PROPLE'S PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY.-We have received an advertisement and circular from the above company, making us a very fair offer to do a little for the furtherance of an object so much to be desired as a railroad to the with my guide, Mr. Alexander Laverty, who is Pacific, but for the reason that we are not satisfied with the information received and the reliability of the persons whose names are given as officers of the Company, we have not published the advertisement. We would not care much if, in the event of our publishing it, they would play us a "Yankee trick," but we do not want to be the instruments through which any of our over, in order to make the more money during readers should be deceived and swindled. When the day. We first take the circuit in a boat. we are satisfied of the honesty of the intentions of those who are managers of this affair and guide, and afterward to visit them by land .their ability to push it along, we will gladly give | Not until 1693 was public attention called to the thens all the help we can.

RAILBOAD WAR .- The Chicage Democrat says that the competition between the several railroad and steamboat lines connecting that city with St. Paul, Minnesota, has again culminated in an open war. Bates of fare have been put down to the figure of five dollars and a half for first class passage from Chicago to St. Paul. to Chicago the passenger can make his own terms, being taken for three dollars, or for nothing, as he chooses. The steamers charge nothing from St. Paul to Dunleith, or to the other railroad termini on the river. A man could now travel cheap between these points, if he was willing to run the risk of being blown up on a steamboat, or landing at the foot of an embankment with two or three railroad cars on top of him.

THE LOST BOY FOUND. -The son of Mr. David Buchanan, of Newport, Perry county, Pa., who had been enticed from his home a few weeks since, by a straggling Yankee, was found in Clearfield county by his father. The vagabond who had taken the boy, had been giving some theatrical performances in that county, assisted by the boy, and finally succeeded in picking a man's pocket, and then left for parts unknown, and also leaving the boy behind. Mr. Buchanan having ascertained by a boatman the direction they had taken, went in pursuit of them, and finally found the boy as above, and brought him home, perhaps a better and wiser boy.

SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE .- We learn from the Harrisburg Telegraph that Col. J. J. Patterson. member elect from Juniata county, will be a candidate for Speaker of the House. We have known the Col. long and intimately, and are satisfied that he has the ability to make a good presiding officer, combining experience with quick perceptive faculties, inflexible resolutions and presence of mind amid difficulties. We wish the Cal. success, believing that on the score of services to party, as well as qualifications for the office, he deserves it.

THANKSGIVING.—Governor Packer has issued a proclamation appointing Thursday, November 29th, as a day of public thanksgiving and prayer to Almighty God, for the mercies he has shown us and the blessings he has showered upon us, as a people, during the past year. It is believed that the day will be universally obherved throughout the State, and we hope that the business men of Altoona will close their places on that day, and that all our citizens will desist from labor and observe the day in a becoming manner.

REFUSE THEM.—The telegraph announces the circulation of some $800,000 in counterfeit bills on the Boon County Bank, Indiana. The notes are printed from the genuine plate, but the signatures are forged. The officers of the bank were interested in the forgery and have all been arrested. Our readers who would be on the safe side should by all means refuse the bills of

STUDENTS QUARTERLY. - This is the title of a little work, of some 82 pages, issued quarterly by Geo. F. McFarland, principal of McAlisterville Academy, Juniata County. It contains articles from the pens of the students attending the Academy, many of which are worth reading, It is published at the low price of 35 cents per

The Ladies Home Magazine for November surpasses, in richness and interest, all previous numbers. It denotes prosperity, and most certainly it deserves it. T. S. Arthur and Virginia F. Townsend could get up an attractive book themselves without the assistance of their able cosps of contributors. Price $2 per annum.

