FROM PHILADELPHIA TO WILLIAMS.

al Correspondence of The Evening Telegraph WILLIAMSPORT, June 14, 1871. No more striking illustration of the progress of ansylvania could well be given than that furnished y the varied scenes along the railroad route beween Philadelphia and Williamsport. That portion of the Pennsylvania Railroad which was formerly nown as the Columbia Road furnishes the first ink in the journey. Being one of the first rallways ructed in the United States, it still bears too any traces of its venerable antiquity, but they are, ately, now rapidly disappearing. When it constructed, the idea of successfully using as a motive power was ranked as a possiity rather than as a probability, and the practithing aimed at was not to build approximately straight road for locomotives, out a comfortable, easy-going, circumbendibus orse railway with curves leading to convenient and popular old turnpike taverns, and curves leadm the lands and barns of influential old fogies who had a particular horror of new-fangled improvements, as well as from hills and valleys requiring an nusual amount of cutting down or filling up. The artial rectification of this primitive system of engiering has been slowly progressing for some years, out thorough reconstruction has been only ecently attempted, and at this moment is progressing so rapidly that soon a stantially new railway will be in operation for nore than thirty miles leading westward from Phiadelphia, affording such a marked increase of faciities through the combined use of old and new tracks, and such an admirably constructed line in he entirely new portions (part of which is already n operation), that one of the oldest of American allroads will speedily become in every sense and in every detail one of the very best. After passing the line of the Philadelphia and Combis Railroad and approaching Harrisburg, the old anal system looms prominently into view, stretching westward and northward along the line of the sonehanna and its tributaries; and, while it still etains its utility for heavy freight at favorable asons, it recalls many reminiscences of the days packet-boats, when a speed of five miles an hour was the best resource for the speed of twenty-five alles per hour with which we were whirled along esterday over the Pennsylvania (from Philadelphia to Harrisburg), the Northern Central (from Harrisburg to Sunbury), and the Philadelphia and Erie Railroads (from Sunbury to Williamsport), making a trip of two hundred miles in eight hours.

The aspect of the country, and especially of the towns along the line, has improved nearly as much as the facilities for travel. Hamlets have grown into villages, villages into towns, towns into cities, while many spots unknown by special designations o our ancestors are now important depots or stations; and the work of improvement still goes bravely on, with the continued construction of new railway branches, of additional tracks on old railways, and of new industrial establishments.

Throwing out of view all material interests, the de from Philadelphia to Williamsport offers to the overs of varied, beautiful, and romantic scenery a eries of splendid attractions. After the eye of the tourist has lingered with delight upon the suburbs of Philadelphia, Chester Valley, and the broad expanse of fertility opened up in Lancaster county, there commences a grand succession of mountain ridges, and picturesque gaps formed by the Susquehanna, which, with its tributaries, drains the central portions of the State; the west branch extending from Sunbury to Williamsport and far beyond, while the north branch forms the bed of the valley of Wyoming, and, with its forks, traverses a large portion of the tier of northern counties.

Along the banks of the Susquehanna the scenery ssumes a new loveliness. Its broad, placid waters are framed into a glorious picture by the grand contours of Clark's Ferry, a short distance beyond Harbarg. Further on, the graceful cui into severer majesty, and palisade-like bluffs rise from the stream in long stretches of regular rock, looking like the vestiges of the city wall girdling the home of some extinct giant race. At each successive step in ascending the river the scenery is happily diversified, the hills at times assuming gentle undulating curves and again rising in harsher lines into proportions of greater grandeur. The skies lent their best aid to heighten the charm by that succession of sunshine and shadow which reveals every beauty in the landscape rich with the opulent verdure of June. The wheatfields gleamed with all the soft and lustrous intermingling shades that mark its approaching ripeness, and the oats swayed softly in gentle ripples of silvered greenery, while along the roadside a summer snow of elder blossoms showed an unwonted luxuriance. In the midst of the wide expanse of the waters of the Susquehanna, innumerable tiny islands were clothed in greenest grass or tangled thicket, and the luxuriant verdure spread on every side until even that most prosaic of all utilities, the towpath, brightened into a gleaming thread of green braided into the silvery ribbons of the water upon either side. Near Northumberland a rugged landscape answers fittingly to the name, and the mountain sides are ploughed with rifts that beneath the softening effect of distance show like belts of rich, warm brown gleaming from between the fine forest trees, and to complete the faultless panorama a sunset of golden haze rested upon the mountains, changing them into a purple tint as rich as it is rare, and ushering in that loveliest of all hours when over the green meadow stretches the golden rays of the lingering light, and the stars slowly marshal into rank through the shades of twilight. BISMARCK AND JAY COOKE.

Letter from the German Premier to the American Banker.

