appeared to him a much fitter officer to fill that | Several amendments were offered to that fection, ftation-He was originally chosen by the people into the fenate.

When amendments to the Conflictution came to be thought of, perhaps it would be proper, he faid, to provide for this cafe by a fpecial claufe in it, impowering the electors, who had chofen the Prefident and Vice-Prefident, in cafe of vacancy, to meet again, and make another choice, only, however, for the remainder of the four years ; because at the end of that time the power of chufing the electors should return to, and be exercised by the feveral states.

If the motion before the committee was negatived, he gave notice, that he would bring in his, viz. to fill up the blank with the perfon laft antecedently chosen Prefident of the Senate.

Mr. Baldwin faid that he should vote for the present motion, because he conceived that the conftitution is express, that an officer of the government, defignated either by the law or the Conffitution, fhould be appointed to fill this vacancy

He stated some objections against the Chief Justice : He is an officer who ought to be entirely detached from all political agitations whatever : His mind ought to be kept calm, and as unembarrafied as poffible : He quoted the precedent eftablished in the law, instituting the governor of the Western Territory-there the fecretary is to fucceed the governor. The fecretary of state is an executive 'officer, an affistant to the Prefident, and must be supposed, from his situation, to be the most proper perfon to fupply the vacancy.

Mr. Sherman was of opinion, that putting the chief magistracy into the hands of a subordinate officer was by no means proper. As to the obfervations made by the gentleman last up on the arrangements in the government of the Western Territory, he did not think they could be applied to the present cafe : That government was a subordinate one, and a kind of legislative power was vested in the governor, of felecting from the laws, and regulations of the different States fuch as he thought requisite for the government of those he had under his care.

He was in favor of giving the fupreme execu-tive in cafe of accident, to the Prefident of the Senate : The government would certainly fuffer fewer inconveniences by that arrangement than if the head of a department was put in. The Vice-Prefident, by the conftitution fucceeds to the Prefident ; the Prefident of the Senate to the office of the first, it is therefore very natural that he fhould alfo exercife the duties of the fecond in cafe of vacancy.

To defignate any officer, as poffible fucceffor to the Prefident, he faid, would be giving him too much dignity, and raifing him in a manner even above the legislature.

Mr. Carroll observed that the vacancy might happen in the recess of the legislature, or in the absence of the President of the Senate : the Secretary of State would always be at the feat of government. Besides the constitution declared the vacancy flould be filled by an officer of the government ; the Prefident of the Senate was on ly an officer pro tem. If the framers of the conflitution had intended the vacancy fhould be filled by an officer named in it, they could have defignated him ; but this they had not done ; he therefore supposed they had in view some officer then not in existence.

Mr. Gerry regretted that the fubject should have been taken up at this moment, when fo much important bufiness is before Congress. He adverted to the motion, and faid, that the character which now fills the office of Secretary of State, undoubtedly possessed the confidence of the legiflature in the fullest manner-and very justlybut when the exigency shall arrive for which we now are about to provide, a character may fill that office, who would be a fcourge to the Union. Belides faid he, if the office of Vice-Prelident was now to be filled, the Secretary of State would be ineligible, coming from the fame State wth the President. He stated other objections from the Conftitution : He thought the nomination should not be confined to officers of the U.S. He fuppofed the views of government may be extended even to officers of the feveral States-He however wished the whole bufiness postponed ; but if this idea is over ruled, he fuggefted the propriety of filling the blank with the conflitutional claufe respecting the highest candidates who are primarily voted for as Prefident and Vice-Prefident.

UNITED STATES, JANUARY 24, 1791. Gentlemen of the Senate, and lioule of Reprefentatives, IN execution of the powers with which Congress were pleafed to inveft me, by their act, entitled, "An act for establish-ing the temporary and permanent feat of the government of the United States," and on mature confideration of the advantages and dif durations of the formation of the advantages and difadvantages of the feveral politions, within the limits preferibed by the faid act, I have, by a Proclamation, bearing date this day, a copy of which is herewith transmitted, directed Committioners, appointed in purfuance of the act, to furvey and limit a part of the territory of ten miles fquare, on both fides the river Potowmac, fo as to comprehend Georgetown in Maryland, and to extend to the Eastern Branch.

I have not, by this firft act, given to the faid territory the whole extent, of which it is fufceptible, in the direction of the river; be-caufe I thought it important, that Congrefs fhould have an oppor-tunity of confidering, whether, by an emendatory law, they would authorife the location of the refidue at the lower end of the prefent, for act or emprechant the act have head highlight and forms of the authorife the location of the refidue at the lower end of the prefent, fo as to comprehend the caftern branch itfelf, and fome of the country on its lower fide in the flate of Maryland, and the town of Alexandria in Virginia. If however they are of opinion, that the federal territory fhould be bounded by the water-edge of the Eaftern Branch, the location of the refidue will be to be made at the upper end of what is now directed. I have thought befl to await a furvey of the territory, before it is decided, on what particular fpot, on the north-caftern fide of the river, the public buildings fhall be crefted. G. WASHINGTON.

The house then refumed the confideration of amendments proposed to the new revenue bill.

Mr. Tucker, of the joint committee appointed to confider and report the time for the commencement of the next Congrefs, brought in a report, which is in fubfrance, that the butinels now before Congrefs may be finished by the 4th March, and that it will not be neceffary for the new Congress to commence immediately after; but the joint committee could not agree as to the precise time; when their first seision should begin.

It is to be remarked that the oppofers of the revenue bill now before Congrefs, have never come forward with a competent fubfititute-Something has been faid about a tax on law proceedings, by which it is supposed a stamp duty was intended, and a direct tax has been faintly whifpered-but both thefe are found to thrink from the touchftone of popularity.

The symptoms of aristocracy in the Eastern States, are-agrarian laws-fimplicity of manners -equality of circumstances-a universal diffusion of the means of knowledge-public fchools being established by law, and supported by a general tax throughout the country-elections by ballot, and confequently free, being held on one, and the fame day in small diffricts, throughout the respective governments-the foil cultivated by its independent owners-reverence for the laws -and respect to their magistrates-the federal government venerated-and the statutes of Congrefs obeyed-happy and tranquil because they are informed and free-and because they posses the means of preferving their freedom, by making every man, from fixteen to forty, a foldier-citizen :-But the most alarming of all their symptoms of Aristocracy is, the filence of their reprefentatives in Congress, in respect to the jealous, uneafy, turbulent spirit of their constituents, as to any law that the general government may, in their wifdom, enact.

It is a trite observation, that anticipation of evil, is often the forerunner of mischief : We have, however, been happily disappointed in times past-No thanks to the difmal cacklers of the capitol. As the good fense of the people has hitherto prevented them from imbibing a reftless spirit of complaint, from the oft repeated, tho groundless jealousies and apprehensions of more than eagle-eyed politicians, fo it is to be hoped they will not in future be feduced to change the folid bleffings of the government, for the positive miseries of discord and sedition, because some perfons fay, they are averfe to measures that have never been tried.

Extract of a letter from Boston, Jan. 15.

Such a December has not been experienced here for many years-Wood rofe to twenty shillings a cord ! But fince this year came in, the weather has moderated-provisions have been very plenty, and very cheap-the fleying excellent-Pot and Pearl-ashes, Hemp, Flax, Gc. Gc, have been brought in from the back country which have generally commanded good prices, and fent much money to enliven the interior parts of this state, Vermont and New-Hampshire. The attachment of the people of this Commonwealth to the general government daily encreafes ; and in the rife of the public credit-the demand for produce &c. they feel its fuperiority over that of the late untied fystem.
