All history, ancient and modern, conclusively demonstrates this great fact—that the civil faids and brois and final downfal of most aovernments that have been blotted out of existence, have been caused mainly by an unnatural collision between the masses secking their rights and what was denominated Divine nights and privileges. Bigoted religious and church dignaturies have almost invariably arrayed themselves against freedom and anarchy and bloodshed too, often followed in the train of these clashing interests. The sontiment we call "patriotism" is the principle power that controls the people in all successful governments. Without this feeling, predominant in the masses, the best and purest efforts of government becomes paratized for good.

Mr. Benedict said that labor was the foundation upon which the structure of society rested-and being most indispensable, ought' therefore to be most valued. He spoke at length of the relations existing between employer and the employed, and of the duties which they owe one another. He maintained the dignity of labor, and the necessity of a manly and true life ; and urged & thorough knowledge of whatever task is undertaken, and the principles of Demogracy and friends of honesty in the performance of it, as being essential to the self-respect and social cleration of the laboring man. The remarks of Mr. B. were in his happiest vein -enriched with passages of genuine pathos, and a fund of quaint illustrations and racy anecdotes which called forth frequent bursts of applause. Max. GREEN, Esq., was next called for, and responded in an earnest address. Mr. Green had come there from his sick room, but in reply to the solicitation could not refrain from assuring his friends of his heartfelt sympathy. He dwelt upon the practicability of regulating and advaucing the prices of labor by organized effort, and glanced at the history of the progress which had been so made in this country and other parts of the world. He spoke of the great social wrong which gives to the manufacturers, merchants, and professional gentry the enjoyment of riches which have been created by the ill-paid toil of hard fisted artizans: and alluded to the fact that, in a fertile country like this, two hours out of the twen ty four of well directed labor, on the part of every healthy man and woman, would be nough to supply the whole population with the necessaries and comforts of life. It was argued that, were labor properly paid, it would be better for all classes -for the child of "uppertendom" who is sunk in effemtnacy and debased by luxury, and certainly better for the toiling thousands who are droups it, scarter for the bowed in hady and mind by constant work shilden 169.
