Select Poetry. ' I will Win Her yet."

BY RICHARD COM

"I will win her yet " I said with a sigh. As the lady of my love went by With a looks of scorn in her pretty eye So I bethought me of ways and means To win the lady in her ' teens ' I gathered cherries ripe and red , Strawberries fresh from the garden bed , I plucked from out the sunny spots Peaches and lucious approofs The lady apple round and rare I gove unto my fady fair She ate them all and more to boot, But she only replied to my ardent suit . She never could say she was fond of fruit

"I will win her yet". I said, with a sigh, As I dashed the toar drop from my eye, That started forth at so harsh reply, So I bethought me of other means To win the lary in her "teens," I gave her snow deeps pure and fair. To place within her raven hair, The violet and the moss rose, too Begeinmed with drops of pourly dew The passion-flower, all so rare, عجمية صف أسعه بللم بيادية بالنبية بمناث

But her only reply was, Q ' ye powers She never could say she was fond of flowers

'I will win her set' I said with a sigh Though I want you to notice I doin t cry, But held up my head uncommonly high As I said to myself. I know the mean To win the lady in her—teens
So I wrote her a somet in the 'News' I gave her a bonnet, a pair of shows, I bought her a vail to hide her face Eight or ten yards of Mechin lace. Gave her a dress pattern ample enough And a great big bundle of whalebone stuff She smothered me up in a warm cares-And murmured half love, half sportiven s the never could say she was found of dress'

MORAL Yow, those young fellows who read this poem Will soon find out I am trying to show em That not by the gift of flowers and fruit Need lover hope to win his suit , But tickle yourlady s whim with a dress the marmure that sweet monosyllable - 'yes
