A WORD ABOUT EARLY RISING.

A medical gentleman who gave years to investigating the subject—to interviewing old folks, and rummaging among family histories—states that he never came across a case of remarkable longevity unaccompanied by the habit of early rising, from which testimony it might be inferred that they die early who lie abed late; but we hold this to be a fallacy. The medical gentleman started with a theory already formed, and, after the manner of partisans, looked at but one side of the question.

That most elderly people are early risers is due to the damaging fact that they cannot sleep o'mornings. They necessarily rise betimes, and unjustifiably make a monstrous virtue of it. After a man passes his fiftieth birthday he usually awakens at sunrise, though perhaps he used to let the breakfast-bell ring in vain when he was younger. As our theorist confined his observations to aged people who could not slumber after the gray dawn had tapped at the window-pane, he came easily to the conclusion that men live to be old because they do not sleep late, instead of seeing that they do not sleep late because they are old. Having with a great deal of trouble secured this lop-sided datum, our friend started off with his theory in favor of rising with the lark. Not being a lark ourselves, we decline to regulate our movements on any ornithological principle. We believe in a generous allowance of sleep. We believe that too little sleep is more injurious than too much. Unless a man's business or professional engagements oblige him to turn out very early, he does his physical nature injustice by defrauding himself of those delicious morning naps which so refresh and strengthen one. For men who do brain work there is no medicine like plenty of sleep:—

"Sleep, that knits up the ravell'd sleeve of care,
The death of each day's life, sore labor's bath,
Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course,
Chief nourisher in life's feast!"

Cervantes' humble hero did not misplace his benison in showering it on the man that invented sleep; but the man that invented waking up much before seven o'clock in the morning was no friend to the human race.

There is an immense amount of nonsense on record in defense of early rising; this has been written chiefly by poets who breakfasted—when they did breakfast—at twelve o'clock. Thomson, who gave birth to the atrocious sentiment embodied in the line was one of the laziest men of his century. He generally lay in bed until noon (meditating verses on sunrise), and did not often get fully awake until later in the day, for he was frequently observed strolling in his garden at Richmond, after breakfast, eating peaches off a tree, with both hands in his waistcoat pockets!

"Falsely luxurious, will not man awake,"

We would like to know what inducement there is for early rising in the city. What is more shabby and dispiriting than a city street before the shop window-shutters are taken down, when nobody is astir but the milk-and-water man, and Mary washing off the front steps? In the country there is a kind of bloom in the morning that wears off in an hour or two; this is worth enjoying. Daybreak on the sea-coast or up among the mountains is a glorious spectacle; but familiarity with it breeds contempt. It is your habitual late riser who takes in the full richness of nature on those rare occasions when he gets up early. It is well enough to rise with the sun (we won't say with the lark, because we know nothing about its eccentricities) two or three times in the course of the summer, if for no other purpose than to be prepared to combat the intolerance of the professional early riser, who, if he were in a state of perfect health, would lie abed until nine o'clock. There are few small things more apt to be exasperating than this early bird with the worm of his conceit in his bill. How he scorns you for your indolent habits! Here he has been up "these three hours," he has read the morning paper, been to the Post Office, seen Smith in the distance, conversed with Jones, came near meeting Brown, while you—you were snoozing away the best hours of life. Let the old fellow prattle on, for some day you will grow restless yourself after the clock has struck five, and will want the privilege of jeering at your son-in-law, or your grandson, or any of the younger drowsy heads of your household, who may chance to come down late to breakfast. The old fellow would sleep later if he could, but he can't, and if he wants to make a virtue of it, what's the harm? Maybe he hasn't as many virtues as you have. He certainly has not had your refreshing sleep.

PHILADELPHIA, June 2, 1871.

In accordance with a resolution adopted by the Common Council of the City of Philadelphia on Thursday, the first day of June, 1871, the annexed bill, entitled "An ordinance to authorize a loan for the construction of culverts and for police purposes," is hereby published for public information.

JOHN ECKSTEIN,
Clerk of Common Council.

AN ORDINANCE

TO AUTHORIZE A LOAN FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF CULVERTS AND FOR POLICE PURPOSES.

Section 1. The Select and Common Councils of the City of Philadelphia do ordain, That the Mayor of Philadelphia be and he is hereby authorized to borrow at not less than par, on the credit of the city, from time to time, four hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars, to be applied as follows, viz:—First. For the construction of culverts, one hundred and tweaty-five thousand dollars. Second. For the purchase of ground and the erection and extension of buildings for Police Station-houses, three hundred thousand dollars. For which interest, not to exceed the rate of six per cent. per annum, shall be paid half yearly, on the first days of January and July, at the office of the City Treasurer. The principal of said loan shall be payable and paid at the expiration of thirty years from the date of the same, and not before, without the consent of the holders thereof; and the certificates therefor, in the usual form of the certificates of City Loan, shall be issued in such amounts as the lenders may require, but not for any fractional part of one hundred dollars; or, if required, in amounts of five hundred or one thousand dollars; and it shall be expressed in said certificates that the loan therein mention, and the interest thereof, are payable free from all taxes.

Section 2. Whenever any loan shall be made by virtue thereof, there shall be, by force of this ordinance, annually appropriated out of the income of the corporate estates and from the sum raised by taxation, a sum sufficient to pay the interest on said certificates; and the further sum of three-tenths of one per centum on the par value of such certificates so issued shall be appropriated quarterly out of said income and taxes to a sinking fund, which fund and its accumulations are hereby especially pledged for the redemption and payment of said certificates.
