The Valley of the Shadow of Death. RE PARRY PALES. My fact drew near the valley-I could hear The flow of Jordan through the mists that hide;

For angels walked beside. The tender Summer birds had southward flown. The flowers lain down to sleep until the Spring; Of this chill earth I, too, had weary grown, In brighter climes would sing.

I know the flowers would wake again and smile, The birds build in the liles by the floor: And I should go, be missed a little while, But come again no more.

Yet turned I not for tears or outstretched arms, Not for the anguish of my only child; The Heavenly City, with its untold charms, Beyond the river smiled. The gates of pearl! I saw their light sfar-

Some "gone before" awaited me within; No restless yearnings their sweet rest to marge No sickness, sorrow, sin. But the life angel beckoned me away-With slow, weak steps I followed where he led;

Not yet, he said, thy rest awhile delay, There's work for thee instead. The April rain makes music on the roof, The April buds are bright'ning into flowers; And, God's love for the warp and for the woof,

Time weaves for me the hours.

O heart, take courage! Some threads dark as night, Beside the sunbeams in life's web are wove; But they are needful in thy Father's sight, Are tokens of His love.

John Grigg, of Philadelphia. the founder of the well-known publishing house of Grigg & Elliott, and G. E. & Co., of which Messrs. Lippincott, Grambo & Co. are the worthy successors, has favored us with some points which his experience has taught him it is important for men commencing business to observe. His life, it may be remarked, is another encouraging example of what integrity, united to talent, energy, and good fortune, may hope to accomplish under our free institutions. Beginning the world an orphan farmer boy, he has accumulated, as public opinion says, a fortune, and though rich, he has shown that he understands what few rich men ever have understood-that is, the art of using money wisely, as well as getting it. In a conversation with him the other day; he expressed the opinion that endorsing is a cause of one-half the failures in business, and stated the remarkable fact that he never had asked a man to endorse a note for him in his life. One great reason of his success, I have been informed, among many others, was his power of inspiring confidence—confidence in his honesty and ability. Many of his customers dealt with him for years without once inquiring the price of an article. He says of the complete business man, as Gen Butler said in his eulogy of Calhoun of the statesman, "he should have in an eminent degree the self-sustaining power of intellect. He must possess energy and enterprise, with perseverance and great mental determination. To inspire confidence, which after all is the highest of earthly qualities, is a mystical something which is felt but cannot be described." But to his opinion in his own language. 1. Be industrious and economical— Waste neither time nor money in small and useless pleasures and indulgences If the young can be induced to begin to save, the moment they enter on the paths of life, the way will ever become easier to them, and they will not fail to attain a competency, and that without denying themselves any of the real necessaries and comforts of life. Our people are certainly among the most improvident and extravagant on the face of the earth. It is enough to make the Merchant of the old which are in fact the basis of all successful enterprise,) start back in astonishment to look at the ruthless waste and extravagence of the age and people. reliance. Do not take too much advice. and steer his own ship. In early life every one should be taught to think for himself. A man's talents are never brought out until he is thrown to some extent upon his own resources. If in every difficulty he has only to run to his principal, and then implicitly obey the directions he may receive, he will never acquire that aptitude of perception, and that promptness of decision, and that firmness of purpose which are absolutely necessary to those who hold important stations. A certain degree of independent feeling is essential to the full development of the intellectual character. 3. Remember that punctuality is the mother of confidence. It is not enough that the Merchant fulfils his engagements, he must do what he undertakes precisely at the time, as well as in the way he agreed to. The mutual dependence of merchants is so great, that their engagements like a chain, which, according to the law of Physics is never stronger than its weakest link, are oftener broken through the weakness of others than their own. But a prompt fulfilment of engagements is not only of the utmost importance, but it enables others to meet their own engagements promptly. It is also the best evidence that the Merchant has his affairs well ordered—his means at command, his forces marshalled, and "everything ready for ac-
