In the afternoon, all the public schools formed into procession at the foot of Virginia street and marched up to the Presbyterian Church, where the scholars were addressed by Revs. Clark, Creighton and Sembower. There were some four or five hundred children in the procession, although the Schools were far from being full. We are particularly gratified to state that we did not observe an intoxicated person on our streets on that day, and we have not heard of any drinking or rowdying in any part of the town.

COMMUNICATION.—In another column of to day's paper will be found a communication from a fireman of this place, in answer to the communication of "Well Wisher," which appeared a few weeks since. It has been on file a plate of those fine Cove Plants which that safor two weeks, but for reasons which would be satisfactory to any one who understands the printing business and our situation for some time past, we could not find a place for it. We publish the communication not because we think the remarks of "Well Wisher" demanded such a reply, but to relieve ourselves of the charge of partiality. We doubt very much whether the remarks of "A Fireman" will meet Washington Camp, No. 31, J. S. A., " with the approval of the majority of the members of the Fire Company. It certainly lacks that were blewing and their mast and the properties of the Fire Company. ALTONA, Nov. 12, 1859. MESSES. Entrops:—In looking over the columns of your paper last week, I noticed a communication undersigned Well-Wisher," cautioning the Altoona Biremen to beware of following in the footsteps of brother firemen of large cities. I feel confident that the firemen of Altoona ire highly pleased with the hints thrown out to them by heir friend "Well-Wisber," and that they will hereafter be governed by him; providing he would take a fatherly care over them while in the performance of their duty.-Because you know, Well-Wisher, that they are young, irnocent men, and likely to be led astray, if hey have no guardian to watch over them while they are out with their nachine. In replying to Well-Wisher, I would inform him hat the Firemen were not aware that they were to be watched in their movements upon the occasion alluded to. If they could have had even the slightest hint thrown out to them before the parade that they were to have a reporter along with them, they would have had one who would have kept himself sober, for the credit of the Firemen if not his own. Because, Mesers Editors, I do for one really believe that our reporter was slightly inchriated on that eccasion. Now let us take his own words for an explanation. He says, behold there are two young men going towards the Altoona House and disappouring down the cellar, and presently they again made their appearance, giving their mouths an ominous wine. Well now, what of that? Do you never wine your mouth, Well-Wisher? Or have you a smeller that could find out for you that they had been drinking? Or was that liquor you inhaled that which you had drank beforehand? My reason for asking s this: The young men you had reference to did not go to the Altoona House, as you represent, they went to the Exchange Hotel, kept by John Bowman, who I believe is the proprietor. They did not come out wiping their pouths, they came out smoking an excellent eigar, which J. B. had furnished them with. Well-Wisher, if you could not see more than twenty feet clear, you ought to have been in bed. Now, Well-Wisher, I will inform you how the fwenty young men were led astray. You are aware that they paraded through the principal streets of our orough, to give the citizens an opportunity of admiring heir handsome engine, which they (the citizens) had so renerously bestowed upon the company. You are aware that when they were playing in front of the Logan House, they were all wef with the rain and water from their mahine, then it was that Col. Woods, of the Altoona House, eve the Citizen boys an invitation to come and take a kindly smile, which I think pleased them very much, for they did manfully wipe their mouths, and gave three hearly cheers and a tiger for Col. Woods, and then, like gallant Firemen as they are, housed their handsome engine; and then, if our reporter had not left so soon, he might have seen several more going around town smiling very often. not being afraid of having their insides burned out, as they had not seen Well-Wisher's communication, or they would have acted more careful—but he will have to excuse them, for they will endeavor to be more careful hereafter. I would inform friend Well-Wisher that they are a company organized as a Fire Company, not as a Temperance Society, although there are some gentlemen of the above-named society belonging to the company, whom we are glad to recognize as brother Firemen, Now let us reason the case-would it not have been better for Well Wisher t. have collected some five or more Well-Wisher's like himself, and instead of following the Company from place to place, passing remarks, and finding such faults as only could be found by one laboring under the influence of that stuff that makes a man wipe his mouth. Would it not have been better for him to have gone home (providing he kinds could), and brought those noble Fireman two or three pails stock of our benevolent friend, Well-Wisher, than his did to those noble Firemen whom he represented in his communication.
