different purpofes: to men in trade it was a confiderable advantage, amounting probably, in fome inftances, to a hundred dollars a year :—it would be better to take away the privilege entirely, and reduce the general rates of poftage one half, or to allow the members, at the clofe of each feffion, to make a charge for all letters on public bufinefs, from their conflituents, or to make them an allowance in großs to defray the expense of poftage :—better even, if necellary, to make an addition to the compensation which the members receive for their fervices, if the prefent one be found incompetent to their honorable fupport.

On the other hand it was observed, that the privilege of franking was not affumed by the members, for their own private accommodation, but for the benefit of their conftituents, to tranfmit to them every necessary information, refpecting the operations of the general government, and to receive from them fuch information as they might have to communicate :- petitions are frequently enclosed to members ; and if these were to be subject to the payment of postage, the privilege of petitioning the house, would be in a great measure desiroyed : the diminution of revenue, which the post-office might in fome inftances fuffer from the privilege of franking, ought not to be deemed a sufficient reafon for abolifhing that privilege ; fince it was allowed, that the object, contemplated in the eftablifhment, was the general convenience, and an eafy and fpeedy mode of diffeminating public and private intelligence :- revenue was but a fecondary confideration ;-although the citizens, who live at the feat of government, and have daily opportunities of learning from the newfpapers what public measures are going forward, may not be materially affected by the abrogation of the privilege, yet the cafe would be widely different, with those who live at a distance, efpecially when fifcal operations were on foot :those who are informed, will make a prey of those who are ignorant ; and destructive speculation will enrich the few, at the expense of the many :- in a government of opinion (which is the government of America) much greater reliance is to be placed on the confidence of the people, than upon any other circumfance :that confidence can only be the refult of the fulleft information :- but if the privilege of franking were taken away, the avenues of information would be, in a great meafure, closed ; for the members could not undertake, at their own private expense, to transmit intelligence to eve-ry part of the Union: yet the citizens have a right to expect information not only of the acts of government, but also the principles, upon which they were grounded :- The abuses of the privilege, that have prevailed in England, do not prevail here; and its abolition would give general diffatisfaction, particularly in the more diffant parts of the union, where information would be subject to avery high tax, if circulated through the post-office, at the ordinary rates of postage : of those bundles of letters received and difpatched by members of Congress, many (tho' far from being unneceffary, as had been faid) would perhaps never be written, if they were not to pais free of postage; and thus that free communication of sentiment between representative and conflituent, which is fo effential in a government like this, would be in a great meafure cut off ; and the post-office would gain little or nothing by it, as those packets of newspapers, bills, reports, &c. would either be fent by private hand, or not fent at all : even here an inequality would prevail, as the people who live near the feat of government, and all along the main road, could, from the greater frequency of opportunities, receive fuch packets with more eafe and regularity, whilft those in more remote fituations, could feldom or never receive them, unlefs by the mail: the expense arising from the percentage to the postmaster on the free letters, but triffing, as in fuch cafes he receives no more for a packet of two ounces, than for a fingle letter : and as to the idea of allowing the members to make a charge for their letters, this would be no better than receiving with one hand, and paying away with the other: if however it were found absolutely necessary to take precautions against the abuses that were apprehended, this might be done, by limiting the number or weight of letters that should go free by any one post, without entirely preventing the interchange of fentiments between the representative and his constituents.

Several other petitions were read, and referred to the heads of departments.

In committee of the whole, on the Poft-Office Bill-Mr. W. Smith in the chair.

The 23d fection relates to the carriage of newfpapers—it was moved to ftrike out the fection, and fubfitute the following:

That all newfpapers carried in the mail, and which fhall be under cover open at one end, fhall be charged with the payment of one cent for any diffance not exceeding 100 miles, and one and a half cent for any greater diffance—and that the newfpapers be carried in feparate bags from the letters—and it fhall be the duty of the Poftmafter-General and his Deputies to keep a feparate account of all newfpapers; and the Deputy Poftmafters thall receive 50 per cent. upon the poftage of them—which was agreed to. The committee then rofe, and reported the bill, with fundry amendments, which were laid on the table.

The Speaker laid before the Houfe a letter from the Secretary of the Treafury, covering a report on the petition of Catharine Greene, widow of the late General Greene, purfuant to a reference of the late Houfe of the 4th of March, 1790, which was read, and on motion ordered, that it be referred to a committee of the whole Houfe on Thurfday next, and that 100 copies of faid report, and the documents accompanying the fame, be printed. Adjourned.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 27.

The report of the committee of the whole House on the Post-Office Bill was taken into confideration.

The feveral amendments agreed to by the committee, were read—the principal part of which being ftill further amended, were adopted by the Houfe. The amendment to the 20th fection, which refpects the privilege of Franking, being read, Mr. Wadfworth renewed the motion for expunging the claufe—this occafioned fome debate. Mr. White propofed a fubfitute which contained various reftrictions on the privilege but an adjournment being called for, took place, without a decifion—and the further confideration of the amendments was poftponed till to-morrow.

LEGISLATURE of PENNSYLVANIA. To the Senate and Houfe of Reprefentatives of the State of Pennfylvania.

