Stretching out my hand, I tried to feel for the wall of the tunnel, shuddering as I thought it would meet me clammy and stone-cold, like the hands of a corpse .--But I could not reach it. Was it the other side? I passed over to try. Hush? What was that? I drew back my arm instinctively, and sunk down a helpless mass on my seat again. Do you know what it was, reader, that I heard then? It was the snort of a distant engine .---Everywhere before me I saw the gaze of two ferocious eyes, like the eyes of a wild beast in his den, and I knew that every snort was bringing the monster steadily closer. Nearer still. Another minuteless-and where should I be? Mutilated fragments of a human body once my own. whirling away in all directions, rose up to answer that question as it passed through my mind. Nearer still. It takes but a second, say the wise and learned, to bring before a man his whole life; but in that strange moment, instinct as it was, with a horrible and fascinated excitement I saw only the ferocious eyes, and heard the voice of my young brother, dead long years ago, calling upon me to come and save him, as he was wont to do in his delirium. Nearer still-and the earth quivered beneath me, and thunder filled my ears. There was a whirling rush, a quick wind, and then the roar going off into the distance again. When I could think of myself, I found that I was sitting doubled up, shrinking as a man would from a threatened blow, and my hands were clenched till I felt the smart of the nails. in my flesh. The train had chanced to be on the other line of rails, or I had not been sitting here now to write my adventure. An engine was dispatched to bring up the missing carriage, as soon as the fact of sits having been left behind was discovered, and thus your correspondent was rescued from his dreadful and frightful situation.

A one-legged orator, named Jones, was pretty successful in bantering an Irish man, when the latter asked him : "How did you come to lose your leg ?"
