

ENGLAND'S POSITION IN CHINA.

From the London Times, February 24.

Of all the episodes of English history the Chinese war of 1856-7 is likely to be the most extraordinary. It is hard to say which of its features is the strangest. Having come to a rupture with the representative of an enormous Empire, at its most important season, we despatched four regiments of infantry from this country for the purpose of bringing 300,000,000 people to terms. While the troops were on their way to their destination we were surprised by the mutinies in Bengal, and proceeded inconspicuously to put the war with China on the shelf and send the expedition in another direction altogether. Our Indian authorities even borrowed the Peninsular himself from Hong Kong, and, along with this functionary, the single tablet actually under his orders. For six months or so we dismissed the Chinese war from our thoughts, and kept the Celestial Empire to bay with a ship-war of two, until at last, having got a little breathing time in India, we sought it better to make an end of the matter at Canton.

With this view, accordingly, we sent out a few hundred mariners, and Lord Elgin, having returned with the 59th Regiment from Calcutta, it was determined to open the campaign. The descent of this force, aided by a French brigade, upon the empire of China, proved entirely successful. Canton is in our hands, and Mr. Commissioner Yeh is on board one of our ships, a prisoner of war. To complete the analogy, nobody is giving the smallest thought to the matter. In this country affairs derive their interest from their Parliamentary importance. Last year the whole nation was convulsed about China, and Yeh's name was in everybody's mouth. New labels are turned again, for, though the Minister is once more out, it is upon another question, and the mail bringing in the communication of the business undertaken twelve months ago is almost unduly in the sensation created by Lord Derby's new government.

The event, however, is really worth attention, for its consequences are less than its character. It is now manifest that the coercion of the Chinese Government was a work easily within our power, and that our officers for so long a period might have been terminated almost at any time we pleased. Our might is now as evident as our right. It was thought somewhat doubtful even on the spot, whether a treaty with such a fierce population, under the command of a resolute and merciful Governor, who had been allowed several months to prepare for the attack, might not present formidable obstacles to the assailants. Yeh's own announcements breathed a spirit of freedom and defiance. He was to show us pieces with monster guns, to overwhelm us with Tartar sobriety, to catch us in tiger pits, and to bury us alive in the streets of Canton; nor were any of these menaces altogether absurd, considering the proportion between our numbers and his. Nevertheless, by a most judicious combination of courage and strategy, the place has dropped fairly into our hands, and a campaign of a few days has sufficed to give us possession of Canton, and its Government.

All now, as we have caught this Tartar, who are we to do with him? This is a question that is at present the subject of much speculation. It is his own people, his own country, his own property, and the capture of Yeh is an operation as desperate as the capture of Canton. We suspect that our victory itself might, in some degree, have been owing to a friendly party in the city. Yeh could not face even the Chinese back-bite in his impudible vanity. The Chinese merchants knew our demands, and knew them to be reasonable. It was at least as much their interest as ours that the tea trade should flourish, and nobody's interest but Yeh's that a resolution indignantly conceived should be maintained at all hazards and through the worst extremities of war. This through-headed official, however, is now in our custody, and we think the best course to pursue would be to bring him to England. We should probably save his head by such a proceeding, and though he may not have earned the protection at present, he may possibly be of some use to us here.

California Circulating Rhymes. When from my room I chance to stray, To spend an hour at the close of day, I ever find a place most dear, where some friend waits to laugh with me. [Sarcasmo] Age. Ah! yes, my friend of city life, are such a treat as such a strife; but better than such a life, is the pleasure of a true friend. [Placer Herald] Such pleasures may suit laser minds, but with the good no favor find; we think the purest joy in life, is making love to one's own wife. [Volcano Ledger] Most worthy choice, my worthy friend, in hymen's joys your cares to end; but we do better after. We hope we are not presumptuous in the opinion, but it really seems as if men became dissatisfied of a good wife, and therefore, in coming to see us in our Jung teary. A visit to England has left Campbell in a fine frame of mind, and Sir Colville Quaid with the set this minute twenty-five years ago was driving Yeh into a Park. In London, Commissionaire Hyde would learn two lessons—first, that it is not easy to resist our power, and next, that there is nothing in our designs to render such a resistance desirable. By and by he might go back to China and employ the capacity which he evidently possesses in facilitating our access to the interior of the empire.

