Confcious of our humble condition, we have confidered that this paper should be prefented only by a few and that at your door, without feeking any nearer accefs. And as towards those gentlemen, who, like you, have been fwayed by no other interests than those of humanity, we have also confidered that it may be best to express our acknowledgments only here, taking the liberty however to diftinguish, by name, Mr. Pitt and Mr. Fox, great rivals as we are told, in political purfuits, but whom we have found to be friends in those of virtue, feeking with one accord, and with congenial minds, that better prize which both alike can gain.

As towards you, fir, we know not what it may become us to fay : but we mean, at least, by the prefentment of this paper, honor of every kind. Our voice is too low to praife ; yet finall as it is, we however confider it as the first imperfect breathing of a name, which shall, one day, swell the cheek of Africa, and be founded with universal acclaim.

In ancient time, a great conqueror (if we are truly informed) having ravaged Africa, and destroyed a whole people, made spoil even of the name, and wore it as his own : but haply, fir, in fome future time, this name may be voluntarily and gratefully beftowed by Africa itfelf, for nations preferved civilized, enlightened, and rendered commercial, the trophy of benevolence, not the spoil of PORTLAND, (Maff.) July 18. "On Thurfday the 14th inftant, at Pownalborough, came on the trial of Louis Paronneau, a young Frenchman, who was indicted for the murder of his uncle, a Mr. Joseph Junin.

" The Attorney-General, with great candon and fairnefs, opened the caufe to the Jury, and stated the evidence, which he faid was not pofi tive, but depended upon a combination of circumftances attending the fact. The amount of the evidence was, that the night preceding the discovery of the murder, the prisoner lodged at the houfe of a Mr. Dennet, having previously paffed the evening there-that about 12 o'clock he went out of the house, faying that he was going to the flore to bed-that he returned in 8 or 10 minutes, appearing terrified and agitated, and faid he faw two Indians standing at the store door, with guns or flicks-cried out feveral times in the night that he faw Indians going to fhoot him. In the morning he went down to the ftore with two young men of the house to deliver them rum-appeared as ufual, and told them to awake his uncle, which they refused; he then went in to the bed room to awake him, reached towards the bed, and cried out that his uncle was murdered. A gun was discovered in the store room, appearing to have been newly difcharged; but was in a difordered state, there being no flint, &c. The rod of the gun was found in the kitchen and the balls which had paffed through the head of the deceased were of the fame weight with others found in the store. Two musquash skins were found near the ftore; and there was evidence that there was a fettlement of Indians at about 10 miles distance from the store; one of whom had, in August last, threatened to murder Mr. Junin, whenever he fhould get an opportu nity. "Meffrs. Gardiner and Lithgow were counfel for the prifoner, and very ably pled his caufe .-The Jury brought in their verdict that the prifoner was NOT GUILTY.'

BURLINGTON, July 26.

A correspondent remarks, that the conduct of the grand jury, impannelled at the last court of oyer and terminer held here, is both exemplary and commendable, and fhews their zeal for the public welfare in an eminent degree; for after taking a view of the circumftances and moral condition of the county in this vicinity, they actually adjourned to Egg-Harbour, in order to enquire more particularly on the fpot, into the fate of Capt Douglafs, and the unfortunate circumstances attending his shipwreck ; prompted thereto, by a fuspicious report circulating, and generally creditted, to the prejudice of Mr. T--r, living on the fhore. On this occasion we are authorifed to affure the public, that, this doubtful business having been minutely investigated, not a scintilla of evidence was found that could afford the least foundation for the report, or cast any fuspicion on the old gentleman: on the contrary, the passengers and crew speak favorably of his hospitality.

Extract of a letter from Gooper's-Town, State of New-York, to his friend in this city, dated June 30.

" I have again refumed the pen, to acquaint you with fome of our northern occurrences; the first of which, or that which feems more particularly to engrofs our attention at this time, is our new courts of justice, which were held in this place for the county of Otfego, on the 21ft inft. The honorable William Cooper, first judge on the bench, from whence he delivered a decent and fpirited charge to a very refpectable grand jury—the court-houfe having been previoufly in-nugurated, by a fenfible and well adapted prayer from the Rev. John Chriftopher Hartwick-the following gentlemen were then admitted counfellors and attornies, viz. Chriftopher P. Yates, Amaziah Ruft, John I. Morgan, George Metcalfe, James Cochran, Abraham Tenbroeck, Andrew Wimple, Anthony Marvine, and Jacob G. Fonda, Efq'rs. all men of respectability, and (the two first excepted) young adventurers like myself .-The court was conducted with the utmost regularity and decorum, and but few indictments found. We were favored with the company of Mr. Rutherford, one of the fenators of the United States, who was on a vifit to his friends in this county, and like most other staangers, seemed pleased with the fituation of our town, which, I affure you, is become quite a genteel place."

