TUESDAY, JUNE 27, 1871.

THE EVENING TELEGRAPH, from its original establishment, has been in the receipt of telegraphic news from the New York Associated Press, which consists of the Tribune, Times, Herald, World, Sun, Journal of Commerce, Evening Post, Commercial Advertiser, and Evening Express. The success which has attended our enterprise is, in itself, a sufficient evidence of the freshness, fullness, and reliability of the news which we have received from this source. In March, 1870, we entered into a special contract by which THE EVENING TELEGRAPH has the exclusive use of the news furnished in the afternoon by the Associated Press to its own members, the North American, Inquirer, Ledger, Press, Age, Record, and German Democrat, of this city, and the leading journals of the East, North, West, and South; and hereafter THE TELE-GRAPH will be the only evening paper published in this ity in which the afternoon despatches of the Associated Press will appear.

The earliest regular edition of the THE EVENING TELEGRAPH goes to press at 11/2 o'clock, and the subsequent regular editions at 2%, 8%, and 4%. Whenever there is important news of the compilcations in Europe, extra editions will be issued after this hour, and before the regular time for the early edition. INDEPENDENCE IN POLITICS.

THE very idea of a republic presupposes that it is the duty no less than the right of every citizen to take an active interest in the administration of the government. Those who by the habitual neglect of their duties allow the doors to be opened wide for corruption in every shape are scarcely less blamable than those who take advantage of their neighbors' negligence to wield the powers of the State for their own individual benefit. The man of business who enjoys all the advantages that a free government can afford for the accumulation of wealth at least owes it to himself and to his posterity that his influence shall be given in favor of liberty, law, and justice, so far as is possible, by showing an intelligent interest in politics; and those who neglect their duties in this matter are enemies to society, no matter how honorable and virtuous their private lives may be. If it were possible to do so, every citizen who possesses the right of suffrage should be compelled to exercise it; and it should be considered disgraceful to shirk a duty upon the proper performance of which the safety, honor, and welfare of society depend. It is not only a citizen's duty to vote, however, but it is his duty to vote intelli gently. When a man arrives at the age of one-and-twenty years, it is time for him to' dispassionately consider to what extent his peculiar opinions are the results merely of education, or are based upon sound principles that commend themselves to his impartial judgment. A man who is a Republican or Democrat merely because his father was one before him is only a dead weight in politics, and his principal use is to balance an equal amount of stupidity on the other side. A man who affiliates with a certain political party, and who, having made his choice, sticks to it through all its vicissitudes, no matter how much the times may have changed or the ideas which once gave it vitality may have become obsolete, is little more than a tool in the hands of political traders who do not hesitate to prostitute the greatest principles if they can obtain so much ready cash by so doing. It is not only essential for a citizen to choose a particular class of political ideas to which he may give his adhesion, but also for him to narrowly watch the changes that are continually taking place, which bring new ideas to the surface, and which frequently make party names the merest burlesques, Political parties are necessary, not merely for the aids they afford for keeping the machinery of government in motion, but for the opportunities they offer for the discussion of political principles and for preserving the balance of power, but mere blind partisanship is as contemptible in an educated newspaperreading citizen of a free country as is the intriguing and wire-pulling of the trading politicians who seek to take advantage of it greater or less extent, the control of the result, and each one should vote with the same sense of responsibility as if he knew that his ballet would be decisive. A man who is fit at all to exercise the right of suffrage owes it te himself, to the community of which he is a member, and to the cause of popular liberty to seriously ask himself how the interests of the public at large and of himself in his relations as a citizen of a great nation may best be served, and then, having fully made up his mind, to cast his ballot as his best judgment and conscience may dictate. If every citizen did this, party lines might probably be as distinctly drawn as they are now, seemingly antagonistic principles and interests would marshal men into opposing ranks, but political contests would cease to be mere games of chance between rival aspirants for office, and the opinions and wishes of the people would be represented in our municipal, State, and National Governments in a very different manner from at present. Let it be an assured thing that a majority of the voters cannot be relied upon to follow the lead of certain politiciars who arrogate to themselves the functions of party managers, and the scamps who freight as fast as it is delivered at Duluth.

