolds was greeted last night at the Arch by a tolerably large audience, and gave pleasing personations of the three characters of Jenny Milson," "Lady Eversleigh," and "Mad'lle Brewer." The drama of Nobody's Daughter' by Messrs. Fulton and Maeder, belongs to the class known as "sensational," and while there is nothing in it sufficiently soul-harrowing to make the hair of nervous persons stand on end like quills upon the fretful porcupine, it contains in its involved plot and picturesque tableaux a fair amount of matter of interest to those whose tastes incline them to this style of entertainments. Miss Kate Reignolds, who has not appeared here for several years, is an actress of prepossessing stage presence, but with almost too placid a style of acting to do justice to such characters as she is called upon to represent in Nobody's Daughter and other similar pieces of her repertoire. She has excellent abilities, however, and in some of the scenes in which she appeared last night she was generously applauded.

THE ITALIAN OPERA. — We have had very little opera this season, and the series of performances to be given at the Academy of Music next week will doubtless receive the patronage they deserve at the hands of our music-loving . The repertoire contains works well-established reputation, and public. of well-established reputation, and the combination of artists, with Miss Clara Louise Kellogg at its head as prima donna, is sufficiently strong to ensure creditable representations of the various works announced. The troupe will consist of Miss Kellogg, Madame Agatha States, Signora Himela, Signora Miss Grariella Ridgway, Signori Susini, Bacelli, Villani, Caroselli, Fontanesi. Orlandini, Susini, Bacelli, Villani, and Buongiorno. Rapid Progress of the Work

The building of the Northern Pacific Railroad (begun July last) is being pushed forward with great energy from both extremities of the line. Several thousand men are employed in Minnesota and on the Pacific coast. The grade is nearly completed 266 miles westward from Lake Superior; trains are running over 130 miles of finished road, and tracklaying is rapidly progressing towards the eastern border of Dakota.
