The Great Indian Council.

CHICAGO, June 23.—The Times' special from Okmulgee, Indian Territory, June 10, furnishes further particulars of the great Indian council. It says much uneasiness is felt by many here lest the President should exercise his constitution may be a second the state. tional right of appointing men from the States to the higher offices. To do so would create wide-spread dissatisfaction. There are men in the Territory unquestionably competent to exercise the functions of self-government, and as the population are extremely sensitive at anything that looks like subordination of the interests of the Indians to those of the whites, this exercise of the appoint-ing power at Washington could not fall to be productive of very mischievous results.

The warlike chiefs from the Cheyenne, Arrapahoe, Caddo, and other tribes have been cor-dially received at the great council fire, and the differences vividly depicted to them of the two roads that lay before them to pursue. While the path of peace leads to secure homes, benign treatment, and all the comforts enjoyed by their civilized brethren, the red path will lead to their ultimate extermination.

The utterances of the chiefs were all for peace, but they want permanent homes guaranteed. All complained of spoliation and depor-tation by frontiersmen. The Osage chiefs were eloquent over their wrongs.

The committee to whom was referred the best course to be pursued to secure an established government, proposed in Decamber, 1870 presented their report this morning.

The report was followed by a proposition of Mr. Brown, a Seminole delegate, to provide equal representation in the Senate of the Cherokee, Creek, Choctaw, Chickasaw and Seminole nations. This proposition has been earnestly discussed for several days. Consideration is postponed till Monday.

It was resolved that the action of the General

Council in 1870, which framed and submitted a Constitution to the several nations represented in said council, is hereby reaffirmed. Provision is further made for creating a provisional gov-ernment, and the election of a Governor and

Indian Supplies. WASHINGTON, June 28.—The following contracts for transportation of Indian supplies were awarded by the Indian Bureau to-day:-Chick, Brown & Co., of Kit Carson, from Kit Carson, Col., to Fort Defiance, Fort Wingate, Los Pinos Agency, one dollar per 100 pounds per 100 miles; John F. Coad, of Omaha, from Fort D. A. Russell to Red Cloud Agency, $1.45 per 100 pounds per 100 miles; D. J. McCann, of Nebraska City, from Fort D. A. Russell to Whetstone Agency, at $1.75 100 pounds per 100 miles.

A letter received by Commissioner Parker today from Superintendent Hoag encloses a report of Agent Tatum, dated Fort Sill, June 10, in which he states that the Kiowas are collecting the forty-one mules recently stolen, in order to return them to the agency, and gives the following interesting particulars of the Death of Satank while being taken to Texas for trial for killing white settlers, on the 8th instant. Satank and Big Tree were informed that they were to start that morning to Texas, to which they demurred, preferring to be sent anywhere else. Satank, whom I have regarded as the worst Indian in this agency, protested that he would not go to Texas, but would do something to be shot at ence.

Big Tree told him that if he did they would all be shot, and taking hold of him pushed him to the wagon in which he was to ride, with two soldiers to guard nim. Colonel McKenzie and Colonel Grierson were near him when put into

The prisoners had all been carefully searched some days before when about one mile from the post. Satank, having finished his death song, had unobserved succeeded in drawing the shackles off his hands, and, drawing a butcherknife, started suddenly at his guard, cutting one of them slightly in the leg. They escaped from the wagon, leaving their guns, one of which Satank took, and while in the act transferring a cartridge from the chamber to the barrel was shot several times. He died in about twenty minutes. One random shot hit Antonio Barello, a teamster, in the side of the head, but he is not conside.ed seriously wounded. Satank was buried near the post.

The Lanahan Trial. NEW YORK, June 23 .- In the Lanahan trial this morning, Judge Reynolds reviewed the chief points at issue before the committee. said it was proposed to decapitate Lanahan for one act, and then hold an inquiry into the charges preferred by him against the concern. The question was whether Lanahan had a right to examine the books.

If he had a right, he was justified on going to a civil court; if not, he had done so unnecessarily and his act was unjustified. Counsel quoted page 252 of Discipline to prove that the junior agent had a right to know everything about the concern. The word in Discipline was "agents," implying equal power and responsibility. The next question was whether Lanahan was denied access to the books. Counsel reviewed the evidence to prove that free and unrestricted access was denied his client by Dr. Carlton, and that therefore he was justified in appealing to the civil courts.

Alluding to Fancher's assertion yesterday that Lanahan was not a corporator, Judge Reynolds said that for boldness, not to say assurance, that assertion eclipsed all he ever heard, when the charter named Lanahan distinctly as one of the corporators.

The counsel charged Dr. Bingham, secretary of the committee, and one of the court trying this charge, with indorsing an affidavit made by

He censured Bingham in severe terms for expressing an opinion pending the trial. Lanahan had no object but the elucidation of the truth. If he had sought his own personal interest he would not have pulled against Carlton, who held out the probability of Lanahan's succeeding to the chief agency. Mr. Reynolds concluded at 12 45 P. M. The committee then took a recess. General Runyon will address the committee this afternoon for the prosecution.

The Railway Troubles at Bloomfield. New York, June 28.—Last night the authorities at Bloomfield, N. J., applied for an injunction to restrain the Montclair Railroad Company from continuing the construction of a bridge over the old portion of the Paterson turn-pike. At an early hour this morning, Meeker & Hedden, contractors for the bridge, arrived at the scene with a large force of men, who were said to be well armed, and announced their intention of holding the ground against any opposition. As the citizens are equally determined, a conflict seems imminent the authorities interfere to prevent bloodshed.