LETTER FROM IRELAND. GIANT'S CAUSEWAY, COUNTY ANTHEM, September 15, 1860. Mussus. Editors: -- In my letter of the 12th said I would in my next give a description of the Giants Causeway, Dunluce Castle, Carricks-Reed, &c. I did not think of writing until next week, but since I start to Liverpool tomorrow, I thought it prudent to write my letter to-day, finish it to-night, and have it ready to send from Liverpool by a friend who goes by the Steam Ship, City of Glasgow. So this will account for my writing two letters in so short a time. I spent one day at the Causeway, one at Dunluce Castle, and the third I went to see Carrick-a-Reed, Bally Castle and other places of interest. Well, the Causeway is situated at the northern part of Ireland, 2 miles from Bushmills. I got into a car, paid a sixpence, and was landed at the front door of the Causeway Hotel -which is nothing more nor less than a public robbery. I was hungry, and ordered dinner. All hotels are kept upon the European method, . c. you must order what you want to eat, and you get nothing else but what you have ordered. Well, when it came, I eat what was before me and could get no more; and they charged for seven, at least the bill looked so. I would caution all who visit the Causeway to get a lunch at Mrs. Reids, in Bushmills, take it with them, and never set your foot inside of the Causeway Hotel; if you do, they will charge you for every step you take, and also for the time the waiter consumes in counting them. After I secured what was set down as a dinner. I. in company employed by Lord Antrim at a stated salary, proceeded to view the Causeway; and here I would say, guides are plenty, but if any of the Altoonaians wish to go to see this great curiosity, secure the services of the guide above named, and you will see all and receive a more minute description of all, while others will burry you and have the various objects pointed out by the Giant's Causeway, since which time the district has been visited by thousands of tourists, among whom were some of the leading scientific men of the world. To form a conception of the appearance of this extraordinary work of nature, we must suppose a wild rock shore, with here a shoal, and there a beating cliff, alternating with deposit of debris. But the majority of our rocks in cliffs are deposited in layers one above another, whereas these are composed of perpendicular columns, some five, some six sided, and though seperate, fitting so closely together as to exclude even in some places a sheet of paper .-The exposed end of these columns form the Causeway, their entire length in other places forming ribbed or fluted crags. Nor are the pillars themselves continuous, but composed of several pieces fitted together by convex and conangular pillar throughout the whole extent of the three Causeway's. It stands near the east side of the Grand Causeway. There are but three pillars of nine sides; one of them is situated in the Honey Comb, and the others not far from the triangular pillars just noticed. The total number of four and eight sides bear but a small proportion to the entire mass of pillars, of which it may be safely computed that ninetynine out of one hundred have either five, six or seven sides. These columns, I am told, are composed chemically of about one-half flinty earth, one-quarter iron, and one-quarter clay and lime. They are plutonic in their origin, that is, formed by a perfect fusion of the ingredients into one mass, which in cooling has cracked or crystalized into regular forms, as starch will in drying. We walk over the heads of some forty thousand columns, (for this number has been counted by some curious and leisurely persons,] all beautifully cut and polished, formed of such neat pieces so exactly fitted to each other, and so cleverly supported, that we might fancy we had before us the work of ingenious human artificers, and yet, what we behold is the result of the immutable laws of nature, acting without any apparent object, and by a process which must remain a mystery forever to our understanding. We got into the boat in Cow Bay and sailed out into the angry ocean. The first we we come to is Portcoon Cave, about a half a mile west of the Causeway. It can be visited either by land or water. Like most other caves, it has no striking peculiarity, and is merely interesting as a cave. The echo produced by a musical instrument is said to be delicious, while that of loaded gun or small cannon is tremendous.-The story goes that this cave was inhabited by a hermit giant, who, having taken a solemn oath never to touch food brought to him by human hands, was fed by seals, who carried him prosays "Where is your letter?" so I must close it visions in their mouths. Dunkerry Cave is one which can only be entered by water. The entrance is tolerably regular, and these caves all somewhat resemble a gothic arch. This cave is situated to the west of Portcoon. Perhaps the most peculiar circumstance connected with this cave, is the rising of the water within in response to the swell of the ocean, which upon this coast is at all times heavy, and as each successive wave rolls into the cave, the surface rises so slowly and awfully that a nervous person would be apprehensive of a ceaseless increase in the elevation of the waters until they reached the summit of the cave. Of this, however, there need not be the most distant apprehension, the roof being 60 feet above the high water mark. There is still another cave, which a resort for wild pigeons and other birds, both of sea and land, that go into this cave to build nests and hatch out their young. Passing the beautiful little bay of Portnabaw. we gradually gain sight of the Steucans, two peculiar hills which divide the bays Portuabaw and Port Ganniay. A little way further we came to the Giant's Well, a little hole in the basaltic flooring which is filled with clear fresh water. The legend which tells of the giant or gidressed up in a suit of new type, and now makes ants who lived in this wild retreat have of nea decidedly nest appearance. Capt. Smith gets cessity furnished