THE PROFITS ON WOOD PAVE-MENTS. A DESPERATE although not noisy effort is being made to force upon this city an indefinite number of contracts for laying wood pavements in our principal thoroughfares, the magnificent profits that have been realized in New York making the holders of some halfdozen or more rather dubious patents for plank roads anxious to commence operations in Philadelphia at as early a day as is possible. The plank-road people have their advocates in the Council chambers, and there are doubtless those among the representatives of the tax-payers of Philadelphia who would be only too glad to follow the example of the New York municipal legislature, and pass ordinances for the laying of wood pavements ad infinitum on receiving fifty cents per square yard. This was the standard price in New York for a wood pavement ordinance, but there are probably some among our municipal legislators who would willingly take less rather than be disobliging. We are happy, however, to believe that there are enough honorable men in both chambers to refuse their sanction to any such clear swindles as have been put upon New York in the interest of the wood pavement people, and in order that our Councilmen, and our citizens generally, may understand what a magnificent job they are expected to authorize and pay for, we invite attention to a few of the details that have been made public recently with regard to the cost of laying wood pavements in New York. The first thing the party desiring a contract had to do was to pay fifty cents per square yard into the bands of the agent of the Common Council. If this was done the necessary ordinance was passed; if not, the Councilmen were oblivious to the necessity of laying wood pavements in the desired localities. It is estimated from reliable data that any of the wood pavements now before the public can be laid for $2.50 per square yard and yet enable the contractors to pocket a handsome profit. The prices paid in New York were $4.50, $5, and $5.50, or one hundred per cent. more than the real value of the work | New Stock at Lowest Prices. performed. In all, about 438,787 square yards of wood pavement have been put down in that city, at a cost to the tax-payers of $2,504,452.50. It is estimated that a fair price for the work done would have been $1,221,462.50. so that the centractors were enabled to swell their bank accounts to the extent of $1,281,939.90, for the privilege of doing which they paid to the Common Council $296,109.50: or, as there are forty members. $7417.74 per man. Since Tweed has obtained absolute power in New York, the Council is ignored, and all the perquisites go into the pockets of the "Boss" and his satellites, at which the Councilmen complain, and in their complainings give the public a clue to the mystery of the wood pavement centracts of Gotham. We commend these facts and figures to the thoughtful consideration of the citizens of Philadelphia, for it is not at all impossible that they may be invited to pay for the luxury of plank roads in the same style that New York has been. Of course, the above statement has no reference to the real value of wood pavements, which may or may not be worth to the public what it actually costs to lay them. If an article is good for money is invested in something else. YESTERDAY Berlin was repaid for the indignities it suffered at the hands of Napoleon Bonaparte when he marched into the Prussian capital; at the head of his victorious army, and with the bravest and best of the sons of Prussia marching as captives in his train. That hour of humiliation, which broke the heart of the brave and beautiful Queen, the mother of the present Emperor of United Germany, and which beheld Prussia practically blotted from the map of Europe, has never been forgotten; but with all the patience of the Teutonic race the day of vengeance had been waited for, and when it arrived a blow was struck which more than squared the account between the Bonspartes and those who had been compelled to wear their yoke. Yesterday the wonderful campaign which has placed the France of to-day in perhaps an even worse condition than the Prussia of 1806, had an appropriate ending in a grand triumphal entry into Berlin of the Emperor at the head of the army which, less than a year ago, marched out to repel a most wicked and unprovoked attack. The path of the conquering heroes was strewn with flowers, and the Berlinese, wild with enthusiasm, as well they might be, gave the men who have fought so well for Prussia and Germany such a welcome as has not been extended to any army in modern times. The people of Prussia and of Germany certainly have good reason to rejoice, for the folly of Napoleon III did for them what they had hitherto failed to do for themselves; and not only are they free from all fear of interference on the part of France, but they stand before the world as a united nation; and the Germany which a year ago was but a dream is to-day a reality; which promises to produce important results for the future.

nothing, it is not worth having at any price; and an inspection of some of the wood pavements in this city that have only been down a year or two, will convince most of our taxpayers that it will be more profitable if their

On our first page will be found an obituary sketch of Clement L. Vallandigham, who died this morning from the effect of an accidental pistol shot which he inflicted upon himself yesterday. Mr. Vallandigham, during the past ten years, has been prominently before the public as the representative of the extreme State rights, secession element of the Democracy, and the difficulties in which he was involved during the war on account of his loudly expressed Rebel sympathies served to elevate him to the position of a leader in the Democratic party. For a full review of Mr. Vallandigham's course and character as a politician we refer our readers to the sketch upon our first page.
