The Deputies of the Municipality of Marseilles, heard at the bar, amply vindicated the conduct of their constituents.—They had, in obedience to the decree of the Assembly, suspended the demolition of the forts, but the rage of the populace was not to be restrained.—A striking circumstance, mentioned by one of the Deputies, almost justified the popular emotion:—"On one of the corner stones of the Citadel," said he, "were found inscribed,

"Louis the Great ordered this Citadel to be constructed to prevent the citizen of Marseilles from abandoning themselves to the delirium of Liberty!"

B E R L I N, May 22.

Immediately upon the decease of Count Schulenburg Blumberg, who died very suddenly on Sunday last, the King sent for Count Schulenburg Rebnert, who has lived retired upon his estate near Magdeburg, for near two years, reinstated him in all his former offices, and appointed him President of the War, with the title of First Minister of War. It is thought this change will be followed by others.

Extract of a letter from Lisse, June 3.

The Legeois are said to have been beat by the Palatines near Maestricht.

The people of Menin and Ipres who were on their march to Antwerp to liberate General Van der Mersch, have been stopped by their own countrymen in Flanders, who pointed the cannon at them, and forced them to retreat, instead of increasing their numbers, as was the general opinion. The influence of the aristocracy has corrupted the minds of the Flemings, and produced the same alterations of sentiment as their sinister machinations have effected in Brabant. It has also prevailed so far as to drive away the noble defender of the oppressed, General M. Sandelin, whose firm and undaunted language of truth to the Congress, sufficiently accounts for the oppression to which he is now become another victim—they have instituted a criminal process against him—and he has been obliged to fly from Ghent.—You may judge by the inclosed translation of his memoir, how inveterate must be the enmity of those ambitious minds against a man of his sentiments.

The festival of unity between the troops and the national guard, concluded on Wednesday—the Mayor of the town, and the commander of the national guard and garrison, were drawn in a splendid triumphal car through the city—after which they all adjourned to an elegant dinner at the Nouvelle Aventure.

In the evening a large party made an excursion to the Abby de Loos, where they emptied the cellar of all the wine the Monks had in store. The latter seemed to give it with the best grace in the world.

Great preparations are making on the Esplanade for the general confederation of the National guard on Sunday next. A magnificent temple is erecting for taking the oath."

L O N D O N, June 5.

A young man in a fever who had been ill several days, apparently died last week at Chester.—The apothecary, upon examining the body found a little warmth about the regio carthiaco—on which strict orders were given for the body not to be laid out, and proper means were advised to be employed. The next day he remained nearly in the same situation—as the warmth of the breath still continued, similar means were pursued, and on the third day signs of life appeared. This instance of the return of life should awaken caution, and prevent inconsistent hurry in laying out the dead, and precipitating the funeral ceremonies.