Philadelphia, August 3.

Monday being the anniverfary of the birth-day of his Excellency the Governor of this Commonwealth, the fame was announced by the appearance of a detachment of militia. At one o'clock a fe-deral falute of 15 guns was fired by Capt. Fifther's company of Artillery—after which, the Governor received vifits of perfonal respect from the citizens.

Same day the Supreme Court of the United States affembled at the new City-Hall—prefent, Hon. JOHN JAY, Chief Juffice. Hon. W. CUSHING, J. WILSON, J. BLAIR, and L. IREPELL,

The lateft British accounts at Cadiz, on the 9th June, mention, that the imprefs fervice was going on with vigour, and no certainty of any accommodation likely to take place between the Ruffians and the Porte; but every thing looked like widening the breach between Britain and Ruffia.

The ship Chapman, Captain Garbut, is arrived at Portland, Cafeo Bay, from Plymouth, England, and brings accounts, that the profpect of a war with Ruffia has very much abated, and is effecmed a very unpopular measure; that a large fleet of merchantmen had failed for the Baltic before he came away, —and that no American veffels were at Plymouth at the time of his failing. ——(A more direct account than that from Cadiz.)

The inhabitants of the Wea, or Ouittanon, and Kickapoa towns, upon the river Wabaíh, which were the object of Gene-ral Scott's expedition, were among the most vindictive race of ral Scott's expedition, were among the moft vindictive race of favages inhabiting the weftern regions. They have not only conflantly refufed the pacific invitations of the United States, but they have carried on the moft fuccetsful and cruel depredations on the defencelefs frontiers. It is to be hoped the punifhment which has overtaken them, the humane treatment of their priloners, and the mild offers of the general government fill held forth to them, and within their reach, will incline them, and all their neighbours, to peace. But, fhould they fail perfift in their hoftilities, they will pro-bably be removed from their fluation on the Wabafh, if not utterly extirpated; for the general government will not fuffer the innocent women and children of the frontiers to be facrified to indian barbarity, with impunity. indian barbarity, with impunity.

Good Government is to the body politic, what difcipline is to individuals—in a flate of nature, the materials of which members of civilized fociety may be formed, are unconnected with those numerous inveterate prejudices, and false ideas of happines, which are infeparably attendant on a voluptuous and vicious flate of civilization,—a government therefore which will probably be competent to forming the focial habits and manners of men in a favage flate, fhould be fimple in its conftruction, and plain in all its applications to their exigencies. But when a Conflicution of Government is contemplated for a people who have long been in a civilized fituation, whole affairs are become involved and perplexed-whole habits and manners are corrupted and diffipated, who entertain falle ideas of character-are impatient of all rewho entertain falle ideas of charafter—are impatient of all re-firaint, and confound liberty with heentioufnefs—whofe tafte is vitiated, whofe emulation is guided by a vaia ambition, and a fondnefs for diffinctions founded on falle principles, the work of government becomes arduous and difficult in the higheft degree— in fuch a flate of things all ideas of difcipline will be fpurned at till the difeafes of the public mind become inveterate—a fyftem of government which fhall anfwer any falutary purpofe in fuch circumflances, muft poffers a tone of energy and efficiency, which mankind will very feldom fubmit to voluntarily—and this I take to be the origin of Tyranny—for fociety cannot exift without government, either free or arbitrary.—Hiftory and experience unitedly proclaim that difcipline alone can preferve freedom—a difcipline which is the genuine effect of a firm government; for we may juft as reafonably expect that a total neglect of fchool difcipline will produce a wife, virtuous and intrepid rifing gene-ration, as that a relaxed fyftem of things which fuffers every man to do whatever is right in his own eyes, will produce virtuous to do whatever is right in his own eyes, will produce virtuous citizens, and perpetuate freedom.

SKETCH OF MR. HASTINGS'S TRIAL.

Monday the 23d of May, the trial of Mr. Haftings recommenc-ed in Weltminfter Hall.

