THE JUNE MAGAZINES.

"SCRIBNER'S."

The June number of Scribner's Monthly, both in the number and excellence of its illustrations and in the entertaining variety of its literary contributions, maintains the high standard of excellence its previous numbers have reached. The contents are as fol-

"The Wonders of the Yellowstone," second article, illustrated, N. P. Langford; "Lights and Shadows of the War," illustrated, William Wells; "Three Leaves from a Story," poem, illustrated, Lois Brooke; "The Mother of the Emperor William," illustrated, Francis Johnson; "Leipsic and its Fair," illustrated, Thomas Emmette; "Norah, the Story of a Wild Irish Girl," concluded, Mrs. Oliphant; "The Illinois and St. Louis Bridge," illustrated, A. S. Twombly; "Making Port," poem, J. T. McKay; "The Shadow that Came Between," Adeline Trafton; "The Freedom of the Pulpit," Samuel W. Duffield; "Wilfrid Cumbermede, "illustrated, George MacDonald; "The Clothes of a Ghost," poem, Mrs. S. M. B. Piatt; "Topics of the Time," "The Old Cabinet," "Home and Society," "Culture and Progress Abroad," "Culture and Progress at Home," "Etchings," illustrated, L. Y. Hopking.

The following on "the ethics of dress, which we find under the head of "Home and Society," is soundly sensible: -

There are hill-slopes and mountain-tops in New England which glitter just now in a spring-time broidery of flowers. With every season the flowers vary-now arbutus, now buttercups, now clover; but no change comes to the solid granite which underlies them. Through all seasons and all years it remains

Even so, certain immutable laws underlie all human fashions, changing not with the perpetual flux and sheen of outward life. These laws, of grace, of symmetry, of pro-priety, are the oracles of our highest culture and our finest instincts. They are natural laws as well, and the things of Nature conform to them. Willows droop, elm boughs curve accordantly—no humblest flower that blows but recognizes their behest in the shaping and the painting of its cup.

But we are not obedient as the flowers. Acknowledging the law, we forget it. Especially is this true in matters of dress. Fashion twitches this way and that, pulls lines out of their rightful sweep and meaning, overloads, deforms, disguises, and our eyes become demoralized. Hardly do we endure before we embrace; we become a part of all which at first we hated, and the higher law is forgotten.

Wherefore it is to be wished that as, each season, our journals record the caprices of Dame Fashion, some cooler voice in the background might be provided, which should repeat and re-repeat the old code-so easily laid aside, so important to remember. Or, to use another figure, that amid the arbitrary changes and glitter of society, a wise hand should be found to seize and hold up the standard-as valid now as in the days of classic Greece, the standard of correct tasteif haply a few here and there might behold and follow.

This code, worthy to be engraved on tables of brass, runs somewhat after this wise:-Imprimis. The first instinct about a new fashion is the true one. Don't wait till your eye has lost its accuracy and your judgment its edge. Subject the thing at once to the general rule, and bow to the decision.

2d. What suits one person does not suit another. Know thyself. 3d. Dress should supplement good points and correct bad ones. Thick and thin, long and short, are not all to be subjected to one Procrustean style. 4th. Colors should be harmonious, should be massed, should be becoming. Id est, many little points or blotches of color sprinkled over a costume produce a disagreeably pied and speckled effect, as of a monstrous robin's egg, or a plum-pudding. One tint should prevail, relieved by a contrasting tint. No amount of fashionable prestige can make an unbecoming color becoming. "Nile green" twenty empresses ordain its adoption. 5th. Lines should be continuous, graceful, and feminine. It is better to look like a woman (if you happen to be one) than like anything else-even a fashion-plate! 6th. Ornament must be subordinate. Na-will turn some people into oranges, though ture, with all her profusion, never forgets this fundamental law. 7th. Above all things, be neat. Dainty precision and freshness are essential to a woman as a flower. 8th. Individuality is the rarest and the cheapest thing in the world. 9th, and lastly, "Stylish" is of all the words in the English language the most deadly. It has slain its thousands.

