THE King of Hungary is faid to have declared, that he is ready to return all the places taken from the Turks to them again, provided he is not deprived of a village of his own hereditary possessions. His Majesty has no objection (if Poland approves of it) that Dantzic, Thorn, Posen, &c. with their districts, should be ceded to Prussia, provided it did not put him (the King of Hungary) to any expence.

This declaration, it is easy to believe, comes upon our court rather unawares, particularly as the Porte is perfectly fatisfied with the above proposals of the Hungarian Monarch, and declines our mediation, by which the Grand Signior was to have given up Belgrade. This, together with the offer of Russiato return everything they have taken back again to the Porte, except the Crimea, makes it eafy to foresee that the Congress, which is to open the 21st, will find many matters of importance to discuss, and many different interests to conciliate.

LONDON, June 11.

Extract of a letter from Paris, June 6.

" Thursday last being the festival called the Feedien, the King, Queen and National Assembly, went in procession, ou foot, from the Thuilleries to the church of St. Germain Auxerrois. Great numbers of the National Guard were under arms upon the occasion, and the concourse of fpectators was unufually great. The people expressed their pleasure and loyalty by loud cries of Long live the King. Those of Long live the Queen were somewhat fainter, while the acclamations in honor of the Marquis de la Fayette, were perhaps greater than either. This Commandant of the National Guards is highly efteemed by the Parifians, and he deferves to be fo, as no doubt the tranquility of the city is much owing to his judicious exertions-For these ten days past a perfect calm has reigned at Paris; but the Provinces are far from being equally quiet. In le Charolois, a number of levellers have endeavored to establish an agrarian law, and when the accounts came away, had already began to mark out the landed property. At Lyons the populace have hung a young man who was detected pick. ing pockets, with the handkerchiefs he had just before stolen. At Nantz, in Brittany, there has also been a tumult, in which several persons were killed and wounded :- And at Bayonne, three of the National Guard have been affailinated by an officer of the regiment of Angouniais, whose trial is now going on. However, it is hoped, that this fermentation will gradually subside, the body of the nation being strenuous in the Support of the National Assembly, as appears from the inceting of 49,000 delegates of the National Assembly at Lyons, on the 30th of May, who re-presented five hundred thousand, and swore to die or to be free. There have been fimilar meetings, tho in smaller numbers, at Dejon, Auxerre, &c. Nevertheless, there is still a very considerable number of enemies of the revolution called Aristocratics; many more indeed, than there were in the first moment of enthusiasin, that overturned the old government. This I conceive, may be attributed to feveral reasons.—Many begin to feel and repent the facrifices they made in the momentary fervor of patriotism; many others who offered to make them, are disappointed by those offers being accepted. All those who with to ftrengthen equivocal ritles to nobility are aristocratics; and all who defire to find an excufe for not subscribing to the patriotic contribution, proffer themselves so whether they are or not. It is the number of these persons that contributes to spread through Europe the loud cries against the measures of the National Assembly, and to make the world believe, that the prefent ills by which France is afflicted proceed from their operations, rather than from the former vicious form of government, though upon a fair enquiry it should seem that the contrary is the case

" There is a noble passage in M. Necker's late memorial to the National Assembly, that may merit the attention of the makers of penal laws, es who decide on life and death .-"Who," fays he, "fhall dare to determine the value of the life of a fingle man who falls a victim to injustice ?- In such calculations there are no known rules to go by, nor do I know that man upon earth who has a right to lay them down.

Lord Mansfield, in his decay, feels the gradations without any acuteness of pain. Lady Stor-mont, with an affection that is exemplary, omits not for a day that confolation and comfort which her company can give him-She drives her own phæton daily to Caen Wood, to enjoy as long as possible the fight of so venerable a relation.

The King of Hungary is in private life a most amiable character.— He is fond of his children, and superintends in person their education.

The following inftance is given of his good fense and generosity :- On his arrival at Vienna, he caused a list to be made out of those who were detained in the prisons of that city. Not content with refloring their liberty, he gave them also a supply of money. " It is not enough, faid he,

A fhort time fince a journeyman carpenter in the Borough fold a woman that he had cohabited with for five years to a brother chip for half a guinea and a gallon of porter. The man fet off with his parchase, which turned out to be a very fortunate one, as the woman a few days after had a legacy left her of 1500l. by a deceafed re lation in Shropshire. They were married last Tuesday.

