BOTH SIDES.

A man in his carriage was riding along, A gaily dressed wife by his side: In satin and laces she looked like a queen,

And he like a king in his pride. A wood-sawyer stood on the street as they passed The carriage and couple he eyed,

The man in the carriage remarked to his wife, "One thing I would give if I could-I would give all my wealth for the strength and the

Of the man who saweth the wood,"

She looked on the carriage—the lady she saw. Arrayed in apparel so fine, And said, in a whisper, "I wish from my heart Those satins and laces were mine."

So fair in a calico dress, And said, "I'd relinquish position and wealth.

Thus in this world, whatever our lot. Our minds and our time we employ In longing and sighing for what we have not, Ungrateful for what we enjoy.

We welcome the pleasures for which we have sighed; The heart has a void in it still. Growing deeper and wider the longer we live That nothing but heaven can fill.

There was a good deal of fun afterward, and when it was over I left the cabinor pleasure in contributing to their fun; but did not understand why they should select him to act the preacher.

Just then some one called me aside, and the old gentleman stepped into his stateroom, which was next to mine. When I returned the door stood open, and the 'preacher' stood just inside, with his coat and vest off, and one boot in his hand, talking with the gentleman who played the "attendant" and who, as I came up, remarked: "Well, if that is the case it is a good joke, for they are in dead earnest, and have retired to the same state-room.' The old gentleman raised both hands as he exclaimed: "Good Heavens! you don't tell me so !" and rushing just as he was, boot in hand, to the state room indicated, commenced an assault on the door as if he would batter it down, exclaiming with the note in her hand. It was her at each lick: "For heaven's sake don't I ain't a preacher!" The whole cabin was aroused, every state room opening with a slam, when the door opened, and the Arkansas traveller, poking out his head, coolly remarked: "Old hoss you're too

Among the passengers from Napoleon is a solemn looking gentleman, who has all along been taken for a preacher. About nine o'clock last night was conversing with the "reverend" gentleman, when a young man stepped up, and addressing him remarked, "We're going to have a wedding, and would like to have you officiate." "All right, sir," he replied, laughingly, and we stepped into the ladies' cabin, when, sure enough, the couple stood waiting. There had been some kissing games, and several mock marriages gond thro' with during the evening, and I supposed this was merely the "preacher," who, I could see, had a good deal of humor in him, and was inclined to promote general feeling and merriment. The couple stood up before him, (a good deal more solemn than was necessary in a mock marriage, I thought,) and and so did the "preacher," who remarked to me that he liked to see the young folks enjoying themselves, and took a good deal
