Address of the Standing Committee to the Democratic Voters of Centre County.

The standing committee, deem this an oppropriate occasion to congratulate the Democratic voter text. The business of the county is something in which every tax payer is disconstingting the county is disconstingting to the county is disconstingting the county is disconstingting to the county in the county is disconstingting to the county is disconstingting to the county is disconstingting to the county in the county is disconstingting to the county is disconstingting to the county in the county is disconstingting to the county in the county is disconstingting to the county is disconstingting to the county in the county in the county is disconstingting to the county in the county in the county in the county is disconstingting to the county in the coun propriate occasion to congratulate the Democracy of the County, on the past and press the Board of Commissioners is important to the organization of the party through which our government is kept pure, entire, and

The settlement of the public accounts is a matter to which too little attention has re-more fully the fallacy, weakness and error of all past, present and prospective positions of the opposition. If men ever had cause to be proud of their alliances, and to rejoice at their own acts; well may the members of the old Democratic organization that dates promote the welfare of our government, County, State, and Nation. By united effort work together like n work together like men who love their country, and we have no fears of the result.

A Striking Portrait.

The artist who sketches likenesses for the New York Horald, has a patural talent for the business, or he would not have become so emmently successful in his vocation. The following, from that paper of a recent date is well drawn:

FORNEY AND THE PRESIDENT - THE GRUME FORKY AND THE PHESION TO THE CHI MILLINGS OF A DISCHARGED COOK.—It is a well known fact in social philosophy, that discharged domestics rarely speak well of the establishments from which they have been turned off. They always have some fault to find with their quondam employer. Some-times the fault is that he is not religious, or that he is not fashionable, or that he does not see company enough, or that the wages are low and the service hard, or that the butchling. It is a feature in the every day dy, of "high life below starts." And dy, of "high life below stairs." And, therefore, we were by no means surprised that the cook and bottle-washer of poor Pierce's kuchen cabinet, and who subsequently hold the same position for a short time in Mr. Buchanan's kitchen in the White House, should, have shown himself, the other day, at Tarrytown, is the colors that belong to discharged domestics.

No one can read the catalogue of complaints made by unfortunate Forney in his speech in Sleepy Hollow without being struck by the identity which it sore to the gruno-lings of the plush breeched Jeemses and Jenkinses, who receive their months wages in advance, with permission to find some other field for their talents. Forney was, an old and confidential dependent on the Sage old and confidential dependent on the Sage of Wheatland. He says himself that, from his very boyhood up, he had revered the good his very boyhood up, he had revered the good old man, and been ever on the alert to lend him any little humble peide of service that lay in his power to perform; and he admitsthat this fidelity and sleepless attention or his part, had jawakened in his employer's breast a feeling akin to friendship that he was, in fact, as is not unusual with extermed domestics, treated as one of the family. But in Forney's case, as in the case of many spoiled and pampered menials, there band of treatment made him vain. He grew too by for his breeches. He forgot his position, and instead of obeying his master, he presumed to dictate for him. Then came his faith. Mr. Buchanan knows too well the necessity of having a well managed household to tolerate impertunence on the part of any domestics.

And so he said to his man Forney, when he complained of some imagined me management of his household, management of his household, on, satisfies me, I think it may well satisfy you, satisfies me, I imsatisfies me, i think it may well askirsty you, Sir, if the change is, pleasing to me, I imagine you have no right to complain of it. But, sir, though I should be servy to part with a servant in whom I had such confidence, I can only say, that if you are dissatisfied, you may go to my stewarf, get a month's wages in advance, and seek elsewhere a place, that may be more in accordance with your new fangled notions."

That is the way Forney happened to be in the n B. Haskin. Hine illae lachrymotics in the the two few neonle of that one o'clock. Have a steak and omons ready for me." But badings apart, this speech of Forney's conveys a very good kies of the state, of the quarrel between the Administration and the bolters. These miserable political wire pullers had the folly to think that because they could manage corrupt primary elections and caucuses and State and general conventions, they therefore had a right to impose a gentleman in the fullest sense of the term, they were mistaken for once—they found in Mr. Buchanan to be sound lawyer and good schol-sonage from his prodecessor. He felt the Mr. Buchanati is very different sort of por-sonage from his predecessor. He felt the responsibility of his position, and so cut himself adrift from these miserable hucksters morously bids farewell to his readers:

"The sheriff is waiting for us in the next room, so we have no opportunity to be pathetic. Major Nab'em says we are wanted and must go. Delinquent subscribers, you have much to answer for. Heaven may forgive you but I never can.