"HARPER'S."

The contents of the June number of Harper's, which has been sent us by T. B. Peterson & Brothers, are as follows:-

"General Average," by the author of "Nothing to Wear," with four illustrations; "The New York Custom House," T. B. Thorpe, with thirteen illustrations; "Along the Florida Reef," (fifth paper), J. B. Holder, with eight illustrations; "The Hint of Dawn," Harriet Prescott Spofford; "An Excursion to Watkins Glen," Porte Crayon, with ten illustrations by Porte Crayon; "Anne Furness," by the author of "Mabel's Progress," etc.; "A Bohemian Household," Mrs. Frank Mc-Carthy; "The American Baron," by the author of "The Dodge Club," etc., with three illustrations; "The 'Horrors of San Dominge. Benjamin J. Lossing, with a portrait of Tous-saint L'Ouverture; "Anteros," by the author of "Guy Livingstone," etc.; "The Man in the Iron Mask," Eugene Lawrence; "Under the Maple," Kate Putnam Osgood; "That Place under Government," by the author of "My Daughter Elinor;" "The Demolition of the Throne of Charles X," J. S. C. Abbott; "The Confessional," translated from the German by C. C. Shackford; "Enchantment," Alice Cary; "Short Trips to Europe," William C. Prime; Editor's Easy Chair; Editor's Literary Record: Editor's Scientific Record: Editor's Historical Record; Editor's Drawer.

From Mr. Benson J. Lossing's paper entitled "The Horrors of San Domingo," we take the following account of Tonssaint l'Ouverture:-At this juncture an extraordinary person emerged from obscurity. It was Francis Dominique Toussaint, a negro of pure blood, and grandson of an African prince. He was a small, slender man, who was so thin in his boyhood that he was called "the little lath. He was now between forty and fifty years of age, and had been all his life a slave on the estate of the Count de Noe, whose manager. M. Bayou de Libertas, had educated him and placed him in positions of trust. He was studious, thoughtful, and religious. He warmly sympathized with his enslaved race in their attitude of armed combatants for their just as effectually as a new one.

own freedom. He had read with profound interest the Abbe Raynal's essays on the multifarious evil effects of slavery, and had long pondered peaceful schemes for the emancipation of his race in San Domingo. He was yet powerfully impressed by Raynal's pictures of the great wrong; and in the servile insurrection which now invited his cooperation he thought he saw a way open through a Red Sea by which his people might pass to a land of liberty.

Toussaint a soul glowed with an intense desire to assist in the liberation of his people. and so soon as he could secure the safety of M. Bayou, his benefactor, and that of his family and some personal property, he joined the insurgent blacks. His delay had excited their suspicions and displeasure. They now received him with open arms. His knowledge of the medicinal properties of the flora of the island caused his immediate employment in the medical department, His military genius, hitherto unsuspected, was quickly developed, and he was promoted first to the staff of his chief, and then to the rank of a brigadier-general. It was not long before he was acknowledged to be superior in martial ability to the other black commanders, who were either incompetent or ferocious and cruel. Very soon San Domingo presented a most pitiful spectacle. The beautiful princess of the Antilles was made to bleed from a thousand wounds. Her radiant beauty was marred by the iron heel of war, and her rich garments were trailed in the dust and cinders of fiery discord.

French commissioners were sent from time to time to quench the flames of civil war, if possible, by mediation; but they were unsuccessful. Even the white inhabitants, divided into royalist and republican factions as fierce as those in France, were irreconcilable enemies. The black leaders, regarding the National Convention as their foe, took the royalist side after the beheading of Louis the Sixteenth, in 1793, and, accepting the proffered aid of the King of Spain, refused to listen to propositions from the republican government of France.

