THE DEATH OF MR, JOHNBOUSH,

Late MAYOR of NORFOLK -a lofs much felt and lamented. " Eheu, fugaces labuntur Anni !" " Linguenda, Tellus & Domus & placens. " Uxor."

A GAIN mild comfort, airy cheering maid, Again defeend ! Thy votary claims thy aid. Thou art my only mole-girl of the fun-beam eye ! Oh bend effulgent from thy cloudlefs fky, To where yon fair, young widow, wild and fad, Is led, half frantic, to her lonely bea. Soft dews exhal'd from heaving flow rets bring, And thake them gently from thy filken wing : With time's dull pencil, every grief efface, And lull the horror of the laft embrace. Then wide around, fweet maid, thy fmiles extend — He whom the mourus, was every good man's friend ; The poor, the rich, the bondmen and the free, In this dull, dark'ning hour have need of thee

BOUSH, had a mind, where mercy would refide As at her home-an eye unrais'd by pride, A heart-friendfhip within and proce was at its door, A hand—that point d its bounties on the poor. His was a face, whence goodnefs threw around Her fweeteft Imiles—where "joy ferene" was found, And where mild virtue lent its flarry ray To light his friends, along life's thorny way.

To light his friends, along life's thorny way. SPIRIT fo good, why would'ft thun hafte away, Why leave thy finiling friends, the chearful day? Why leave thy FANNY in the world alone, And thy own body in the mould'ring tomb? Was it to ride upon the fleeting wind? Could'ft thou in Ether purer bleffings find? Was it to fail upon the curling cloud, Where fancied forms, in airy figures crow'd? Or would 'ft thou foar to where the fa'd flars fhine, Nearer to view, how vaft, a hand divine Shap'd their bright orbs? Or in that mounful hour, Had'ft thou a mandate from Almighty pow'r, To leave far off, the earth, the feas, the air, And bring before him, every poor man's prayer? Dazaled you'll fland, where every Saint has flood, But v f I thee, with the bleffings of the cood ; And whule around celeftial breezes fan, Pe as thou haft been, fill the friend of MAN. Norfolk, Off. 20, 1701. Norfolk, Oct. 20, 1791.

LITCHFIELD, (Con.) Nov. 9. Last Friday the General Affembly of this state clofed the October feffion.

In the course of the feffion, many important matters came before the affembly, which were referred for further confideration to the affembly to be holden in May next. Among others, were the report of a committee on the petition of the fufferers in the feaport-towns, by the inroads and depredations of the British during the late war ; stating their sufferings by loss of property to a. mount of nearly three hundred thousand pounds; and an offer of three hundred and fifty thousand dollars for a quit-claim of the territory claimed by this flate, fouth of Lake Erie; an act regu-lating the militia of this flate; with others of lefs confequence. The bill for dividing the flate in seven districts, each to choose one member of Congress, was taken back after confiderable difcuffion.

LONDON. Extract of a letter from Warfaw, dated August 17.

TRANSACTIONS, exhibiting an inflance of most abominable fanaticifm, which happened lately in the city of Rawa, about 12 leagues from this place.

A reputable woman, widow of an apothecary, named Wilke, a protestant, and an old inhabitant of that place, having fome bufinels to tranf. act at Warfaw, was prefented by a friend with a doll for the amufement of her children ; the old-eft of which was a girl of 8 years old.

The children on receiving this doll, without any offenfive intention, decorated the fame by hanging a small effigy of the (fo called) Mother Mary around its neck, which had been given them by a Monk.

A fanatic and enemy to the family, who was a fubaltern in the grenadier regiment of Kalzinf. ki, gave information of this innocent diversionand complaining thereof to the board of civil and military commissioners, as being facreligious, who caufed a criminal process to be islued against the poor widow, mother of the children, by which the was condemned, and fentenced to be beheaded. Providentially Mr. Krapinski, a member of the Confiltory of Diffenters at Warfaw, hearing of this unnatural proceeding, isi mediately prefented a petition in favor of this unhappy woman, to the King and Sovereign Council; in confequence of which, a Salvus Conductus was granted to the poor widow, and orders given to the judge to flay the execution : Privilege was alfo granted. her to appeal to the mixed Affefforial Court, to determine respecting her unhappy fituation. This court, although it preferved the life of the woman, neverthelefs, pronounced the following inhuman fentence, viz. "That the unhappy mother fhould be compelled to chaftife her own children in the prefence of the inftigator with a rod, fo long, and until the blood should follow the rod !"-Of which punifiment one of the children now lies dangeroufly ill. After the above fentence was executed, the doll was publickly burned on the 9th day of August, by the hand of the common executioner.
