-I often notice things in and which page from paper to which I feel disposed to enotest. I have reference to publishing tales, anecdotes, be vinga it., which involve directly or indirectly, the nature, attributes or titles of the great God, who "will not hold him guilden who takes his name in wain."

For instance, I saw, not long since, and anecdote—as some would pall it—of a little boy who saked his motion if God was every where? She answered "cortainly." Next question-"Is he in my pocket?" "Yes my son, he is in your pocket. No, he is at mouther, for I have soot by mouther of the

Now this may appear to some, very mark and no douby with many who have no four of God before their eyes, it will "court a grin; but that boy should ling been taught better, and no many no beatlest and resence and majesty of the Eternal, can rold such profesity without shingdering! Is it not difficult swough to keep up a severence for Gods, and a morai taste in the community, even when every means of a religious and moral kind is laid under, contribution for that purpose ? And will it not be more difficult when these means are opposed by such stuff as is adapted to vitiate the moral some of children and wouth ?"

I know that editors sometimes excuse themselves, upon the ground of absence-that the devil did it—well, it looks like the work of a devil; or store generally they plead that they have people of all kinds and taston to please, but are they under obligations to cater for a signous taste, and do what will make the corrupt more corrupt! Must they without fail; gratily at ignorant unholy mind, at the expense of Jeborah's honor? A lively anoddolof or joke we do not object to at all we love it, but let not the life and fun of it consist in a desceration of the attributes of Lledger of holy things. Another thing very objectionable, butler which the printer is not altogether responsible is, the setting forth a more business matter by words which refer to an event the thought of which is enough to make the best tremble, and to strike the heart of the undonvorted sinner with terror. Take an instance—a man given notice that he is about to wind up his business; catts with all who have claims upon him to present them, and those indubted to him to come forward and sattle their accounts on or before such a day, if not, "the day of judgement will quickly come. " His literal meanligious, Miliant Manter, Commany Shich every thing is associated, terrible to man, would it not be better for the community, should the printer substitute Bome other language, even if the advertisor is silly and Manifest buidetputo a the his presidente un thus writing ?
