been left by the structure breaking in two.-The hunters, all in fine spirits, and unconscious of danger, started over the bridge The driver noticed the horse hesitated after going some distance, and urged the animal forward. The poor brute advanced a step or two, and again stopped. The driver got out, and to his horror discovered the bridge gone, and the horse's head projecting over the yawning gulf. They were on the very brink of death ! Another step forward would have plunged them down into the raging torrent, where the angry waters rushed like a race-horse to the Ohio.

A DECIDED CHARACTER. - Miss Lucy Stewart, The great standard nedicines of the present of South Scituate, Mass., recently 'died' at the great age of 96 years. The following account s given of her strange personal history: Her father was a white man-a sea captainand her mother a full blooded Indian. She was brought up in one of the first families in the town of Scituate, and had until within a year or two lived in the family down to the fifth generation. Within that time she had been unable to support herself and became an inmate of the almshouse. She was a woman of good manners and possessed a great deal of pride. She was 13. KAMPHAMEHA PLAYING SICKLES. -- The correspondent of the New York Times, at Honolulu, affords us interesting particulars of the homi-cide perpetrated by King Kamehameha. The King, with the Queen, Prince Royal, and a numerous suite, leaving Hawaii upon a Summer excursion, visited the Island of Lahaina, where their stay was brought to a close on the 18th of September. Ordering the royal yacht to prepare for return to the capital, the King, on the morning of that day, embarked alone on the vessel, leaving his attendants to follow at their leisure. A calm delayed the yacht, and at night, taking a small boat, his Majesty returned to shore, and proceeding to the lodgings of Mr. Henry Nelson, his Private Secretary, entered into a violent quarrel with that gentleman, and presently shot him fatally in the breast. The cause of the difficulty is not ascurrency, but were instantly discredited. No statements have been made by the official papers on the subject. Mr. Netson was formerly of Kamahameha, until the fatal quarrel, had enjoyed the monarch's unlimited confidence and regard.

A NOBLE LITTLE GIRL.—The Warrentown Flag contains an account of a death, last Thursday week, of a little girl of eight or nine years, daughter of Mr. Traverse Gough, living a few miles from Haymarket. In the absence of all older than herself, her clothing took fire. She first tried to suppress the flames herself; then she asked her little sister of four years to throw water on her; but the little one ran, instead, to call the neighbors. When they came, they found her lying out in the yard, and, in reply to the question "what she was doing there ?" she said, she thought if she staid in the house that the house would catch fire, and burn the baby up too. What a noble, sensible remark for one so young! She retained all her faculties to the last, conversed freely, and bore her sufferings with a fortitude truly remarkable for one of her age. The interesting little creature deserved a better fate.

"Not Yet Quite Dead."

The Democrats and ultra Republicans have been preaching and promulgating the opinion that the American party is dead, to all intents and purposes. The former wrote friendly epitaphs, and the latter claimed to take its place on the political chess board. The American party is not only not dead, but in many of the. Northern States it holds the balance of power as a seperate and distinct organization apart from Republicans, American-Republicans, or Democrats. At the late election in New York the Americans adoptcd a part of the Democratic ticket, and the four Democratic candidates for whom they yoted were triumphantly elected, notwithstanding that a large number of Foreigners cut these candidates on "suspicion." It is hardly safe to say that the American party is dead yet. It is an importent element in politics, and will probably play a conspicuous part in the campaign of 1860.