Mr. St. John opened the fourth article of the charge relative to contracts, agencies, and exorbitant allowances, corruptly and il-legally given to various perfons.—Mr. St. John fummed up the lofs to the company by thefe acts, forming a total of 584,381. This charge was enforced by the manager, by a very clear and clegant opening of the facts on which it was founded. Mr. Haftings, as foon as Mr. St. John had concluded, addreff-ed the court with an uncommon folemity—he complained that he was compelled to hear the molt virulent language without be-ing allowed to offer a reply ;—his trial had lafted four years, and he was convinced in his own mind, that it would never have an end—The changes by creation or demife affecting the identity of his judges, were not lefs than 60,—he could not but feel it an hardfhip to be tried by one generation, and have judgment paffed by another. He concluded his fpeech, by praying that the court may continue the feffion from day to day, until he may be heard in his defence, and the trial be brought to a final decifion. To this fpeech Mr. Burke and Mr. Fox feparately replied, with pointed feverity—the former charged him with reverfing his fitu-ation and difficure to his ind environment in which reverfing his fitu-ation and difficure to his ind environment in which reverfing his fitu-ation and difficure to his ind environment in which reverfing his fitu-ation and difficure to his ind environment.

pointed feverity-the former charged him with reverting his fitu-ation, and dictating to his judges the manner in which they were ation, and dictating to his judges the manner in which they were to proceed, and when the procels was approaching to its end, when guilt was driven to its laft retreat, and the laft of juftice was about to fall on its proper object, the culprit made an appeal to compafiton, and exclaimed "that his trial would never have an end." —Mr. Haftings complained that he had been charged with crimes of an atrocious nature !—certainly he had been fo charged—it was the atrocious detail of tortures and murders that drew forth the Commons of Eugland to this accufation — Mr. Fox obferved in reply to the complaint of virulent language, that in charging high crimes and middemeanors, he felt it his du-Mr. Fox obferved in reply to the complaint of virulent language, that in charging high crimes and mifdemeanors, he felt it his du-ty to use the proper and corresponding language; --the grievance of not being allowed to answer, was the refult of Mr. Haffings' own conduct--the managers had proposed that the prifoner should have been heard on each of the charges at its conclusion; their Lordships had decided against that mode--but their Lordships would not have refuted that plan of proceeding, if the prifoner had given his content, he could not therefore complain of that which was the refut of his own choice. Sir James St. Clair Erskine then proceeded to adduce a great variety of documentary evidence in fupport of the charge; and at fix o'clock the court adjourned to Wednefday.

MR. FENNO,

dated May 16, 1791.

" On the 19th of March we left Fort Pitt with only 4 men, in company with two boats, to go to Limeftone. On the 22d we took in 5 men at Muskingum. The next morning, our boat being foremost, we were hailed by the Indians, who came up with us in four boats, with about 20 men in each, and killed one of our men and wounded two the first shot, we waited till they were within 30 yards, and then fired, which did great execution; I then received a fhot through my arm ; one of the boats attempted to board us, but we beat them off; they then attacked a boat in our rear, took her, and in a moft inhuman manner placed the women and children in the center of their boats, and attacked us again ; we had only three men and myfelf able to fight, but we beat them off. During this attack we drifted within 30 yards of the thore, where they attacked us again, and purfued us about a mile and a half along the fhore, before we could get out of their reach, Out of 9 men two only elcaped unhurt. We had on board one woman and eight children, one of the children received a flight wound. We arrived at Limestone at II o'clock that evening. The Indians are very troublefome in this country, and do great mischief; but they have not attacked a boat on the river fince our action. The loss they fuffained from us we could not afcertain, but they suffered severely for their attempt."

We hear from Londonderry, that the bridge built over Lough Foyle, or Londonderry river, by Mr. Cox, of Bofton, is com-pletely failhed, to the fatisfaction of the people there, and is hought to be a very capital piece of architecture, comprehending thirty-four piers. The workmen who went from America with Mr. Cox, he has taken paffages for, in order to fend them home again. Mr. Cox's fon remains in Ireland, and has undertaken to raife the fhip Happy Return, formerly commanded by Captain Ewing, which was caft away laft winter on the Strand off Magiligin.

In the fhip Anne, Capt. A. Miller, arrived here on Sunday laft, from Londonderry, came 363 paffengers, all in perfect health.

The following was figned by the paffengers who came in the Anne, from Londonderry :

" We the undernamed paffengers on board the fhip Anne, from Londonderry to Philadelphia, commanded by Capt. Miller, jun. do return him our fincere and hearty thanks for his kind and humane treatment of us, and the care he took to render the paffage agreeable to us."

YOU will oblige at least one of your constant readers, by remarking the your next paper, that your resolution of avoiding religious controversies was unfortunately formed too late; and that on the present occasion, it would have been alting with more equity, not to have given place in your paper to the "Circular Letter," which gave occasion for the "Re-marks" of HUMANUS. YOU will oblige at least one of your constant readers, by remarking in Philad. July 28, 1791.

In reply to the above, the Editor would observe, that there is a certain degree of respect due to associated bodies, which individuals cannot claim with propriety—on this principle the "Circular Letter" was published. The infertion of a public address, from any affociated denomination what-ever, we do not confider as deviating from a determination long fince announced, that we mean to avoid religious controversies.

We have received "AURBLIAN," but request to be excused from publishing it—fome alterations might be Suggested, which we are not authorised to make.