BOSTON, September 4.

Mr. Job Comstock, we are told, is chosen a Federal Representative for Rhode-Island.

PHILADELPHIA, September 6.

The Prefident of the United States, during his short stay in this City, received every mark of resp ét, attention, and affection to his person, which the public or individuals could demonstrate: Of the latter, we cannot omit mentioning an elegant Fête Champètre Of the latter, we cannot omit mentioning an elegant Fète Champètre that was given to this illustrious personage, his amiable confort and family, on Saturday last, on the banks of the Schuylkill, in the highly improved grounds of Messes, Gray, by a number of respectable private citizens.—The company, amounting to near two hundred, ladies and gentlemen, assembled about two o'clock, and at three sat down to a sumptuous and splendid cost collation in which, (tho' only 24 hours were given for the preparations,) all viands and truits of the season were assembled, and elegantly arranged. A band of minic played during the repast, and at the close, several excellent songs were sung, and the following toasts were drank.

1. The United States.

2. Liberty and good government, to the French Nation.

2. Liberty and good government, to the French Nation.
3. Nations in alliance with the United States.
4. May the people of the United States, be as fensible of the perfection of their present Constitution as they were of the defects of their former one

The flate of Pennfylvania, and prosperity to its new form vernment.

6. Few Laws, well executed.

May the Patriot be always blended in the Character of the

The Vice-Prefident and other officers of the Union.

The Fair, and the Brave.

May the fingle be married, and the married happy.

10. May the ingle be married, and the married happy.

11. Population, agriculture, manufactures, and commerce.

12. The arts, and fciences.

The Prefident and the ladies then withdrew; when the following toalt was drank with loud plaudits.

13. The ILLUSTRIOUS TRAVELLERS!

NEW-YORK, SEPTEMBER 11.

By the late regulations and decrees of the National Affembly, By the late regulations and decrees of the National Assembly, clergymen are obliged to reside in their respective parishes—whether Bishops, Vicars, Rectors, Deans or Priests; this law of residence is calculated to remedy one of the greatest abuses ever imposed on mankind; that the people should be taxed for the support of persons they never saw or derived any instruction from, is an outrage on common sense; the abolition of tythes completes this enlightened innovation and reformation of Church polity in France.

Nothing can more strongly mark the eligible state of society in the United States, then the small number of criminal causes that are brought for trial before the courts of judicature. When this country is brought into comparison with Great Britain, there is perhaps no circumstance which shews the relative character of the two countries in a stronger light, than the number of criminals. two countries in a stronger light, than the number of criminals that are executed in each. If in that country there are, for example, ten times as many executions according to the number of in-habitants, as in this, may it, or may it not, be inferred, that the state of fociety is ten times more depraved there than here?

It must afford pleasure, to every friend of the real prosperity of this city, to observe the great improvements which are taking place in the streets and buildings. The new pavements in many of the firects add essentially both to their convenience and elegance. And it appears almost incredible, to a person who has been fix years absent from the city, and now returns, to find the numerous including that have been precied in various parts of the city; and years absent from the city, and now returns, to find the numerous buildings that have been erected in various parts of the city; and the valuable repairs on the wharves and public buildings. These circumstances denote the prosperity of individuals, as well as the public-spirited ardor of those gentlemen who have the management of the public affairs appertaining to this city. In short, the difference between the general appearance now, and fix years past, excite the highest admiration in all who strictly notice it.

CAUTION!

THE Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, and Twelfth sections of the Act of the last sessions of Congress, entitled "An Act to provide "more effectually for the collection of the Duties imposed by "Law on Goods, Wares and Merchandize, imported into the United States, and on the Tonnage of Ships or Vessels," respecting Manifesto's, call for the particular attention of owners and masters of vessels.

It will readily occur, that when the boats, for the protection of the revenue, mentioned in the same Act, shall have been prepared, (which it is to be presumed will be in the course of the pr year) the strict execution of the regulations, contained in those sections, will be indispensable.
