Mr. Matthews faid no man can suppose that any similar case can be cited, where 280 officers who were prisoners were without a Surgeon-where a great proportion of them were fick, and had no humanity shewn them, by those who held them

Mr. Heister faid, if there are not any cases of a similar nature existing, the clause can do no harm-if there is, the door is opened to their obtaining like justice. This amendment was rejected. The Committee then rose, and reported the bill with amendments-which were agreed to by the House.

The question on the bill's passing tobe engros'd was negatived—24 to 22—and so the bill was lost. A bill for granting relief to certain officers of the late army therein described, was read.

A meffage from the Senate was received, informing the House, that they recede from their amendment to the bill for promoting the progress of useful arts, which had been disagreed to, by the

A message from the President of the United States, with exemplifications of three acts passed by the State of New-York, was received, viz .-An Act, providing for the safe keeping of prisoners of the United States. An act for ceding light houses to the United States-and an act ratifying the amendments to the Constitution.

The bill, ceding the Light House of New-York to the United States, was referred to a select com-

In committee of the whole on the bill to provide for the punishment of certain crimes against the United States.

The clause which provides for the diffection of the bodies of malefactors, it was moved should be ftruck out.

This, it was faid, was wounding the feelings of the living, and could do no good.

It was faid in answer, that it was only following a mode adopted by some of the wifest nations. It was making those who had injured society, contribute to its advantage by furnishing subjects of experimental furgery. It was attended with falutary effects, as it certainly encreased the dread of punishment, when it is contemplated with this atttendant circumstance.

Mr. Stone was opposed to the clause: He said it was contrary, he believed, to the practice of the feveral States—that it was making punish-ment wear the appearance of cruelty, which had a tendency to harden the public mind.

Mr. Williamson stated a variety of arguments in favor of the clause—and shewed the very great and important improvements which had been made in Surgery from experiment.

Mr. Page spoke against the clause. And Mr. Smith and Mr. Sedgwick in favor of it. The committee rose without deciding-and the house ad-and the bill passed to be enacted. The bill for the relief of certain officers therein described, was read the second time-and referred to a committee of the whole House. A memorial of Joseph Henderson was read, and referred to the Secretary of the Treasury.

A report from the Secretary of the Treasury on the memorial of the Baron de Steuben was read, In committee of the whole House ou the act for the punishment of certain crimes against the United States.—The motion for striking out the clause respecting the bodies of murderers being delivered to surgeons after execution, for diffection, was further debated-a number of gentlemen spake on each side of the question-the affirmative was supported by Mr. Page, Mr. Heif ter, Mr. Jackson, Mr. Stone, Mr. Tucker, and Mr. Clymer-the negative by Mr. Huntington, Mr. Madison, Mr. Smith (S. C.) Mr. Sedgwick, Mr. Williamson, and Mr. Ames; and the motion being put, was negatived-and the clause retain

Several other motions for amendments were negatived; but the committee rose without finishing the discussion of the bill.