Bachelor's Wives and Old Maid's Children. The old bachelor looks critically on men's wives. He takes an investigating interest in analytical sort of way, which the husbands did not practice in the first instance, and which they would hardly like to have fully explained to them now. But the bachelor is nothing if not critical. He detects the tinge of red or gray, the inequalities of curve or line, and sees clearly through all the mysteries and artifices of the toilet. He has got an exhaustive sneer:-"The poor fellow has married for money," or, "the poor fellow has married for love." "I y Jove, sir! look at that woman's waspish wai it! Where can she have crammed her viscera "-or suchflike personal observation. Whatever jewel a man may think he has found, the connoisseur bachelor will hold that he can find a flaw in it. Sometimes he will do this quite cynically. Other men will do it just as often, though not cynically. The object of such criticisms is very often some mere self-glorification. If hethe bachelor-had married, no one would have been able to criticize Casar's wife. He would not have missed fortune, as one friend has done; or beauty, as a second; or family, as a third. His wife would have far transcended the commonplace wives of average men. She would be everything that a woman ought to be. In short, the bachelor's wife is always perfection in the abstract.

Naturally enough, the thoughts of the old bachelor mainly run upon his loves; but that of the old maid upon young children. That mighty instinct of maternity is evermore busy in her heart. Cats and parrots are only an excuse for babies. Had it pleased God to bless her with them, how she would have cared for the little loves! No children would be better, or better cared for than hers. When she goes into other houses, she does not, indeed, think unkindly of children, for indeed she loves them all. But she cannot help drawing some disparaging comments between the children that she meets, and those non-existent, possible children that would have been paragons and phenomena. Other children would have been untidy; but hers would have been the pink of neatness. Other children are not perfectly well behaved, have little tempers, betray more of the human than of the angelic nature; but hers would be nothing of this kind. They would be good, like Miss Edgeworth's children; talk science like the children in Joyce's Scientific Dialogues, recollect all their dates, be distinguished from early days for the utmost propriety, never cry out loud, never tumble off chairs or downstairs, never show rents, stains of jam, hooks or eyes spoilt, or tell fibs, or steal the sugar out of the sugar-basin. What little cherubs such children must be! They must surely feel their wings growing, and be ready for a flight from this lower earth. — London Society.

VINNIE REAM'S STATUE OF LINCOLN. The following, which is the concluding paragraph of a letter from Hiram Powers, Esq., the celebrated sculptor, to the editor of the New York Evening Post, expresses very plainly in what estimation he holds Vinnie Ream's statue of Lincoln, for which the nation has been obliged to pay $15,000:-

"I suppose that you, as well as all other well-wishers for art in our country, have been mortified, if not really disgusted, at the success of the Vinnie Ream statue of our glorious old Lincoln. An additional five thousand dollars paid for this caricature! Clark Mills was bad enough, but this last act of Congress in faver of a female lobby member, who has no more talent for art than the carver of weeping willows on tombstones, really fills the mind of the genuine student of art (who thinks that years of profound study of art as a science is necessary) with despair. For why should we study and waste years of our lives in order to do well, while only the honor comes to-not ourselves, but may to our memories long after we are dead, and all the profit to mountebanks?"

Scottish Humor.

The Scotch are essentially stern and hard in their manner; yet under all this lies a vein of deep and kindly feeling, which gives a placid force of pleasantry even to a rebuke, and, while it forces a laugh, cannot offend. Take, for instance, the story, as told by our old friend Dean Ramsay, of a clergyman who thought his people were making a rather unconscionable objection to his using a MS. in delivering his sermon. They urged, "What gars ye tak' up your bit papers to the pu'pit?" He replied that it was best, for really he could not remember his sermons, and must have his paper. "Weel, weel, minister, then dinna expect that we can remember them."

We will cite just one more specimen from the same source, by way of additional exam-

At an examination by a minister of the flock, previous to the administration of the Communion, a man was asked, "What kind of a man was Adam ?" "Ou, just like ither foulk!" The minister insisted on having a more special description of the first man, and pressed for more explanation. "Weel, said the respondent, "he was just like Joe Simson, the horse couper." "How so?" asked the minister. "Weel, naebody got onything by him, and mony lost!"

Of wit, combined with pathos-deep, sensitive feeling, which, perhaps, is the best definition of humor, after all—the richest store is found in Scottish poetry, more espe-cially in the quaint old ballads for which the North is so eminently famous. Before going any further, it would be heresy to pass by Robert Burns, a man whom, whatever his faults, every true lover of genius adores. Of that special humor of which we have been speaking, there are no better specimens to be found than in "The Cotter's Saturday Night," "Tam O'Shanter," or that masterly satire on the unco guid of the Presbytery, "Holy Wil-lie's Prayer." Epigrams are the truest vehicles of condensed humor, and for that reason are the most difficult feats of versifying to attempt; but Burns was remarkable, even in this respect. Take the following, written on a pane of glass in an inn at Moffat:-

"Ask why God made the gem so small. And why so huge the granite? Because God meant mankind should set The higher value on it."

Or this, to a lady who was looking up the text during a sermon:— "Fair maid, you need not take the hint, Nor idle texts pursue: Twas guilty sinners that he meant—

Not angels, such as you.' -Once a Week.
