Washington's Birth Day. The twenty-second of February, 1732, was indeed, an important epoch in the history of the World. Although nothing at that time attracted the public mind beyond ordinary nificant to the progressive principles of Republican institutions was the birth of one policy whose name is indellibly enstamped upon of morality and virtue from boyhood, those innate and ennobling traits began to develope themselves at that early period, and foreshadow an evidence of that greatness, the influence of which has since been mould. ing the destines of nations. Especially caparitated by nature to the adverse circumstances under which we labored, in the eventful period of the American Revolution, there is that in the character of Washington, which is an object of our constant admiration. The volumnious pages of antiquity the Americans had lost two forts. - Washington and Lee, with over two thousand men? Will the ever memorable campaign of 1777 be forgotten, when nearly three thousand of our soldiers were unfit for duty ? Does not the history of our army encamped at Valley Forge present a most deplorable picture of the "times that tried men's souls Here exhausted nature sank beneath its trials! Here the raging storms of winter, and the vicissitudes of our army almost crushed the waning but glorious cause of freedom! Here the blood-stained foot prints of our soldiers, left their impress on the frozen ice and snow Hopes that had been buoyed up by love of home and country, dissipated in the gloom that everywhere portended atarming consequences for the country's safety. Leading characters that had hitherto been faithful, faltered in their zeal, from which the most permicious influences were painfully apprehended Bills of credit had depreciated to one fourth their nominal value, and the necessaries of life could scarcely be procured upon any conditions whatever Great numbers of the soldiers descried, while others claimed to be discharged upon their expiring term of service, and who received official papers and returned disheartened to their