Last June Mr. Jay Cooke, who was then at "Gibraltar," Lake Erie, learning through Baron Gerolt that Bismarck contemplated visiting this country, and especially desired retirement and rest, sent a cordial invitation proffering to the Count the hospitalities not only of his island home, but also those of "Ogantz," his residence at Chelten Hills. Within a few days Mr. Cooke has received the following autograph letter from Prince Bis-

BERLIN, May 18, 1871. Dear Sir:-Your letter of the 18th of June last reached me on the 11th of July. If you remember how shortly that date was followed by the French declaration of war, you will excuse the otherwise unpardonable delay in answering so kind an invitation. Being about to embark in a diplomatic campaign very likely to lead to an armed conflict, I felt doubly impressed with the charms of your secluded island and your delicate hospitality. Peace is now happily restored, but a great deal remains to be done at home, and I do not know when it will be given me to satisfy my old lenging for your country. Accept the assurances of my heartfelt gratitude and To JAY COOKE, Esq., Philadelphia. distinguished consideration.

Communication.

To the Editor of The Evening Telegraph. It is hoped you will pardon the writer in occupying your valuable columns with a few confirmatory remarks respecting Franklin B. Gowen, Esq., President of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Com-

Long since, having become solicitous with reference to the policies which would seem to govern the management of the railroad corporations of our State, much uneasiness was occasioned on my part, upon the inauguration of this gentleman, as to Whether the admirable example of his predecessor would be adopted, or whether he would be hurried along in the current of the age and drift into the errors and abominations which really appear to beleaguer the office of a railroad president.

Impelled by this anxiety, the writer has for more than a year scrutinized the notions of Mr. Gowen with respect to the policies which he has instituted for the advancement of the interests of shareholders, and as regards the principles by which he has been governed in his transactions with the patrons of the company over which he presides. It is gratifying that the results of this cantious investigation has successfully demonstrated that a gentleman—by which is meant a man of henor—is par excellence qualified to represent the position of railroad president, and that the corporation which is thus governed becomes divested of its objectionable features to the community, and in being unincumbered with the private interests of officers, directors, and employes, assumes its true character of an improved highway, securing to its owners their dues, guaranteeing to its patrons their rights, and becoming a powerful auxiliary to the industrial progress of the country.

In his career he has presented an example of reform in their management, which must before long arouse the attention of the public to the fact of how little good is comparatively derived, and how much more could be attained under a proper guidance of these modern instruments of advancement; indeed, it may be said Mr. Gowen occupies the enviable attitude of a model railroad president.

In attesting this much, more is meant than the mere declaration would seem to imply, because "to be honest as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand."

In fact, a model railroad president must administer not the arbitrary regime of Napoleon with the iron conscience of Nero, but he requires the qualities of unusual precision, rare intelligence, and marked decision joined to undinching integrity, propriety, and justice.

In this position (which is made honorable only when honorably represented) a man's nature is tested and developed. The power with which he is invested and the beguiling allurements with which he is surrounded, the influence which he wields through the money-bags of the corporation, show him as he is, undisguised, it may be, as a leudal tyrant, or as a Christian gentleman, who in his official capacity is not unmindful of moral du les towards his employes and those who are largely dependent upon the use of the highway under his di-

In conclusion, it must be admitted that Mr. Gowen, avoiding the exercise of arbitrary corporate anthority, has, by a modest bearing and by an administration of honesty and justice, acquired an independent moral power which, in not begetting enmity, has, like the magnet, gathered around it the support of the community in evidence of its own

In the practice of these virtues, this gentleman exemplifies the early teachings of his venerable and highly-respected father; remembering, also, that while "It is excellent to have a giant's strength, it is tyrannous to use it like a giant." ONE WHO ASKS NO FAVORS.

A BUILDING SAVED BY A FIRE EXTINGUISHER.— The utility of fire extinguishers is daily becoming more apparent, and at no distant day they will be regarded as essential in every well-ordered house. Of their real value in the event of fire, from any Of their real value in the event of fire, from any cause, we have a case in point. During the thunder storm of Wednesday evening last, the Chester Dock Mills, in Chester, Pa., owned by Messra. Lewis & Parker, were struck by lightning. The building was set on fire, which the watchman attempted to extingu sh, but not succeeding he blew the whistle of the factory. This attracted the attention of some of the employes, among whom was John Clough, who hastened to the mill, and procured one of the Union fire extinguishers belonging to the firm, by the aid of which he put out the fire, and saved the factory. The damage was but slight. Those wno believe in the old adage "that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" should obtain one of these extinguishers without delay.—From the West Jersey Press.

THIS IS THE SEASON OF THE YEAR when the system should be thoroughly purged of the humors which create disease. There is no purgative or cathartic so mild and efficacious as HELMBOLD'S GRAPE PILLS, causing neither nausea or griping pains—as is the case with the ordinary cheap patent pills of the day—most of which are composed of calomel or mercury, and carelessly prepared by inexperienced persons. After thoroughly purging the system use HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT SARSAPARILIA, the Great Purifier, and they will insure new life, new blood, and renewed vigor. Try them.
