freels of autumn have chilled them unto death; Ambition, with its hollow promises, and gride with its dofty look have vanished arts. The world, with its deceitfulness, progenies, and alone, in its uttor destitution of all that time promised, it must start on its solemn journey across the valley of the shadow of death!

"Make no noise!" Let the tunult of life cease. Let no soined break the soul's communitor with itself, ere it, starts on its returnless flight. Trouble it not with the accent of sorrow. Let the tear stand still on the others of affliction; and let not the wailing of grief break the solemn silence of the distill second. Let it gather the accents that come within the shadows of eteruity, saying to it, Come home. The whispering of singels are in its ear; obstruct not their silvery voices by grosser sounds. A works, and the glory of the Most High is dawning around them. The white throne is glistening in the distance, and the whiterobed angols are beckening the weary spirit to its everlasting home. What is life that it should be clung to longer I What is the foys of the world that they should be regretted? What has earth to place before that spirit of man to tempt its stay or turn if them its sternal rest?
