non our table on Friday last, a shad recollected, as was hinted when describing the due that conveys the tears to the nose, that the orifice of that duct, just within the nostril, and on the inner side of it, has been mistaken for a chancrons ulcer. This orifice is on the continuation of the common skin of the muzzle which runs a little way up the nostril, while the ulcer of glanders is on the proper membrance of the nose above The ine of separation between the two is evident on When ulcers begin to appear on the membrane of the nose, the constitution of the horse is soon vidently affected. The patient loses fleshelly is tucked up-his coat unthrifty, and readily coming off-the appetite is impaired-the strength -cough, more or less urgent, may be heardthe discharge from the nose will be discolored, bloody, offensive to the smell—the ulcers in the nose will become larger and more numerous, and the air-passages being obstructed, a grating, choking noise will be heard at every act of breathing. There is now a peculiar tenderness about the forehead. The membrane lining the frontal sinuses is inflamed and ulcerated, and the integument of the forehead becomes thickened and somewhat swelled. Farcy is now superadded to Glanders, MAIL LETTINGS .- The following awards of mail or Glanders has degenerated into Farcy, and more At or before this time little tumors appear about the muscles, and face, and neck, following the course of the veins and the absorbents, for they run side by side : and these the tumors soon nice rate. Tumors or buds, still pursuing the path of the absorbents, soon appear on the inside of the thighs. They are connected together by a corded substance. This is the inflamed and enlarged lymphatic ; and ulceration quickly follows the appearance of these buds. The deeper seated absorb ents are next affected : and one or both of the hind legs swell to a great size, and become stiff, and hot, and tender. The loss of flesh and strength is more marked every day. The membrane of the nose becomes of a dirty livid color. The membrane of the mouth is strangely palid. The eye is infiltrated with a yellow fluid; and the discharge from the nose becomes more profuse and insuffer-ably offensive. The animal presents one mass of putrifaction, and at last dies, exhausted. There are peculiarities about the enlargement of the submaxillary glands, already referred to, which adherent nor much enlarged. Glanders have often been confounded with strangles, and by those who ought to have known better. Strangles are peculiar to young horses. The early stage resembles common cold, with some degree of fever and sore throat--generally with distressing cough, or at least frequent wheezing; and when the enlargement appears beneath the jaw, it is not a single small gland, but a swelling of the whole of the substance between the jaws, growing harder towards the centre, and, after awhile ap-pearing to contain a fluid, and breaking. In strangles, the membrane of the nose will be intensely red, and the discharge from the nose profuse and purulent, or mixed with matter almost from the first. When the tumor has burst, the fever will abate, and the borse will speedily get well. Should the discharge from the nose continue, a it sometimes does, for a considerable time after the horse has recovered from strangles, there is no cause for fear. Simple strangles need never de-generate into glanders. Good keep, and small does of tonic medicine, will gradually perfect the cure.

far more frequent cause of glanders than contagion. The air which is necessary to respiration is changed and, empoisoned in its passage through the lungs. and a fresh supply is necessary for the support of life. That supply may be sufficient barely to support life, but not to prevent the vitiated air from again and again passing to the lungs, and produ- Philadel'a cing irritation and disease. The membrane of the nose, possessed of extreme sensibility for the purposes of smell, is easily irritated by this poison, and close and ill ventilated stables oftenest witness the ravages of glanders. Professor Coleman relates a case which proves to demonstration the rapid and fatal agency of this cause. "In the expedition to Quiberony the horses had not been long on hoard the transports before it became necessary to shut down the hatchways for a few hours; the consequence of this was, that some of them were Eastern Way..... Western Way..... Western Through suffocated, and that all the rest were disembarked either glandered or farcied." The injurious gasses arising from the dung, urine etc., in badly cleaned stables, are also powerful sources of the mischief. Glanders may be produced by anything that inures, or for a length of time acts upon and weakens the vital energy of this membrane. They have been known to follow a fracture of the bones of the nose. They have been the consequence of violent catarrh, and particularly the long continued discharge from the nostrils, of which we have spoken. They have been produced by the injection of stimulating and acrid substances up the nostril. Evedeserve particular attention. They are rarely large rything that weakens the constitution generally except at first, or hot, or tender; but are charac

Among the causes of glanders are want of reguterized by a singular hardness, a proximity to the jaw-bone, and frequently, actual adhesion to it. lar exercise, over-exertion, and the stimulating and debilitating cordials administered by senseless The adhesion is produced by the inflammatory ac grooms.

Every exciting cause of disease exerts its chief and worst influence on the membrane of the nose, ing on the same side with the nostril whence the discharge proceeds, afford proof not to be controand there is not another disease which may not lay the foundation of glanders. A long time may clapse before it appears, but when at length the whole frame becomes excited or debilitated in some way, this debilitated portion is the first to yield to the attack

Several strongly marked instances are on record showing the connection between the attack of this disease and exposure to the dampness of brick and stone stables, the walls of which were not yet dry, and in others subject to damp exhalations. There is no doubt that glanders, or a predisposition to glanders, is sometimes hereditary.

Glanders are highly contagious. If the discharge from the nostrils of a glandered horse is rubbed on a would, or on a mucous surface, like the nostrils, it will produce a similar disease. If the division between two horses were sufficiently high to prevent all smelling and snorting at each other, and contact of every kind, and they drank not out of the same pail, a sound horse might live for years, uninfected, by the side of a glandered one. The matter of glanders has been mixed up into a ball and given to a healthy horse without effect. Some horses have caten the hay left by these that were glandered, and no had consequences followed; but others have been speedily infected.

The glanderous matter must come in contact with
