Four BRIDGER, U. T., March 24, 1858. We have not been for the past three weeks without either news or excitement : that which has most eigrossed our attention was the arrival at Fort Bridger, as the storm of rain and snow of the 12th was ceasing, of a single horseman from the direction of Satt Lake City. He was so exhausted that the was unable own-te dismount, and could barely state he was from Salt Lake City. Capt. Robinson, who was in command of the garrison of the fort, with his characteris-tic knamess and generosity of feeling, with assistance lifted the 'strange' off his horse, took him to his own ted; his guest fell immediately into a deep steep, from which he did not wake un-til a late how the next morning.

This state of affairs happens about the time when they know more than the teacher or any body else, and when they do not hnow how very imporent they real not know how very ignorant they really are. This happily, in general, does not last very long Very, httle governing is required where the pupil makes any effort to do right --Some one must take the responsibility to di-rect the workings of the school, and the reet the workings of the reacher is expected to do it.