The anomalous characteristics of this whole affair have been continued up to the present time. The Chinese war never interrupted the Chinese trade, and the capture of Canton seems to have given a remarkable stimulus to business. A Chinese Governor, it is said, has been appointed under British authority, and the matter of fact impressions prevailing among Chinese of all classes will lead them to be readily enough to accept our suggestions. It is probable that a war which has never affected commerce, which has been attended with no feelings of hostility between the belligerents, and which has just been consummated with forces ludicrously disproportioned to the task, will end without the slightest soreness, and even produce results eminently pacific. The immediate object of our operations, viz: the removal of the conditions officiously imposed upon our residents at Canton, has now been accomplished. Our annoyances in this respect probably from the tradition of a good treaty of the Canton trade maintained and exacerbated by the accidental bigotry of a particular Governor. We have now got terms of our future settlement, and the terms, in our own hands. We anticipate no difficulty in establishing the regulations desirable, and which have been already proposed at other ports to be perfectly compatible with the pursuits, interests, and even prejudices of the Chinese. The character of China, in fact, as depicted by our correspondent, much resembles that of Africa, as described by Dr. Livingstone. All the impediments to intercourse are on the outside, and are mainly created by the interested prohibitions of a class. Penetrate this barrier, and you find an immense population amicably disposed, and perfectly ready to receive any proposals in the way of barter or trade. If no signal of hostility is given by the Mandarins, it seems that any merchant or traveller may roam over China at his pleasure. These opportunities, be they worth much or little, it would certainly be to the advantage of all parties to enjoy. Europeans want silk and tea from the Chinese. Chibamen are particularly anxious to earn silver from European commodities which we have adapted our markets more successfully to their taste. At any rate, this traditional isolation, which the Chinese are quick enough to enforce for their own advantage, had better come to an end altogether. It is hard enough, as we see, to be preserved from the consistent policy of the Japanese, but such pretensions are utterly untenable in the case of an empire driving its borders of emigrants into foreign colonies. For the present moment, however, it is sufficient for us to congratulate ourselves on the unequalled success of operations which, in the event of a different result, might have occasioned no slight perplexities.

DR. BELLAMY. New England used to be full of traditions of the old sages of Dr. Bellamy, one of the most popular theologians and preachers of his time. One or two of his sayings circulated about us in our childhood. For example, when one had built a fire of green wood, he exclaimed— "Warm the here? I'd as soon try to warm me by the star-light on the north side of a tomb stone!" Speaking of the chapel bell on Yale College, he said— "It is about as good a bell as a fur cap with a sheep's tail in it." A young minister, who had made himself conspicuous for a severe and denunciatory style of preaching, came to him one day to inquire why he did not have more success. "Why, man," said the doctor, "can't you take a little of the fisherman? How do you get to work if you want to catch a trout? You get a little hook and a line, and you let it captrally and throw it in as gently as possible, and then you sit and wait, and you wait your fish till you get him ashore. Now, then, you get a great red hook and you throw it, and you catch the water, and you get the fish or be —?" "The doctor himself gained such a reputation as an expert spiritual fisherman, that some of his parishioners, like experienced anglers, played shy of his hook, though they were so skillfully baited. "Why, Mr. A.," said he to an old farmer in his neighborhood, "they tell me you are an Atheist. Don't you believe in the being of a God?" "No," said the man. "But Mr. A., let's look into this. You believe that the world around us exists from some cause?" "No, I don't."

"Well, then, at any rate, you believe in your own existence?" "No, I don't."

