love the public-its interests and its welfare,and more especially that part which constitutes my own community. That is nearest my heart, and I rejoice when I see public-spirited individuals striving to give the proper tone to our sentiments and characters, and pointing out the way by which we may avoid the shoals and the quicksands, the trials, troubles and dangers of a thoughtless life. No doubt we have in our midst such persons one, I know, we have, who has done much for our community by directing our minds in a practical way to such things as tend to our temporal and spiritual improvement refer to that able correspondent of your paper, who, by his " Letters to the Young Men of Altoona," was the means of inaugurating the

Knowing that that gentleman possesses not that spirit which would spurn a suggestion made one in humble life, and feeling, too, that he bv has the ability to improve it, I beg leave to offer this one :- Would it not be a good idea for the author of those deservedly popular letters to the young men of Altoona, to write a series in the same practical and earnest manner to the young women of this place?
