Hob Law.

The destruction of several printing offices, by mobs, has caused much to be said and written lately, in reference to mob law. Knowing the dangerous character of mobs, we are opposed to men taking the law into their own hands, nomatter how aggravating the case may be. When once started, they will not always stop where those who incited them intended they should; and by their extension the innocent, are at likely to suffer as the guilty. It is more easy to start a riot than to stop it. Good intentions interposed in the way of rioters are likely to be mistaken for opposition, and the person interposing them subjected to the indignation of the crowd. We prefer the peaceful and lawful manuer of abating nuisances and disposing of dangerous personages. The exigencies of a case may, in some instances, appear to demand something more hasty and severe than the slow process and proverbial leniency of the law, but it is best always to keep on the side of law. Could laws be so framed as to govern the The cology on the character of the ostensible edifixed up again. The Seventy-Sixth Pa. and presides of men then would there be no need of passions of men, then would there be no need of courts, lawyers, juries, etc., and nothing that would excite to passion would pass between man and man: but the fact that to every law passed is attached a penalty to be meted out to those who violate it, shows that laws do not restrain men, and that those who arouse the passions of others are not safe, simply because there is a law forbidding assault and battery or destruction of property, but that they may expect chastisement not provided for by law. Human nature generally governs in case of insult or injury, and all the laws are, for the time being, disregarded by the insulted party. To cultivate a respect for the laws of the land should be the aim of all, but no one should attempt to hide behind them and throw stones at his neighbor. If he does so, the result most likely will be, that human nature will break the law if not the head of the one who throws the

In cases of insult or injury the law of nature, which is resentment or revenge, scarcely ever stops to inquire whether it agrees with the laws of the land, or what may be the consequences of following out its teachings. The sympathy existing between man and man, and the natural tendencyto take sides with one or the other of contending parties, helps to swell the turnult, and the greater the number in the contest, the less regard is there for the laws. We might extend our remarks on show our point, viz: "that there is no effect in carrying out its effects. While, therefore, we disprove and condemn mob law, we think that all should strive to avoid giving cause for mobs, since it is impossible to control human nature in resenting insults and injuries; and especially should this be the case at this time, when our country is engaged in a war for life or death, and men are in a fever heat of excitement. Let opinions be given in courteous language, supported by arguments, and men be won by persuasion. The use of sarcasms and calling of vulgar names repulses rather than attracts, and leads to riot and bloodshed. Let there be no cause for mobs and we will have none of the effects.

War News

We are still without news of the fall of Vicksburg. Finding that he could not take the town by essault, Gen. Grant has commenced a regular siege. At last accounts he had one hundred and fifty large guns in position and had commenced shelling the enemies fornifications and the town. No fighting of any account has occurred within the past week. Both armies are within their hments, almost secure until a breach is effected in one or the other. Gen. Johnston has not vet crossed the Big Black river to attack Gen. Grant's rear. From all accounts it appears that he is still at Jackson. Gen. Grant is still confident of capturing Vicksburg and does not fear for his rear.

On Friday last Gen. Howe's division of Gen Hooker's army crossed the Rappahannock, below Fredericksburg, and had a skirmish with Longstreet's division. Gen. Howe succeeded in carrying the first line of rifle pits and taking e numeer of prisoners. The adventure was a reconnoisance to find out the position of Lee's army. Whether anything further will be attempted we cannot tell. The object of the reconnoisance was attained and the position of the rebels discovered.

Nothing new or important from any other department.

The editor of the Bellefonte Watchma wants to be a martyr, but cannot find any person in his neighborhood who will condescend to hit him or molest his types. For several months past his paper has teemed with the most scurrilous articles on the administration, and contemptible allusions to the actions of the Union army, yet such is his insignificance where he is known that no attention is paid to his ravings. Failing to obtain notoriety by endeavoring to excite Union men around him to tear out his office, he opens his pop-gun upon those who "gutted" the Huntingdon Menitor office, hoping to get some of them to go over and do theseme to him. The concern must sink. If his course be continued, but he would like to the torm has, so that he might call upon his sympathisms, so the Monitor did, for material aid, and make a good thing out of it. Won't somebody take pity on the editor of the Watchman?

Should we ever be guilty of a flagrant viciation of the law, we will not expect the law to be suspended lest our arrest should bring a calamity upon any member of our family. The course of Vallandigham was, in the opinion of the officers of the law, dangerous to the peace and welfare of the comnunity, and it was their duty to arrest him and place him where he could do no injury, or compel him to suffer for violations of law and order, ithout considering what offect it might upon his wife or family. Having a wife of such efinement, and the dethronement of her reason being the result of his arrest, only throws more responsibility upon Vallandigham and makes him the greater villain. But we need not pursue this subject further, as every reasonable man must at once observe that upon Vallandighan, and not the authorities, rests the responsibility of the calamity to his wife. We are surprised that sensile men will resort to such weak arguments to make political capital, as that, and not sympathy for Vallandighan or his wife, is the object.

The Bombardment of Vicksburg.

A correspondent writes on May 22d, from the rear of Vicksburg: This is the fourth day the army of Gen. Grant has lain around the intrenchments of Vicksburg. Within that time there have been daily battles and continual cannonade. At least two thousand of our soldiers have been placed hors du combat, killed and wounded, in the several charges ordered against the earthworks. It was would order a charge simultaneously along the Dean were chosen Senatorial conferees to meet entire line of works. Late in the evening the conferees from Cambria and Clearfield counties commanders of the different corps, divisions and brigades received their orders and prepared to of 60 cts. per pound, upwards. execute them. The order contemplated a fierce cannonade from daylight until ten o'clock, but gunboats and mortars lying in front of Vicksburg tept up a continual fire, and dropped their flery ssengers right and left without distinction.-During this bombardment several buildings were set on fire by the exploding shells. It is impossile to estimate the damage occasioned by thus dropping into Vicksburg these heavy eleven and Steele and Tuttle, on the right, were heavily engaged, and the former is reported to have lost nearly a thousand men.

THE ARMY OPENS FIRE. At eight o'clock this morning, according to programme, the cannonading began, and contined with scarcely a moment's intermission, along the entire line until ten o'clock. From every hill top in front of the enemy's works cannon were placed, and the fiery tempest raged fearfully.-Guns were dismounted, embrasures torn out, parapers destroyed, and caissons exploded. It was a fearful demonstration. The enemy were powerless to reply; for our line of skirmishers were pushed up close to the enemy's works, and unerringly picked off the gunners whenever they attempted to work the guns.

NEW YORK, June 1.—The steamer Shelldrake. form Havana on the 26th ult., arrived this afternoon. There is nothing new from Hayana. is reported at Havana that the yellow fever has broken out among the French in Mexico. An extra of the Havana Diario, of the 26th, received per the steamer Shelldrake, reports the arrival at Havana of the French steamer Davine, from Neva Cruz. with important despatches from General Forey. announcing the occupation of Peubla by the force under his command. The prisoners include General Ortega and twenty-three other generals 900 minor officers and 17,000 men.

It appears that, on the 19th General Forey opened with a heavy artillery on Fort Johemempuacan, and on the 17th a breach was offected. The French troops then moved on an assault, and after a desperate resistance, entered into the Plaza, when Ortega surrendered unconditionally On the 20th one devision of the French army