At every election every citizen has, to a attach themselves to great political parties for the sake of plunder will either have to earn their living honorably or will bring up in the penitentiary, where they rightly belong. It will be impossible for men who make a trade of politics, and to whom principle is a byword of contempt, to lead the public by the nose; and as honor will attach to the holding of the great offices of the Government, there will be a competition among honorable men to obtain them, and they will not be left to be the prey of conscienceless scoundrels whom no private citizen would trust in the management of his own affairs, We believe that the independent voters who study the great political principles of the times for themselves, and who deposit their ballots at every election as their best judgment dictates, are rapidly increasing, and we hope that they will continue to increase. The future of republican liberty, not only on this continent but throughout the world, depends upon them, and now and ever may they follow the advice of Davy Crockett's maxim-"Be sure you're right, and then go ahead."

THE CENTENNIAL.

THE preliminary arrangements for a grand centennial celebration of American Independence are gradually being perfected. At a meeting of the Joint Special Committee of Councils which has this subject in charge, held yesterday, the chairman submitted a list of the names of State and Territorial commissioners already appointed to represent Florida. Indiana, Minnesota, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, Texas, Wisconsin, Arizona, Dakota, Montana, and Connecticut; and commissioners will probably soon be appointed to represent all the other States and Territories.

To insure the success of the proposed demonstration, and to make it worthy of the event it commemorates, however, the cooperation of the whole civilized world should be secured. The first duty of Philadelphians is to cultivate and develop among themselves a proper sense of the importance of the centennial and of the necessity of devoting their best energies to a thorough organization of its details, and to the task of fitting the city to become the resort of millions of visitors. We should, in every sense of the word, put our municipal house in order; and, while it is being prepared, spare no pains to extend invitations and a knowledge of projected inducements to participate in the centennial broadcast over the remotest corners of the United States and over every civilized nation.

No definite programme for the centennial has yet been devised. The best talent of the city, State, and nation could be worthily employed in elaborating ideas calculated to include in the demonstration the greatest possible variety of appropriate attractions, and to promote its completeness. We have seen in what spirit events possessing a special interest for only a portion of our citizens have been celebrated. How the Methodists, for instance, celebrated their American centennial; how the Germans of Philadelphia recently celebrated the triumph of the Fatherland; how political parties and secret or other societies celebrate, from time to time, notable events connected with their respective organizations; but it remains to be seen in what spirit the whole body of American citizens will celebrate the grandest of human events, in which they all have a common interest, and which at the same time has a significance for the whole family of civilized nations, and for every human being upon the face of the globe. While every American should be willing to sacrifices, to increase expendimake tures, and to use his best talents and exertions to add eclat and to round out such a demonstration, it is peculiarly incumbent upon the citizens of Philadelphia to take an especial part in these labors. They will be the hosts of the occasion; this city will be the Mecca of all lovers of freedom. and of all who cherish feelings of peace and good-will to the American Union; and as the temple of national independence is under our especial guardianship, it especially behooves us to see that its portals are rendered attractive, and that the memories it evokes

We desire to call the attention of our readers to the above tabular statement of the earnings of the Lake Superior and Mississippi Railroad for the first and second weeks of the present month. This line. which extends from St. Paul, Minnesota, to Duluth, at the head of Lake Superior, a distance of one hunered and fifty-five miles, with branches to Minneapolis and Stillwater, is already doing a large and nourishing business. Its favorable location is destined to make it the favorite route for the shipment of flour and grain from the Northwestern States to the Eastern markets. There have keen shipped via this route this season, since the opening of navigation, 155,478 bushels of wheat and 41,523 barrels of

The distance from St. Paul to Milwaukee is 406 miles against 155 miles to Duluth, while the distance to Aychy Lake is almost the same from both places, and it is not difficult to foresee that the immense trade will follow this new, shorter, and cheaper route to the Eastern markets, thus making Duluth, in a few years, the great shipping port of the North-

This line, at its southern end, has one arm terminating in the fertile valley of the St. Croix at Stillwater; one at St. Paul, the head of navigation on the Mississippi river; and one passing through Minneapolis and extending down to a junction with the St. Paul and Sloux City Railroad on the Minnesota river; and at its northern terminus, Duluth, it connects with the Atlantic, Duluth, and Pacific line and Union Steamboat Company, composed of ten firstclass steamers, connecting at Eric with the Phila-delphia and Eric and Pennsylvania Central Railways, at Buffalo with the Eric Railway. The St. Lawrence and Lake Superior line, consisting of three fleet and elegant steamers, connecting at Collingwood with the Northern Railroad of Canada at d the railway system of Canada; the Northern Transportation Company, connecting at Sarnia and Ogdensburg with the Grand Trunk and Vermont Central Railways and two lines running to Milwaukee and Chicago, making in all a fleet of twenty-three steamers besides numerous safling vessels, which at no time this season have been able to take away the
