Select Poetry.

The Infidel and his Daughter.

(Suggested by reading a newspaper paragraph, describing the scene between the Jews of Sodom and his daughter, on the day of her death, when she sat the stern infidel, whose wife he would have her do—his or her mother's.)

"The damp of death are cooling fast, My father, pray say now!"

"The past is all that comes has fled, And I do not know how to say now!"

"To this dark future which I vainly see, My father, say now!"

"Tell me, my father, in this hour, To whose stern faith I die."

"In faith! I've watched the fearful malle, And heard thy father's voice."

"Where'er the Christian's humble hope, And heard thy father's voice."

"I've heard thy father's voice, And heard thy father's voice."

"I've heard thy father's voice, And heard thy father's voice."

"I've heard thy father's voice, And heard thy father's voice."

"I've heard thy father's voice, And heard thy father's voice."

"I've heard thy father's voice, And heard thy father's voice."

"I've heard thy father's voice, And heard thy father's voice."

"I've heard thy father's voice, And heard thy father's voice."

"I've heard thy father's voice, And heard thy father's voice."

"I've heard thy father's voice, And heard thy father's voice."

"I've heard thy father's voice, And heard thy father's voice."

"I've heard thy father's voice, And heard thy father's voice."

"I've heard thy father's voice, And heard thy father's voice."

"I've heard thy father's voice, And heard thy father's voice."

"I've heard thy father's voice, And heard thy father's voice."

"I've heard thy father's voice, And heard thy father's voice."

"I've heard thy father's voice, And heard thy father's voice."
