 - N. B. All the maps marked with stars are added in this edition, exclusive of those in the last London edition.

That no disappointment may arise from subscribers expecting what the publisher neither promises nor is able to perform, he gives this early and explicit notice, that of some of the States it will be impossible for him to give maps fully accurate, no late surveys having been made; and it is hardly necessary to observe, that it falls not within his plan to go to the expense of surveys. But in every instance; he will avail himself of the best materials extant: And such corrections and additions as his utmost exertions can procure, shall be made.

III. The geography of the United States is undertaken by gentlemen of literary abilities, who have engaged to give a more full and satisfactory account of it than any ever published. It will extend to 250 or 300 pages, although in the British edition, and even in that of 1792, it makes only about 40.

IV. Should the work exceed forty-eight numbers, the surplus will be delivered gratis to the subscribers.

V. The price of each number will be a quarter dollar, to be paid on delivery.

VI. Such subscribers as do not choose to receive the work in numbers, are to pay three dollars at the time of subscribing.

The printer, anxious to render this work as perfect as the nature of it will allow, most earnestly requests, that such gentlemen, throughout the United States, as have it in their power, will furnish him with documents for correcting the past errors in the geography of America, and for furnishing a more complete system of geography than has yet appeared.

The title page, list of subscriber's names, with the account of the Newtonian system, &c. &c. will be given in the 27th and 28th numbers.

N. B. The subscribers, and the public in general are requested to consider the following very material circumstance—The London quarto edition is sold here, for fifteen dollars, although it contains only 25 maps and plates, and of the Geography of the United States, as has been observed above, only about 30 pages—whereas, Carey's edition will contain 42 maps and plates, and have two hundred pages of letter press more. And it need not be observed, that the seventeen maps to be added, are of more importance to Americans by far, than the 25 London ones. The observation will apply with equal force to the letter press additions.

The maps will be published in such order of succession as they are engraved, and directions will be printed for the proper manner of placing them by the bookbinder.

NATIONAL CONVENTION.

Monday, April 1.

THE minister of the marine gave the account of the measures which had been taken for the defence of the coasts of the insurgent departments—There were at that moment cruising on the coasts of the departments of Vendee, and the Lower Loire, eight frigates from 36 to 50 guns with eight smaller vessels.

The commissioners from Lille, in a letter dated the 27th of March, gave an account that the city of Bruges had driven out its garrison, and put an embargo on the magazines. They required the generals to send to Bruges a considerable force.

Marat denounced the three hundred deputies who had joined to form a committee of public safety as conspirators, who were entirely under the influence of Bristot, Goadet, and Vernio.

La Source replied, that Marat was an impostor.

Cambaceres, in the name of the committee of public safety, read a letter of Dumouriet to the National Convention of the 12th, and another of the 28th of March, addressed to Bourbonville, in which he gave an account of the retreat of the body of the army under the command of generals Neully and Ferrand, who, by the desertion of a great number of volunteers, were obliged to evacuate the city of Mons, during the night of the capitulation of general Maraffe, military commander of Anvers, who by that method, though not the most honorable, yet indispensibly necessary, saved a body of 10,000 men.

He added, that colonels St. Clair and Thouvenot were attacked without means of defence—that our military convoys were detained at Bruges—that he has sent forces in order to liberate those convoys; that he has given orders to garrison St. Omer, Cambrai, and all the places on the line from Dunkirk to Divet. In these letters Dumourier describes the army as in a state of the greatest disorder, and not having provisions for more than ten days: He says that the pretended succours of men from the departments of the North consist only of old men and children, who, so far from being useful, serve only to increase the confusion and consume the provisions. He declares, that if order and discipline be not restored—that if fifty authorities, each more absurd than the other, continue to direct all political and military operations, France is lost; he declares, that he, with a small number of brave men, would bury themselves under the ruins of their country. He affirms, that it is impossible for him to stop the progress of the enemy who, without amusing themselves with sieges, may, with an army of 20,000 cavalry, lay waste and reduce to ashes all that part of the country which is in the neighbourhood of Paris.

Dumourier concludes this melancholy state of the representation of affairs with bestowing eulogiums on the clemency and moderation of the Austrians which were entitled to the more praise, as from the example of cruelty and outrage which the French had exhibited, a very different conduct on their part might have been expected. I says he, have always affirmed, and I repeat, that a republic can only be founded on virtue, and that freedom can be maintained only by order and wisdom.

Cambaceres, after having read these letters of Dumourier, gave an account of the proceedings of the commissioners of the executive power. Arrived at Valenciennes, they learned that general Dumourier was at Tournay. They repaired thither, and found him with Madame Sillery, with Pamela, Egalite, and Valence.—He was surrounded with deputations from the district of Cambrai. The