Very soon new troubles appeared, which finally produced beneficent results. The Spaniards and the English invaded the west-ern part of the island. The latter captured the whole western coast, seized Port-au-Prince, the capital, and besieged the French Governor, General Laveaux, and his troops, in Port-de-Paix. This was the last stronghold beld by the French, and it was in imminent danger, for the garrison was weakened by disease and famine. Woeful was now the plight of San Domingo! Englishmen, Frenchmen, Spaniards, mulattoes, and blacks were contending for the mastery. The latter were overwhelming in numbers; and when the English invasion was threatened, the French commissioners resolved to conciliate them by a proclamation of universal freedom. That was done in August, 1793. In February following the National Convention confirmed the acts of the commissioners, formally guaranteed the freedom of all the inhabitants of the French colony, and made Hayti an integral part of France.

Toussaint, whose object in joining his insurgent people was to secure their freedom, saw in this guarantee of a great nation the only chance for the accomplishment of his holy purpose. He relied upon the faith of France. If her government in San Domingo should be firmly established, he believed that the emancipation of his race would be fully secured. He was then virtual commander-inchief of the black forces. He openly declared his fealty to France, and formed a junction with the little army under the governor. So energetically and successfully did he work to bring all parties to the same conclusion that General Laveaux exclaimed, Mais cet homme fait ouverture partout' -But this man opens the way every where. From that time he was called by the name of in history as Touissaint L'Ouverture. -From W. S. Turner we have received the June numbers of Arthur's Lady's Home Magazine, which contains a number of fashion plates and other illustrations and an entertaining variety of reading matter, and The Children's Hour, which is filled with pleasant stories and sketches for the young people.

L'Ouverture-The Opening-and he is known

ROBESPIERRE ON LIBERTY OF WORSHIP .- TO speak of Robespierre as a teacher of morals may sound incongruous to those who associate his name with little besides the guillotine and the long procession of victims he sent to death. Many a better man, however, has failed to grasp the truth he preached in '93, when churches were robbed and priests imprisoned, as is now the case in Paris. A French paper calls the attention of the authors of the present excesses to his utterances on this point. "By what right (said he) should men hitherto unknown in the march of the revolution come in the midst of these events to seek a false popularity, sowing discord among us, disturbing liberty of worship in the name of liberty, attacking fanaticism by fresh fanaticism, and making the homage due to pure truth degenerate into ridiculous farces? Why should they be permitted thus to play with the dignity of the people, and fasten the bells of folly to the very sceptre of reason? It has been supposed that by receiving civic offerings the cenvention had proscribed Catholic worship. No, the convention has not taken this rash step; it never will do so. Its intention is to maintain the liberty of worship which it has proclaimed, and at the same time to repress those who abuse it to the disturbance of public order. Priests have been denounced for having said mass; they will say it no longer if they are prevented from saying it. He who tries to prevent mass from being said is more fanatical than he who says it. There are men who claim to make a religion of atheism. Every philosopher, every individual, can on this point adopt whatever opinion he pleases. He who would make it a crime in him would be a madman; but the legislator who would adopt such a system would be a hundred times more mad.

Empanelling the Foster Jury-A Juror Who Would Not Suit. Frederick Rogher, an honest-looking, simple-minded Teuton came to the stand, in a state of great excitement, and was examined as follows by Mr.

Q.—Have you read the accounts of the death of Mr. Putnam? A.—Yes, sir, I reads 'em sometimes. Q.—Heard others talk about it? A.—Vell, I don't know; some beeples, yes, now and den. (Laughter.) Q.—Have you spoken of it yourself? A.—Not empsych!

Q.—Have you said nothing to any one at all about it? A.—Veil, I said to somepoddy vot I reads in de ers. (Laughter.)
-From what you read in the papers and what you heard other people say have you formed an opinion as to the guit or innocence of Foster? A.— I hatt generally thought he has done some wrong to de dead mans. (senewed laughter.)

Q.—le that your opinion now? A.—Yes, sir, I has
