THE JUNE MAGAZINES.

"LIPPINCOTT'S." The contents of the June number of Lippincott's Magazine are as follows:-

"A Provence Rose:" a novelette in two parts; part i; by Ouida. "Sonnet;" by George H. Boker. "Shopping in Paris," by Lucy Hamilton Hooper. "A German Popular Lecture," by Stephen Powers. "The Monarch of the Gila:" a poem; by Edward Renaud. "Still Waters:" a story;" by Florence Marryat. "Wild Ireland;" part iii; by B. Donbavand.
"The Freedmen's Bureau;" by William B.
Hooper. "The Murder Stone:" a remance of English life; part ii (conclusion); by Sir Charles L. Young, Bart. "Servantgallism in "At the Beginning of Summer;" Virginia." by Eliza Archard. "Professor Lowell as a Critic." "Our Monthly Gossip" — Roma Nuova; Bonapartism, etc. "Literature of the Day." Serial Supplement"—Rookstone; by Katherine S. Macquoid; illustrated; part iv.

From "The Freedman's Bureau," by William R. Hooper, we take the following paragraphs:-

It is interesting to note at how small an expenditure the work of the bureau has been accomplished. The total expense in money has been $13,028,304.27—in goods, $2,330,778. These goods were unused army stores left on hand at the close of the war, and would hardly have realized half their cost at public sale. The collection of bounties has cost $279,655; transportation, $239,902.83; schools, $3,572, 365 94; while the whole amount expended in charitable purposes, including the old army stores at full cost, has been $7,677,590.96. Of these fifteen millions of dollars, Government has contributed but eleven millions, the remainder being taken from the refugees' fund-that is, from rent of land and buildings taken from the Confederates, from payments made by the freedmen themselves, and from army stores. It may be fairly asked whether any great national work that accomplished as much has ever cost so little.

One of the most remarkable instances of the determination of our black allies to acquire the rudiments of an education is found in the continuation of schools during the vacation, and often in the absence of the teachers. It was always expected among them that the older scholars should carefully lead the younger to the first steps of the hill of science. It hardly seems juvenile nature, however, for boys and girls to give up their play for the sake of learning, but they did it, and paid their teachers for doing it too. In 1868, 178 schools continued open through all the heats of a Louisianian summer; in Mississippi, 75 schools, with an attendance of 3500 scholars, kept through the summer. Over six hundred schools were taught through that summer vacation. In 1869 one thousand two hundred schools were carried on through the vacation months, 309 of them in Alabama alone. Science may proudly point to the devotion of her older followers, but it may be doubted if the humbler annals of education can point to any such instance as this-a whole race of children foregoing their play and their pocket-money, and sacrificing not the luxuries, but the comferts, and in some cases the necessities, of life, that they might acquire that learning which they prized so highly.

"THE GALAXY." The June number of the Galaxy contains the following centributions:-

"Lady Judith-a Tale of Two Continents;" chapters xxii and xxiii; by Justin McCarthy. "Words and their Uses;" by Richard Grant White. "Overland;" chapters xxxvii, xxxviii, and xxxix; by J. W. DeForest. "O Star of France!" by Walt Whitman. "The Campaigns of Robert E. Lee;" No. 2; from the Wilderness to the Surrender; by A. H. Guernsey. "To Zuleiki;" translated, through the German, from the Persian; by Joel Benton. "The Nether Side of New York;" V. Casual Criminals; by Edward Crapsey. "Sepulture—its Ideas and Practices:" by F. B. Perkins. "Ought We to Visit Her?" chapters xvi, xvii, "Sepulture xviii, and xix; by Fanny Downing. "The Old Story;" by Fanny Downing. "Gascon Stories: Bernadotte, or White Hands; Clairette, or the Husband-Hunter;" by John Durand. "Fetters and Lures;" by Ernest Roland. "Driftwood;" by Philip Quilibet. "Guizot." "Seientific Miscellany." "Current Literature." "The Galaxy Club Room." "Nebulæ;" by the Editor.

The following "pome," as the gentleman who presides over "The Galaxy Club Room" remarks, speaks for itself:-

A PATHETIC BALLAD. TOUCHING A FIFTH AVENUE FAMILY OF DISTINCTION. Come all ye fair maidens and lend me an ear, And a dolorous ditty you shortly shall hear Of a gallant so loving and a maiden so true, And a family what lived in the Fifth Avenue, This family, you see, was a grand family, With greenbacks and gold and a tall pedgree; For the father was Shoddy, the mother was Oil, And the brain of them both in a thimble would boil This father so rich had one daughter so fair, That none on the hill with her could compare; In her short dress so sweet and her chignon quite She'd scare horses, you know, on the Fifth Avenue. The father gave dinners, but the mother, you see, Being vastly genteel, had her little solves. The daughter each season gave a German or two, That killed with envy the girls of Fifth Avenue, The lovers came thronging this maiden to win; Her beauty they loved, but they loved more her tin. There were lawyers and doctors, and parsons a few. Paid their court to this belie in the Fifth Avenue. There was Baron von Kraut and Count Devilletray, Sir Scallywag Bags and Signor Bouchey, And a real live prince with his name such a flam, It begun with a sneeze and ended in d-n.

To none of them all did this fair maid incline; She sought with true love a true love to entwine; Brought up on Ward Beecher, she rose above pelf. The youth of her heart she would love for himself. One day fier dear pa took his afternoon nap, And awoke from his dreams at the sound of a snap, And opening one eye, in a corner within Saw Coachy a-kissing his daughter like sin.

The parent arose with a wipe on his pate, Rolled into the room like a buffer of state, And trembling with rage, but fixed as a post, Stood like Booth when he sees that old pump of a

"You'd permit me to marry my William so true?" But he mildly responded, 'Pil be d—d if I do." Then in wildest despair one evening so damp, she blew herself up with a kerosene lamp. Remorse seized the father, on his daughter he cried, And drank Plantation Bitters till in anguish he died. Then William grew reckless this ruin to see, And he went down and down till he joined Tammany. He committed six murders, and then the great clan

Babson; "A Summer Mood," by Hiram Rich; "Encyclicals of a Traveller," I, by H. H.; "Our Whispering Gallery," VI, (Charles Dickens), by James T. Fields; "Recent Literature."

The following from a letter by Charles Dickens to Professor Felton we find in "Our Whispering Gallery," by Mr. James T.

Perhaps you don't know who Dando was. He was an oyster-eater, my dear Felton. He used to go into oyster shops, without a farthing of money, and stand at the counter eating natives until the man who opened them grew pale, cast down his knife, staggered backward, struck his white forehead with his open hand, and cried, "You are Dando!! He has been known to eat twenty dozen at one sitting, and would have eaten forty if the truth had not flashed upon the shopkeeper. For these offenses he was censtantly committed to the House of Correction. During his last imprisonment he was taken ill, and got worse and worse, and at last began knocking violent double-knocks at Death's door. The doctor stood beside his bed, with his fingers on his pulse, "He is going," says the doctor. "I see it in his eye. There is only one thing that would keep life in him for another hour, and that is—oysters." They were immediately brought. Dando swallowed eight, and feebly took a ninth. He held it in his mouth and looked round the bed strangely. "Not a bad one, is it?" says the doctor. The patient shook his head, rubbed his trembling hand upon his stomach, bolted the oyster, and fell back-dead. They buried him in the prisonyard, and paved his grave with oyster-shells. This "bubble from an Ancient Pipe" is severe and saddening, but alas, too true:-THE AMERICAN RAPHARL.