"I tell you what, doctor," said the man, "I don't go to be twitted up by any of your sayings, and so I tell you I don't believe anything—and I am not going to believe anything!" California Circulating Rhymes. When from my room I chance to stray, To spend an hour at the close of day, I ever find a place most dear, where some friend waits to laugh with me. [Sarcasmo] Age. A ROMANTIC MARRIAGE.—A young man named Chas. Albough, of Mt. Gilead, Ohio, was recently convicted of Mail robbery at Cleveland, and sentenced to a term in the State prison. He is twenty years of age, and the events of the past few months will fill an important chapter in his life's history. On Christmas day he eloped with his bride's daughter, a Miss German, in her sixteenth year, went to Alexandria, Pennsylvania, and was married. An effort was made to keep the affair secret, but it was discovered by the girl's parents, who were highly incensed at their daughter's imprudence. On the 28th of January Mr. Pringle, the U. S. mail agent, arrested Albough upon a charge of robbing the mail. He was taken to Cleveland, tried, convicted, and sentenced before the United States Court, and upon reaching Carlington on his way to the penitentiary, the young wife came aboard the cars to bid farewell to her convict husband. The meeting was a painfully affecting one; and as she turned to leave him, overpowered by her feelings, she fell fainting in the arms of the bystander, who carried her gently into the station-house, and the cars rolled over the rails with increased speed to make up for the detention. Rather a sad honey-moon.

The Greatest Medical Discovery OF THE AGE.

Dr. Kesson of Roxbury has discovered in one of our common household weeds a remedy that cures every kind of humor, from the worst Stroufula down to a common pimple. He has tried it in over 1100 cases, and never failed except in two cases (both throat tumors). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its virtue, all within twenty miles of Boston. Two bottles are warranted to cure a nursing sore mouth. One three bottles will cure the worst kind of Pimples on the face. Two or three bottles will clear the system of Biles.

Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst cancer in the mouth and stomach. Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst cases of Rheumatism. One to two bottles are warranted to cure all humors in the Eyes. Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the ears and itching of the head. Four to six bottles are warranted to cure crooked and running noses. One bottle will cure scaly eruption of the skin. Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of Ringworm. Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of Rheumatism. Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the most violent cases of Gout. Five to eight bottles will cure the worst case of Scrofula.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the above directions are strictly followed. Reader, I prescribe you a thousand bottles of this in the vicinity of Boston. I know the effect of it in every case. So sure a water will extinguish fire, so sure will this cure humors. After trial it always appears to cure. There are two things about this herb that appear to me surprising; first, that it grows in marshes, in some places quite plentiful, and yet its value has never been known until I discovered it in 1840—second, that it should cure all kinds of humors. In my own practice I always kept it strictly for humors, but since its introduction as a general Family medicine, great and wonderful cures have been found that I had never suspected.

Several cases of epileptic fits, which were always considered incurable, have been cured by a few bottles. O, what a relief it will prove to those in all cases of epilepsy. There are here few who have seen more of it than I have. I know of several cases of Dropsy, all of them cured by it. For the various kinds of Rheumatism, Sciatic Pain in the Side, Gout, Gravel, Pain in the Neck, Stomach, and Spleen, it should be freely used in the spring of the year, to purify the blood, and to give it the force of seasons. An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and opens the bowels, and restores the system, renovates the strength of the body, and restores the vitality of the system. It is a safe and reliable remedy, and its use is recommended in all cases of disease, and its use is recommended in all cases of disease, and its use is recommended in all cases of disease.

FOR ALL THE PURPOSES OF A FAMILY PHYSIC.

There is long existed a public demand for an effective purgative pill which could be relied on as safe and perfectly free in its operation. This has been provided to meet that demand, and an extensive trial of its virtues has conclusively shown what success it accomplishes the purpose designed. It is easy to take a physical pill, but not easy to make them so harmless and so effective as this. It is not a strong medicine, but it is a safe and reliable remedy, and its use is recommended in all cases of disease, and its use is recommended in all cases of disease, and its use is recommended in all cases of disease.
