There's a mossy shady valley, Where the waters wind and flow, And the duisies sleep in winter. 'Neath a coverlid of mow ; And violets, blue eved violets, Bloom in beauty in the poing, And the sunbeams kiss the wavelete Till they seem to lough and sing. But in autumn, when the sunlight Crowns the cedar-covered hill, Shadows darken in the valley-Shadows ominous and still. And the vellow loaves, like banners Of an Elfin's host that fled. Tinged with gold and royal purple,

Flutter sadly overhead. And those shadows, floomy shadows, fille'dim phantoms on the ground, Stretched their dreamy length forever On a daisy-covered mound: And I loved her, yes, I loved her,

But the angels leved her too, So she's sleeping in the valley. 'Neath the sky so bright and blue. And no slab of pallad marble
