THE DEMOCRATIC WATCHMAN.

BELLEFONTE, SEPTEMBER 24, 1857.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

INTEGRITY IN BUSINESS.—To ensure the success of an individual in mercantile, or indeed in any other business, and to win a name and credit among his fellow traders, as well as the community at large, there is no qualification so important for him to possess, and withal, so honorable as integrity.—Clothed with this invaluable virtue, his course is sure and comparatively easy; it is an emblem which will guide him upward and onward, amid the confidence and good will of all with whom his business leads him to associate; and, when made the standard of his actions, soon surrounds him with abundant credit, and many are eager to show the extent of their confidence in him. The young merchant or tradesman, who properly estimates the necessity and value of integrity, and allows it to hold a conspicuous place in all his acts—nay, makes it a rule to conduct—builds his foundation upon a basis that is immovable, and if properly followed must result in success and satisfaction. To start upon any other than this is committing your success to chance; and is hazarding too much, besides, perhaps, forfeiting all future claims upon your friends for want of a sufficient regard for integrity. The man of integrity, who is prompt in meeting his engagements, who never promises without having good reasons to suppose that he will be able to perform, and avoids recklessness in his business transactions, is always able to retain the confidence of men under almost any circumstances, so long as he adheres to his principles. If, through some unforseen accident, or loss, his business should be crippled, or even that he should be driven to bankruptcy, still his friends, knowing him to be a man of integrity, will appreciate the cause of his misfortune, and again start him upon the ladder, that he may clamber perhaps still higher than before. The only exception then will be found to this is in the vultures who court the society of business men only to fleece them, and, when the chance of doing that is gone, they depart also. Integrity, view it as you will, is an invaluable attribute of the merchant or tradesman, and although it may sometimes, for a moment appear to be in his way, when entering into competition with those who disregard it, yet, when the business of a man's life comes to be summed up, and an aggregate to be cast, it will surely happen that an individual has suffered by it, in a pecuniary point of view, but on the contrary, it is the sure producer of competency. In addition to all his gain, he retires with good name, which follows him through the remainder of his life, and descends as an heritage to his issue.

Success in business, of almost any kind, is sure to crown the labors of an upright and persevering man. This is the doctrine which experience teaches, and our own city has furnished many illustrations of the fact. One of our most eminent merchants, and others who have led in their business, could attribute their success to no other cause so much as to this one; and their career, profitable and honorable as it was, is an example which many of their juniors would do well to follow. Analyze the true qualities of a merchant or tradesman, and you will find that they concentrate in these two, integrity and perseverance. It is said that "fairness, vigilance, and steadiness" are the qualities of a tradesman properly so called, and that these combined are necessary appendages to the man of business, which is but confirming our proposition.

The routine of business life, when understood, and entered into as it should be, is much more simple and clear than many persons are wont to imagine, and it is just as easy to carry it on without resorting to chicanery and deception, as to indulge in it, besides being so much more honorable to all concerned. A man should start his business as he intends to pursue it, have but one plan of conducting it, and let that never be swerved from under any emergency; then, all persons being dealt with alike, they all have confidence in his representations, and give credence to his statements. Whereas, a person who is known to be in the habit of misrepresenting his goods and prices, and preaching one thing to one customer, another to another, and yet something else to a third, can enjoy the confidence of none. Even his most intimate customers will give way to suspicion, and frequently feel inclined to doubt whether they have not been deceived let the bargain be ever so fair.

Integrity in business is a jewel which every young merchant and manufacturer should strive to possess and cherish. He should adopt it at the commencement of his career, in all its various business, and with all its attendant attributes; then pursue it closely through life as the means of securing both honor and profit.

OBSCENE PAPERS.—An obscene newspaper, published in New York, entitled Venus Miscellany, circulates to a considerable extent in certain circles in this community. One of these filthy sheets was recently sent to a respectable young lady by some scoundrel, who, if discovered, will no doubt be severely chastised by the relatives of the lady so grossly insulted. The circulation of such a paper is a high offiance, both against law and morals, and we hope the Agent who receives and distributes them may be detected and punished. Of course, no respectable person would engage in so infamous an act. The Agent, whoever he may be, is an unprincipled scoundrel, and a poisoner of public morals. A whip of scorpions should be placed in the hands of every honest and virtuous man, "to lash the rascal naked through the world."

MARTIN STONE requests us to state that he has ordered a large quantity of flour from Pittsburg, which he will sell at the following prices, to wit: Superfine, $7,50; extra Superfine, 8,00. It is his intention to sell in small quantities to those who do not feel able to purchase a barrel.

OVER THE LEFT.

The Democrats Polked their opposition in '44 and although they were Taylored in '48 they Pierced them in '52, Buchted them in '56, and intend Packing the trunks of the opposition candidates for Governor, for a trip up Salt River on the second Tuesday of October next.

The New York Herald, a paper that strongly opposed the election of Buchanan, in its issue of the 16th ult, says that "the fair and conciliatory course adopted and pursued by Mr. Buchanan on Kansas affairs has attracted the confidence of the people."

Wm Forney has "popped" over to the Black Republicans. Read his letter in the Centre Democrat.

Absent—Our Junior. It is currently reported that he didn't sleep alone on last Tuesday night.

The Woolly-head meeting comes off to-day. Look out for squalls.

Democratic Meeting.

MESSRS EDITORS:—The Democratic meeting held in this place on last Friday evening was well attended. It was held in the School House, which was crowded. Lewis Peters was elected President, and John Bing Secretary.

Ira C. Mitchell Esq., addressed the people on the issues of the day, with great power and effect. His arguments were forcible, and his points well made. Many of the opposition were present and listened with attention throughout. How can they get over the arguments presented? That's the question.

Union Township will give an increased vote at the election.

Yours, Truly,
DEMOCRAT.