every means of subsistance a good sized calf of ours that had been running deep it would be hard to refuse them a draught of pure cold water, and we accordingly find this little pool dubbed the giants well. Here you will be met by a very old man, who will offer you a cup of water from this well, and if you wish he will also offer a glass of what is known as Bushmills whiskey, said to be the best in the world, all this he will give you for tepence ha- Lincoln gains 71 over Curtin in Cambria permy, i. a five cents. The Causeway is divided into three songues, the Little, the Middle, and the Grand Causeways. It would be impossible to give anything like a correct idea of the Causeway and its accompaning wonders by description, so that the reader might see it as I did; may, it appears to me that while writing I am detracting from its grandeur by offering to pic- coluture it before the reader. I was lost in admiration. The legend of the Causeway is :-- A certain giant, by name Fin M'Coul, was the Champion of Ireland, and felt very much aggrieved at the insolent boasting of a certain Calcdonian giant, who offered to beat all that came before | Mauch Chunk 126 maj. for Lincoln. him, and even dared to tell Fin that, if it weren't for the wetting of himself, he would swim over and give him a drubbing. Fin at last applied to the King, who, perhaps, not daring to question the doings of such a weighty man, gave him leave to construct a Causeway right across to Scotland, in which the Scot walked over and fought the Irishman. Fin turned out victor, and with an amount of generosity quite becoming his Hibernian descent, kindly allowed his former rival to marry and settle in Ireland. which the Scot was loath to do, seeing that at that time living in Scotland was none of the best, and every body knew that Ireland was the richest country in the world. Since the death of the giants, the Causeway, being no longer wanted, has sunk under the sea; only leaving portion of itself visible here, a little at the Island of Rathlin, and the portals of the grand gate in Staffa. The Giants Gateway and Loom, jority. seen on turning to leave the Causeway, are composed of a series of colums, the perpendicular length of which are exposed to view. The Giant Organ is a similar object, but more beautiful than either. It forms no part of the Causeway, but is placed apart in the mountain, and consists of a number of large pillars, declining on either side to shorter and shorter ones-like gives Lincoln a majority. the strings of a harp, and we might really imagine a Giant Organist sitting playing at it, especially as the basaltic pillars, when struck give forth a metalic ring. The Legend says, this organ is played every Christmas, and the Causeway dances around three times, and the tune played is "St. Patrick's day in the morning." Portnoffer Bay is passed, from which the Shepherd's Path leads over the cliff to a country perfectly level and grass grown, presenting a strange contrast to the iron bound coast -Next we came to the Giants Amphitheatre .-The form is so exact half a circle, that no architest could have possibly made it more so, and the cliff slopes at precisely the same angle all round to the centre. Round the upper part runs a row of columns 80 feet high, then comes a broad rounded projection, like an immense Hampshire have all gone for Lincoln by threatened, but your remedy has destroyed the disease and bench, for the accommodation of the giant large majorities. guests of Fin McCoul, then again a row of pilbench, and so down to the bottom, where the | 000 majority. water is enclosed by a circle of black boulder stones, like the limits of the Arena. This is a large majority. scene, no one can say too much about. It is said the great Roman Amphitheatre is not to be compared to this-indeed. I think all any writer could say about this place must remain far behind the truth. The Giant's chimney-tops are Altoona, E. W., three isolated pillars standing on a promontory -the fallest of them is about 45 feet in height. It is said that one of the ships belonging to Spanish Armada was driven into the coast by Gaysport, stress of weather, and in the mist took these isolated columns, there more numerous, for the towers of Dunluce, and wasted their powder in firing at them. Port-na-Spania, the bay at the west end of which these Sentinels are placed, was, it is reported, the scene of the loss of one or more of the Spanish vessels, and certainly no coast could be more likely to destroy whatsoever sailed incautiously upon it. Next we see the Priest and his flock; the nursing child, or the old woman with her nurse-very much like it. Next we come to a collection of rocks, large and small-one of them is crowned. This group is called the King and his Nobles. But, Messrs. Editors, my letter is longer now than I usually dlers, three carpenters, three post offices, three months, and years. Sufferers, try it! write, and I am not half done with a description crazy men and three over 75 years old. There of the Causeway. I wish to do it justice, yet I is not a lawyer, doctor, or loafer in it, nor a grocannot unless I write much more concerning it. Well, I will close this letter, promising that in my next I will finish my description of this great wonder, and then we will go to Dunluce, the Skerries and the White Rocks, and. if possible, we will get to Carriek-a-Reed, &c. We will, letter. Here comes my friend, Mr. Jones, who

Fatal Railroad Accident. - Some days ago an accident, resulting in the death of a man named McIntosh, occurred near Portage station on the Pennsylvania Railroad. McIntosh, it appears, had gone to a spring along the Railroad, and in the vicinity of the station, for the purpose of procuring a drink, and after quenching his thirst, stepped upon the track with the intention of returning, but seeing a freight train eastward coming towards him, he passed to the other track without noticing the Express train approaching in an opposite direction, and which came upon and crushed him to death almost incannot be entered at all, on account of the sunkstantly.