GENTLEMEN,

IT gives me great fatisfaction to communicate to you a copy of a letter from the Prefident of the United States, from which you will observe, that exertions are making under the authority of the Federal Government to protect effectually the exposed part of the frontiers.

THOMAS MIFFLIN. Philadelphia, 24th December, 1791.

United States, 23d December, 1791.

I HAVE received your Excellency's letter of yefterday, encloting a copy of a reprefentation to you from the inhabitants of Pittfburg, relatively to their apprehensions, in confequence of a late defeat of the troops under Major-Gen. St. Clair.

I can, with great propriety, affure your Excellency, that it is my earnest defire that all the exposed parts of the frontiers should be as effectually protected, at the general expense, as the cafe may require.

I fhall direct the Secretary of War to confer with your Excellency upon this fubject, and to inform you of fuch measures as have been directed, and are in a train of execution.

I am, with due confideration,

Your Excellency's most obedient fervant, GEORGE WASHINGTON.

His Excellency the Governor of Pennfylvania.

In the account of the deftruction of the town of Port-au-Prince, in Hifpaniola, which fad event took place the 22d ult. it is faid that the Mulattoes fet fire to different parts at the fame time that 32 fquares, with all that they contained of produce, flores and provisions, &c. were confumed.—The cannonading lafted one hour afterward, and the mufquetry continued the remainder of the day, and during the night. Many perfons muß confequently have perifhed.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in the country, to his friend in this city.

"Melancholy news from the Weftward Are not fuch repeated ftrokes indications that our caufe in that country is not good? I think fo—I fear we are too rafh in our operations that way. No doubt the Indians, diffurbed on their native foil, feel all the boilings of injured innocence and were a few of their Chiefs in audience before Congress, perhaps they might plead their caufe to the confusion of many who think little of them—their rights—or of what ought to be faid in their favor.

" I hope fuch meafures will be taken, or refolutions gone into in confequence of this defeat, as fhall be confiftent with the great principles of juftice, as well as national policy.—Have there been any meafures taken by government to make peace with thefe unhappy people ?—If fo, it would tend to fatisfy the minds of our fellow-citizens by making them public—if not, what has not our government to anfwer for ?—Doubts on this head give real diftrefs to every ferious friend to their country."

Public meafures are doubtless open to public animadversion—but our remarks should always be feasonable, our censures directed by judgment, and in all misfortunes tempered with this confideration,

" That profp'rous actions always pass for wife."

The bufinefs of fending newfpapers by the mail, may with the greateft fecurity be put on a liberal footing. The intereft of Printers is very little concerned in the matter—but that of the public is, and ought to be confidered as deeply involved. If by an eafy feafible plan the tranfportation of newfpapers is facilitated, the ftreams of information will be wide and copious, efpecially for a feafon—but as in all other cafes where individuals diffufe their property, and encreafe their debtors for fmall fums, and at a diffance, inevitable lofs enfues, fo it is in this of Printing ; and nothing but the greateft facility and certainty in tranfporting the papers, will give the bufinefs of an extensive circulation any degree of ftability.

There is not a government on earth which is fo completely in the hands of the people as that of the United States. By prelerving and firengthening it, the people fecure their own power. For they have no other means of acting as a people, and it is not eafy to conceive of any half as effectual. The flate governments reach to almost every object. The national government feems to be in the air over men's heads, and basely touches their individual concerns. The power of the latter is fo limited, that it is little, and fo divided with the flate governments, that it is lefs than the letter of the conflitution feems to give : It has fewer officers than any fovereign government in the world. Look round, and fee how few there are who have more than a common intereft to support it. It is a truft, and a precious one in the people's own hands to keep it inviolate. It is their own; therefore it deferves their confidence, and will reward their care.

The bill for carrying into effect a contract between the United States and the flate of Pennfylvania (relative to the purchase of a tract of land bordering on Lake Erie) was read a third time and passed.

Mr. Clark prefented the petition of Patrick Ferrall, chief clerk in the office for fettling the accounts between the United States and individual States, praying to be placed on the fame footing in refpect to falary as the chief clerks in the Treafury department, which was read and laid on the table. Wednefday last Richard Henry Lee, Efq. took his feat in the Senate of the United States.

Two important bills are now before the Senate of the United States—one for the encouragement of the Bank and other Cod-Fisheries—the other for the establishment of a Mint.

The project of uniting the Delaware and Schuylkill by a canal, is an undertaking worthy the enterprizing fpirit of the times, and will doubtlefs be carried into execution.

The number of passengers which have arrived in the port of Philadelphia in one year, with a view to become fettlers in this country, amounts to two thousand feven hundred and forty perfons.

By an addrefs from Gov. Telfair to the Affembly of Georgia, it appears that the Treaty with the Creek Nation, made by the United States, is to be the fubject of animadverfion in the Legiflature of that State.— It is rather curious that the fame Treaty does not meet the approbation of W. A. Bowles, who is fomenting mifchief among the fouthern Indians.

It is most probable that the Treaty, from this flate of things, is just and right.
